The new bank people have purchased the Lemieux block and will have the desirable location on the corner, the room occupied by Schreiter's drug Store. Mr. Schreiter will move his stock one door to the south to the room occupied by the Sunshine store. Mr. Christiensen, proprietor of the Sunshine, will move his stock to the Reichel building.

The building to be occupied by the new bank is to be remodeled, the front changed, interior altered and vault and bank fixtures put in. It is expected that this work will be done so that the bank will open for business about the first of September.

BISHOP AT TERREBONNE

Terrebonne, Minn., July 19.

Last Monday, July 11, Bishop Corbet of Crookston paid his first visit to Terrebonne. Bishop Corbett was very much pleased with the reception tendered him. A delegation met him at Badger Creek and accompanied him to the church where he was received by the clergy.

The following day a high mass was sung by Rev. Fr. Roy of Lambert. An address to the Bishop was delivered by Rev. Fr. Vellieux and Bishop Corbett responded in perfectly good French.

Bishop Corbett administered the sacrament of confirmation to nearly three hundred children. The clergymen present were Fr. Fayolle of Red Lake Falls Fr. Theillon of Gentilly, Fr. Roy of Lambert, Fr. Tapin of Crookston. Bishop Corbett was accompanied by his chancellor, Fr. Wurm.

Monday, July 18, the remains of Joseph LaBlanc, who died suddenly Saturday night, were interred in the Terrebonne cemetery. Mr. Leblanc, before moving to Lambert, had been a pioneer of Terrebonne. Many friends from Lambert accompanied the remains to their last resting place.

LIND WON'T RUN

STATES REASON WHY HE SHOULD NOT HEAD DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

IN LETTER TO FRANK DAY

Disposition Exists Not to Accept Statement as Last Word—Believes He is Ineligible.

St. Paul.—John Lind's statement that he will not be a candidate on the Democratic ticket for the governorship is now in the hands of the Minnesota Democratic leaders.

Frank A. Day, chairman of the committee, to whom the letter was addressed, returned from Fairmont, and found the letter waiting for him. Mr. Day is consulting with his friends and the exact text of the letters will not be given out until the matter has been fully considered.

Mr. Lind takes the position, it is understood, that the law relative to the members of the board of regents being candidates for any other office during the time for which they have been elected, is inhibitive, and that it would be folly to nominate him under the conditions.

He recites his reasons for not being a candidate and expressed the opinion that some other man can be nominated and elected.

The Democrats are apparently not willing to accept Mr. Lind's declination as final. They say the law relative to the board of regents is not binding, because the constitution itself fixes the status of candidates for office, and that any law which assumes to override the constitution would not necessarily be binding.

Not Last Word.

Although the Democratic leaders are considerably taken off their feet by Mr. Lind's letter, they are not disposed, at once, to accept it as the last word.

In addition to their interpretation of the law passed by the legislature relative to the eligibility of men holding office while on the board of regents, they say that Mr. Lind owes a duty to the party and say no man has been known to ignore a unanimous call to duty.

The only thing that puzzles them is whether or not Mr. Lind will make good on his statement. They acknowledge that the former governor is inclined to have his own way and that he may absolutely decline to run if nominated without his consent. In spite of this, their first inclination is to nominate him and leave the rest to chance.

With the head of the ticket in doubt Democrats are busily engaged in naming the rest of their ticket. If Lind were nominated for governor, one of the most likely candidates for the second place would be Charles A. Nye, of Moorhead. It seems unlikely that Fred W. Johnson, of New Ulm, will be named for second place if either Lind or Hammond were nominated. The nomination of Lind and Johnson would place too many Scandinavians at the head of the ticket, while Hammond and Johnson would overload the ticket with candidates from the second district.

Want Liberal Vote.

In spite of this, if Lind were nominated, the Democrats would like to put up a man for second place who would appeal to the liberal element in opposition to the county option candidacy of S. Y. Gordon for lieutenant governor on the Republican ticket.

Stan J. Donnelly, of St. Paul, is booked for the attorney generalship, although this plan may be changed in view of the fact that Thomas D. O'Brien will be nominated for the supreme court and Otto Bremer will be nominated for state treasurer or Henry G. Haas will be named for some place and the tendency would be to get away from the danger of overloading the ticket with Ramsey county candidates. Judge F. C. Brooks of Minneapolis, will be nominated for the supreme court if he will permit the use of his name.

Fred W. Johnson is likely to be named for the place of secretary of state.

New Church Contract Let.

Fergus Falls.—The Swedish Lutheran church of this city let the contract for the erection of a large new church building here. John Lauritzen undertaking to erect it for $9,564, exclusive of plumbing, heating, decorating and other extras, which will bring the total cost up to $14,000. The building will be of concrete blocks, veneered with pressed brick.

MAN BURNS IN SHACK.

Blackduck Homesteader Shoots Self After Setting Fire to Cabin.

Bemidji.—That he set fire to the shack in which he was living and afterwards shot himself with a rifle to insure that his body would be burned, is the conclusion reached by returned from Blackduck, where the skeleton of a man was found in the burned ruins of Charles Miller's cabin, the remains being identified as those of Miller.

Brownsdale Loses Elevators.

Spring Valley. — Two large grain elevators were burned to the ground and a stock yard damaged by a fire in Brownsdale, a town about 20 miles west of Spring Valley. The loss is estimated at $20,000, mostly covered by insurance. The loss to the stock yard was about $500 and to each of the two elevators about $10,000. One was owned by the Hunting Elevator Company, the other by the La Crosse Grain company. The owners lay the cause of the fire to tramps.

EXPLOSION KILLS FIVE.

Acetylene Gas Tank Blows Up With Fatal Results.

The Dead:

Charles Giebenhain, 48 years old, bartender.

Middleaged man thought to be Joseph Silhaugh, 42 years old, carpenter.

The Injured:

Edward Soucher, 35 years old, proprietor of the Point saloon, burned and bruised about the head and shoulders; hearing and sight probably destroyed;

Minneapolis, June 30.—Five men were killed and three injured when, with a detonation that could be heard for several miles, the acetylene gas generating tank in the basement of the Point saloon, at the intersection of the Crystal lake and Robbinsdale roads near Minneapolis was blown up, hurling the walls of the building outward and killing and maiming some 14 persons who were in the place. The explosion was followed by a fire which reduced the shattered structure to ashes and horribly charred and disfigured the bodies of those who failed to escape with their lives.

According to a gold watch found on the body of Charles Giebenhain, the bartender, the explosion occurred at 4:22 p. m., at which time the watch stoped. An alleged defect in the acetylene generator, which was used for illuminating purposes only, is hinted at as the cause of the accident, although from the twisted and jumbled mass of boiler plate and metal in the basement of the ruins, the real cause may never be ascertained.

The blast literally tore out the front and one side of the building, hurling beams, timbers and glass across the Crysal Lake and the Robbinsdale roads. The corner support between the two shattered walls was also blown away and the roof of the structure hung above, supported only by the rafters running to the rear end other side wall of the building.

Both the first and second floors in the front part of the building shot skyward, carrying with them bar, fixtures, contents of the cellar and occupants of the bar room. The roof withstood the terrible upheaval and the splintered wreckage fell back into the pit of the basement. The floors in the rear room, separated from the bar room by a strong partition, bent upward before the blast like so much canvas, but did not fall into the basement.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS ELECT.

Faribault. — The Spanish-American war veterans in convention here elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Department commander, Joseph Gibson, Duluth; senior vice commander, L. H. Dibble, Faribault; junior vice commander, E. A. Hempstead, Minneapolis; department inspector, H. A. Starr, Waseca; judge advocate, J. W. Finehout, St. Paul; surgeon general, F. U. Davis, Faribault; department chaplain, Wilson H. Morrow, St. Paul; department marshal, J. W. Nicholson, Austin.

The next department encampment will be held at Red Wing. J. W. Finehout delivered a most impressive address to the encampment. A class of about twenty took the degree of the organization, after which a dance was given.

The ladies' auxiliary also met and organized, electing the following officers: National aid, Mrs. Joe. Gibson, Duluth; assistant national aid, Mrs. Anderson, St. Paul; secretary, Mrs. Hugo V. Koch, St. Paul. The officers of the organization are well pleased with the encampment and prosperity of the organization.

SELECT STATUE SITE.

Placed Just Outside the Governor's Room.

St. Paul.—The statue of the late Governor John A. Johnson, when it is completed, will be placed on the state capitol grounds just outside the governor's suite of rooms and between the balustrade around the building and the sidewalk below.

The spot was selected by Cass Gilbert and Governor Eberhart. The monument commission decided to leave to the architect of the building the selection of the spot for the statue.

Andrew O'Connor, the sculptor, is now at work on the statue and it will be completed in a few months. The spot selected for it will give it a commanding position at the top of the capitol grounds.

Creameries Pay Big Amount.

Long Prairie.—From figures just compiled from the May creamery reports, Todd county creameries paid Todd county farmers in cash during the month of May, the sum of $72,000. August Wendorf of Hewitt received the largest check of any farmer in the county for the month. He received $190. Last year the Todd county creameries paid out in cash $360,000. Figuring the increase on the basis of increase each month during 1910, the cash paid out this year will exceed $500,000.

Engineer Disappears From Plant.

Little Falls.—A very deep mystery surrounds the disappearance of Arthur McGrah, an employee of the Little Falls Water Power company, a young man 18 years old, who is believed to be in the Mississippi river. He came here six weeks ago from Anoka to work in the electric power house. No voltage record was made by him since 10 o'clock in the morning but one machine was shut down at 1 in the afternoon. His coat, hat and full dinner pail were in the plant. The river is being dragged.

SPEAKS SEPT. 5

EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WILL VISIT HOME STATE ON LABOR DAY.

CITIZENS TO JOIN LABOR

Congressman Hanna Receives Letter Stating That Former President Will Come to Fargo on That Occasion.

Fargo, N. D., July 7.—Congressman Hanna has received the following letter from ex-President Roosevelt:

Office of Theodore Roosevelt, The Outlook, New York, July 2, 1910.—Hon. L. B. Hanna Fargo N. D.—My Dear Congressman: I have received many requests to speak in North Dakota. Unfortunately I can only speak at all by arranging my dates and places so they will fit in with one another.

Now I think I can speak at Fargo, Labor Day, Sept. 6. Would you consult your friends and whoever else you may choose and find out if they would like to have me do so? Faithfully yours, Theodore Roosevelt.

"Labor day date most satisfactory. Every arrangement will be made and our people are delighted over the prospect of having you with us. We will give you a warm western welcome and will send in a few days all the details just as soon as we can consult with the labor leaders all over the state, the commercial clubs and other prominent men. L. B. Hanna."

The above correspondence insures Fargo the biggest day in her history, Labor day, Sept. 5. The letter from Mr. Roosevelt to Mr. Hanna was received this morning and the telegram as given above was sent out at once.

It is known that it was the ex-president's desire to pay a visit to what he is pleased to call his "home state," and that his welcome here will be a warm and hearty one goes without saying.

Congressman Hanna will at once begin the task which will be a most pleasant one to him of consulting with the labor leaders, not only of Fargo, but of all over the state as to the coming visitation. It is his idea to make the coming of Col. Roosevelt a state affair.

The labor leaders of the city are delighted and promise to do their best to make it the biggest day the city ever saw.

The Fargo Commercial club held a session this afternoon and joined with Mr. Hanna in extending the warmest kind of an invitation. It is known that it has been Mr. Roosevelt's intention since coming home from Africa to pay a visit to the different states of the Union and he said at the home coming reception that he would not consider he was "home" until he had visited North Dakota.

Des Lacs Wiped Out.

Minot, N. D., July 7.—Fire starting in a restaurant destroyed practically the entire business section of Des Lacs on the Great Northern.

The fire, which started early this morning, spread rapidly and before the flames could be checked, because of lack of material on which to feed, nineteen stores were burned to the ground.

The loss is not fully estimated, but it is believed it will reach $100,000 easily.

The heaviest losers are: The Rogers Lumber Co., St. Anthony Lumber Co., Farmers' Elevator, Farmers' State bank and the big hardware store over which was located the Odd Fellows' hall. The postoffice and one grocery store are about all that are saved from the ruins in the business section.

America Imports Gold.

New York, July 7.—The gold importation movement of 1910 had its inception today with the engagement of $1,750,000 in gold bars in London by Lazard Freres for import to the United States. The imports of gold was forecasted by the demands made on New York institutions by western banks for funds to finance land purchases in the west. Local bankers have recently sold large amounts of American securities abroad and are availing themselves of these credits to strengthen their own position by importing gold.

Offers Reward for Lynchers.

Jefferson City, Mo., July 7.—Governor Hadley offered a reward of $300 today for the arrest and conviction of every person who engaged in the lynching of two negroes at Charleston last Sunday. In an interview Hadley warned the negroes they must not provoke race riots on account of the Johnson-Jeffries fight.

1,500 Carmen on Strike.

Winnipeg, July 7.—Fifteen hundred Canadian Northern carmen struck today because the report of the board of conciliation on wage dispute was not satisfactory. The shops from Port Arthur to Edmonton are affected.

Flight Records Broken.

To Homestead Alaska Lands.

Seattle, Wash., July 7.—The first steps for the opening of agricultural and others areas in Alaska to homestead entry will be taken by Topographer R. H. Sargent of the United States geological survey, who left for the north last night to make public land surveys in the territory. Mr. Sargent and nine assistants will begin work in the Tanana valley in the vicinity of Fairbanks.

It is estimated there are 100 parcels of land already under settlement in the valleys around Fairbanks, but these are not subject to homestead entry until the surveys are made.

Rain Puts Out Forest Fire.

Superior, Wis., July 6.—A special telegram from Cornucopia, this morning says that it rained hard for two hours in that region last night and the fires are out. A number of settlers lost their buildings and much timber and pasturage is destroyed.

Submarine on Long Run.

Provincetown, Mass., July 6.—To demonstrate the practicability of a submarine for long ocean trips, a submarine left here today on a 660 mile run to Bermuda. It is expected that the run will be made in about seventy hours.

MANY VACANCIES OCCUR

IN UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT MEMBERSHIP.

Beverly, Mass., July 6.—While the president declines definitely to commit himself in any way, it is regarded here tonight as practically certain that Governor Hughes of New York will be the next chief justice of the supreme court.

No appointment of a successor to Chief Justice Fuller will be made until congress meets next December. By that time it is believed, the president will have to appoint also a successor to Justice Moody, in whose behalf the retirement bill was passed at the session of congress just closed.

In the selection of an associate justice to succeed Justice Fuller, President Taft will take plenty of time for deliberation. It is believed that the president will be informed as to Justice Moody's intention as to retirement within the next month or two, so the chief executive is practically casting about for two men.

The probable retirement of Justice Moody will make the fourth vacancy in less than two years. It is not unlikely that before his term of four years has expired President Taft will have been called upon to appoint six out of the nine justices forming the supreme tribunal. President Taft told some of his friends recently that he was anxious above almost anything else that his administration might be known for the character of his appointments to the federal bench.

It can be positively stated that the president is entirely open minded as to the supreme court vacancies. One of the most likely candidates spoken of here today is Justice Swayzee of the New Jersey supreme court. He has been strongly recommended to the president and is said to have had an excellent chance for appointment to succeed the late Justice Peckham, should Governor Hughes have declined.

President Taft, it is said, is anxious to secure men for the supreme court between 40 and 60 years of age. The appointment of Justice Lurton was an exception, and it is not believed he would again select a man of that age. For this reason there is but little talk of Senator Root of New York and Secretary of War Dickinson, who were prominently regarded as supreme court possibilities.

Bar Fight Pictures.

Fort Worth, Tex., July 6.—In response to request of Mayor Davis, the city commission passed an ordinance prohibiting the exhibition of Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures.

Portland, Me., July 6.—The exhibition of the fight pictures in Maine is prohibited by a law passed by the legislature.

Cape Town, July 6.—There is a widespread demand here for prohibition in South Africa of the bioscopic pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight owing to the effect upon natives.

Prince Weds Despite Mother.

London, July 6.—Miss Dorothy Deacon, daughter of the late Edward Parker Deacon and Prince Antoine Albert Radziwill were married today in St. Mary's church, Cadogan square. The ceremony was a quiet one, without bridesmaids, and only a few relatives and near friends attended. Lord Grey de Ruthyd gave away the bride. Prince Radziwill married against the determined opposition of his mother, who is supposed to be in Austria to attend the wedding of a younger son. This London ceremony was postponed a few days ago because necessary documents wanted by English law had not arrived and it was then reported in society that the objections of the prince's mother had prevailed.

Police Fight Safe Blowers.

New York, July 6.—After a running fight between safe crackers and the police in Harlem today, in which thirty shots were exchanged. The police firing a rain of bullets, chased Frank Picci up an elevated railroad stairway and captured him after a desperate hand to hand encounter. A second man bolted into a tenement house and disappeared.

The burglars showed fight at the start, when they were found by Zerando Dianglies, the proprietor of a First avenue cafe drilling a hole in a safe in which Dianglies for the last month has kept from $6,000 to $7,000 belonging to Italian societies.

Killed in Auto Wreck.

San Antonio, Tex., July 6.—An automobile plunged fifteen feet from a bridge into San Pedro creek here early today and one person is dead and four injured, two probably fatally. The machine turned turtle as it fell.

The dead:

May Prohibit Fight Pictures.

London, July 7.—Sir Howell Davies has given notice of his intention to ask the home secretary, in the house of commons, in the interest of public decency to prohibit the exhibition of biograph pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight.

Heroic Act of Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 6.—While firemen poured powerful streams of water upon him, W. A. Weaver, superintendent of the Atlantic Refining plant, (Standard Oil Co.) dashed daringly through flames and smoke early today and shut a valve which prevented fire spreading from a burning still of benzine to the great tanks of oil nearby. In the vicinity of over 30,000 barrels of petroleum in the first stages of refinement were stored. Two thousand people, called from their beds by the peril, cheered the superintendent as he came scorched from the burning still.

Funeral Attended by Royalty.

Dreaux, France, July 7.—Duke D'Alencon was buried today in Orleans in the chapel beside his wife who was burned to death in the charity bazaar fire of 1897. The king of Bulgaria, representatives of the royal houses of Spain, Portugal and Belgium and members of the French Bourbon family were present. A strong detachment of troops preserved order.

Paris Faces Railway Strike.

Paris, July 7.—A general railway strike here is threatened. The men demand an increase in wages and other ameliorations.

WRECK KILLS 19

HEAD-ON COLLISION IN OHIO PROVES FATAL TO MANY PASSENGERS.

FOUR DIE FROM INJURIES

Mistake in Train Orders Responsible for Awful Loss of Life—Big Four New York Flyer Crashes Into Freight.

Middletown, O., July 5.—Nineteen persons were killed outright, three probably fatally hurt, and half a dozen were seriously injured in a head-on collision between a freight and passenger train on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad here yesterday. Of the killed, eighteen were passengers, the other victim being a member of the passenger train crew.

The dead:

H. P. BAKER, Cincinnati.

H. A. SMITH, Dayton.

J. SMITH KIRK, Dayton.

GEO. DOYLE, Dayton.

FRANK GOLDEN, passenger train brakeman.

JOHN W. COOLEY, McCutcheonsville, Ohio.

MISS FAY H. DAUFEMEIR, Pleasantville, Ohio.

RAY D. SNYDER, London, Ohio.

A. S. GARRIGUE, Columbus, Ohio.

RICHARD VAN HORN, Dayton.

CHARLES H. MOULTON, Youngstown.

MRS. JESSIE J. RODEY, Dayton.

KING YEN LUN, a Chinaman, Columbus.

C. B. GRANT, Springfield, Ohio.

ONE UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN, about 40 years of age.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN, initials "W. A." on clothing.

TWO UNIDENTIFIED MEN, supposed to be from Dayton.

Middleton, O., July 5.—Four victims of the wreck of the Big Four New York flyer here yesterday, bringing the total number of dead up to twenty-three. Reports from the hospitals in Dayton and Hamilton, where many of the thirty-seven injured were taken, indicates that a number of these will die. Some of them are frightfully maimed and no hope is held out for their recovery. All the bodies from the wreck have been identified but one, that of a woman about 45 years old.

The wrecking crews worked all night and the track was cleared early today. No more bodies have been found in the debris.

The officials are now trying to place the blame for the wreck. It is known that a misunderstanding of orders caused the frightful catastrophe, but which train crew was at fault has not been decided.

RIOTS FOLLOW FIGHT.

Negroes and Whites Clash in Many Cities.

New York, July 6.—The police were still keeping active patrol today in "black belts" of New York to check any further sporadic race trouble engendered by the outcome of Jeffries-Johnson fight. Resentment caused by the defeat of Jeffries at the hands of the negro caused scores of street fights, negro hunts through the streets and petty outbreaks all through the night.

Washington, July 5.—In a fight last last night, resulting from clashes between negroes and whites over the championship battle at Reno, Thomas Mutdle, an enlisted man of the United States marine corp had his throat cut and is at the Casualty hospital in a serious condition.

Another white man, who was found unconscious late at night in Pennsylvania avenue after a free for all fight, was taken to the hospital where it was discovered he had sustained concussion of the brain. Several other participants in the street fight were reported severely injured, but no fatalities have resulted.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 5.—More than 100 whites and blacks, some with their heads bandaged or showing other evidence of their participation in last night's race riot, following Johnson's victory at Reno, stood before the police magistrates today to receive punishment. As a rule the disturbers of the peace were released with a fine, but those more seriously involved in the riots were held in bail for court or sent to the county prison for short terms.

St. Louis, July 5.—Rioting in a negro section of St. Louis at Market street and Jefferson avenue, followed quickly upon the announcement that Jack Johnson was the victor in the Reno fight. The negroes were clubbed into submission and dispersed.

Roosevelt Meets Poindexter.

Oyster Bay, July 5.—One of Roosevelt's important political conferences was scheduled today with Representatives Poindexter, the insurgent from Washington, Ballinger's state, and it is generally understood he will report on the conditions in Washington.

McCumber Coming Home.

Washington, July 5.—Senator McCumber and family, together with Secretary Robert Farrar, leave Washington tomorrow for their home in North Dakota. They will make the journey in easy stages, owing to Senator McCumber's health.

Gets Life Imprisonment.

Kansas City, Mo., July 6.—B. C. Hyde, convicted of murdering James H. Swope, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Latshaw in the criminal court this morning. An appeal to the supreme court has been filed and until it is heard the prisoner will remain in the county jail.

Fire Destroys Lumber Yard.

Arnprior, Ont., July 5.—Fire last night and today destroyed lumber worth from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 in the Gillies lumber yards. The burned area covers half a square mile. The mills were saved after a hard fight.

Rain Puts Out Forest Fire.

Superior, Wis., July 6.—A special telegram from Cornucopia, this morning says that it rained hard for two hours in that region last night and the fires are out. A number of settlers lost their buildings and much timber and pasturage is destroyed.

Submarine on Long Run.

Provincetown, Mass., July 6.—To demonstrate the practicability of a submarine for long ocean trips, a submarine left here today on a 660 mile run to Bermuda. It is expected that the run will be made in about seventy hours.

WHERE DIGNITY SITS ENTHRONED

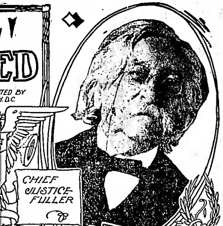
CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER, AND JUSTICE LURTON



CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER

WHEN the Supreme court of the United States enters upon its fall term it will sit with full membership provided no deaths occur during the vacation period and provided also that Associate Justice William H. Moody has so far recovered his health that he can join his colleagues on the bench.

Governor Charles E. Hughes of New York state will be welcomed to membership by the individual members of the court with full hearted pleasure and esteem. Some one has said that Governor Hughes, while in the main a conservative, is a man who believes that the laws should be interpreted in the spirit of 1910 rather than in the spirit of 1820. The criticism on the judgments rendered on occasion by the Supreme court has been to the effect that seemingly some of the members live in the past, and that objection has been made to allowing law lights to strike the "laws of the ancients."

The Supreme court of the United States is said to be the most dignified body in the world. It looks it, but it must not be taken for granted that the justices, from the veteran Chief Justice Fuller down to the youngest man on the bench, have not their times of relaxation when they can give full vent to their sense of humor. Justice John M. Harlan, who is seventy-nine years old, has a rare humor and he likes to give it play. Justice Edward D. White of Louisiana, who has been pronounced by many of the leading lawyers of the country to have a "judicial mind" not excelled in the United States, has hard work at times to keep from giving vent to his humorous conception of things as they appear in court. Such a proceeding would be dubbed undignified, and so Judge White manages to control his flow of wit when in court, but when the tribunal is not in session he gives his mood full play.

Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, son of one of the most distinguished American scholars and one of its rarest humorists, has a great deal of the fun of his father in him, but self-confessedly he tries to hold its expression in check on many occasions because it might be said that he was trying to make Oliver Wendell Holmes the second appear as Oliver Wendell Holmes the first, and this the present justice modestly holds to be impossible.

Not long ago a lawyer went to the residence of one of the associate justices of the Supreme court, a married man and one who the lawyer thought was the staidest of the staid. The visitor had gone to see the justice to get some advice on behalf of a person who he knew was a family friend of the one of whom he was seeking advisory help.

It seems that the man's wife had died, and while the husband was a kindly disposed and most excellent man generally, his father-in-law and mother-in-law insisted on taking the children who had been left motherless. The widower did not want to part with his children and neither did he want to make a fight which would bring the children into public notice and show that he had had a breach with his wife's father and mother.

The lawyer who was calling on the justice said, "What would you do if your father-in-law and mother-in-law on your wife's death tried to get your children away from you?" The answer came quick and sharp, "I'd tell them to go to the devil."

Now it happened that the justice's wife was sitting at his elbow and the lawyer at this strong expression from the judicial minded one looked with trepidation at Mrs. Justice, expecting to see her overcome with mortification at her husband's outbreak. The visitor was relieved and also somewhat surprised when Mrs. Justice said, "I'd tell them to go to the devil, too."

The household court being thus unanimous, the lawyer went away and gave advice to his client, and the presumption is that within a day or two the father-in-law and mother-in-law went to the devil.

The justices of the Supreme court put on their robes in a room which is across the main corridor of the capitol from the courtroom. In order to reach the bench they are obliged to cross the corridor and this they do in procession, the clerk of the court leading the way like a pioneer and being followed by the chief justice and the associate justices in order of rank.

It is on the stroke of twelve, noon, that this procession takes up its way, and as it is known that noon is the hour for the court opening the corridor is always filled with people who want to see the judges file by. Just before they appear in the doorway of their robing room four attendants take up their places in the corridor and stretch across it two thick silken cords, thus making a passageway through which the procession moves. It is the most dignified looking proceeding possible and the justices look neither to the right nor the left, but conscious that there are scores of onlookers, each one bows, but bows straight ahead in order that there may be no discrimination in courtesy between those of the public who are standing on the right and those standing on the left. It is a perfectly impartial bowing proceeding and while it is dignified it strikes some people also as being awfully funny.

JUSTICE HOLMES

JUSTICE DAY

JUSTICE HARLAN

JUSTICE HUGHES IN OFFICIAL ROBES

JUSTICE WHITE

Every Monday, as soon as court assembles, it is the custom to read decisions on cases which have been considered and on which the court is to pass judgment. If the decision of a great case is expected the courtroom always is crowded and the members of the bar, newspaper men and others who have been present before on like occasions, look anxiously to see which judge is to read the important decision. If any one of three or four justices is to read it there is a distinct sense of disappointment, because nobody except the reading judge is likely to hear the decision. In other words, some of the judges of the supreme court have such weak voices that not even the men closest to them can catch what they say and everybody must wait until the decision can be read before knowing what it means.

This inability or perhaps lack of desire on the part of some of the justices to read out loud, is a great trial to the newspaper correspondents who are anxious to telegraph the news of the decision at the earliest moment possible. There are other troubles which beset the correspondents as well as those which come from the poor enunciation and the weak voices of some of the justices. Legal language is the hardest kind of language for the layman to understand, and the result is that when the decision is read the first part of occasionally makes it seem certain that one side has won the case, while the tail end of the decision may reverse everything and give the case to the other side.

There was one striking instance of this in a great case which was decided three years ago. The city of Chicago was trying to effect changes in its street-car system. The street-car companies held that their franchise was good for 100 years and that the city could not oust them from any of their privileges under their franchise. The case went to the Supreme court and was of tremendous interest to all the cities in the United States. Moreover, the speculative interests of the country were awaiting the decision with the keenest anxiety and interest, for if it went one way it meant that certain stocks still would be of great value, and if it went the other way it means that they would be worth little.

The decision was read in the Supreme court by a judge who had a good voice. Everybody had made up his mind that if the Supreme court decided that the railroad companies had a hundred years' franchise they had won the case and that the city had lost. This was regarded as the crucial feature of the whole controversy.

The newspaper correspondents from the great cities were in attendance at the court when the decision was read and they were ready to dispatch messengers instantly to the telegraph office with a brief dispatch saying either "The companies win," or "The city wins." This was all that was to be sent out at the first instance, for the situation was understood in every newspaper office in the country, and a single tip as to which side won would be sufficient to release long stories of the railroad controversy, and other stories already written of what the victory meant for the companies or for the city. In the very first part of the decision the statement was made that the Supreme court had decided that the companies had a franchise for 100 years. Instantly some of the correspondents sent dispatches, "The companies win." Two or three correspondents were held in their seats by a cautionary word from a veteran who had done long service in the Supreme court. He said, "Wait."

In a few minutes, as the reading went on, it became apparent that the court had decided that while the companies had a franchise for 100 years they had practically no rights under it. On the strength of the mistake which was made in sending out some of the first dispatches on that day stocks went up and then when the truth came out they tumbled so fast that they hurt their heads.

When the justices led by the clerk and the chief justice enter the Supreme courtroom everybody stands. When the judges have taken their seats the court crier, after the manner of court criers since the time of the patriarchs, declares that the high and honorable court is in session and that justice is to be dispensed. Just before taking their seats the justices bow to the assembled throng and the throng bows back. When the court crier's voice has died away everybody takes his seat and the proceedings begin.

The Supreme court sits in the old senate chamber of the capitol. It is the room where Webster, Hayne, Clay, Calhoun and others fought their battles. The gallery is a tiny affair capable of seating only about thirty people and the wonder is how when Webster delivered his great oration in reply to Hayne there could have been present the great crowd of which history tells us.

It was in the Supreme courtroom that the electoral commission which decided the Hayes-Tilden contest held its sessions. The fifteen members of that commission occupied the seats of the justices and it is said that during the progress of the hearing the little room was crowded literally to suffocation and that many people were overcome. It is an historic chamber and it is one of the places to which visitors to Washington bend their steps.

In the membership of the Supreme court there are two veterans of the Union army and two veterans of the Confederate army. John Marshall Harlan, who is a Republican, raised the Tenth Kentucky infantry and served in Gen. George H. Thomas' division. He rose to the rank of colonel and his name was before the senate for confirmation as a brigadier general at a time late in the war when his father's death compelled him for family reasons to retire from the service.

Oliver Wendell Holmes of Boston graduated from Harvard college in 1861 and at once entered the Union army. At the battle of Ball's Bluff in October, 1861, Holmes was shot through the breast and for a long time it was believed he could not possibly recover. He did recover, however, and went back to the front, taking part in the battle of Antietam, where he was shot through the neck, and again his life was despaired of. Once more he recovered and went to the front, only to be wounded again at the battle of Fredericksburg.

Justice Edward Douglass White was born in Louisiana and he served through the Civil war in the Confederate service. Horace Harmon Lurton, who was appointed by President Taft to the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Peckham, entered the Confederate service when he was only seventeen years old and he served three years. He was with General Buckner at Fort Donelson when the Confederate commander surrendered to General Grant. Lurton was Grant's captive and it is not at all probable that the northern soldier had any conception that this youthful prisoner was one day to be appointed to the Supreme court of the United States by a Republican president.

CITY MAN AS A "COME ON."

The average city man thinks the farmer who buys a "gold brick" in need of a guardian. Yet thousands of these same city men have paid for "bricks" which any farmer would have known were the commonest kind of brass. There are all sorts of them nicely prepared for city men.

Now it is a scheme to buy fruit land on the Pacific coast. Our city friend is told he can make $1,000 an acre from the start. A few days ago I found a young man almost on his way to the bank to draw $800 for such a scheme, says a writer in the Metropolitan. He had a guaranty that in five years he would be drawing $3,000 annually from his "farm." Next is some co-operative scheme for growing peaches in Texas or oranges in Florida. You do not work. You simply buy stock in the enterprise, pay for it, of course, and then sit in the shade and draw your dividends. You sit in the shade—no doubt of that—and the dividends draw like the memory of evil deeds.

RIVAL OF WESTON

Septuagenarian Walks 13 Miles Before Breakfast Daily.

Capt. N. H. Chittenden at 70, Takes Long "Hike" Every Morning—Has Many Friends Among the Indians.

New York.—The sight of a gaunt and bearded man in sombrero and corduroys who daily turns in his tracks at the New Jersey end of the Fort Lee ferry, has awakened the curiosity of dwellers in the vicinity.

The appearance of the man is decidedly "Wild West," and the youngsters near the ferry who are astir at about seven o'clock mornings have had visions of redskins and buffaloes lately when the stranger has rewarded their vigils by coming on the scene.

The western-looking one is Capt. Newton H. Chittenden, the first explorer of the Queen Charlotte islands, who although 70 years old, walks from Alpine, N. J., to the ferry, a distance of 13 miles, regularly before eight o'clock each morning as a "constitutional."

That Captain Chittenden deserves a nicely ornamented spot in the walkers' section of the Hall of Fame along with Colonel Weston and Mayor Gaynor is evident from his exploits.

In 1888 and 1889 he broke the record for long walks by making a continuous journey on foot diagonally across the continent from the Pacific to the Gulf of Mexico, a distance, including several hundred miles of side expeditions, amounting to 3,350 miles. He was accompanied by a pack burro.

The trip was for archeological and ethnological research, and Captain Chittenden considers it one of the severest of his career. He estimates that he dragged his donkey more than five miles through the overflowed bottoms of Louisiana.

Of the more than 200,000 miles which Captain Chittenden has covered in his 40 years of traveling, 25,000 miles have been on foot. Testimony of his researches are found in most of the famous museums in this country and in museums of Canada and England as well.

Among American pathfinders it is said that this explorer has devoted more severe labor to the accomplishment of his many expeditions than any other ten men of this country. His donations to museums have included many valuable relics and much data pertaining to the Indian tribes and prehistoric Americans.

Captain Chittenden has visited practically every Indian tribe on the continent and has lived with some of the distinguished old chiefs as long as six months, or a year. He has consequently become versed in several Indian languages. It is an interesting fact that, save on one or two occasions when protection from border ruffians demanded it, he never carried a weapon.

Chief Edonsau of the Queen Charlotte tribe was Captain Chittenden's great friend. Poundmaker, chief of the Saskatchewan Crees, whom he visited during the Riel rebellion, was another intimate. Others were American Horse, a great war chief of the Sioux; Red Cloud, Sitting Bull; Two Strike, and the noted Chief Joseph, who came to see him in camp on the Spokane river in the early days.

In the winter of 1908-'09 upon visiting Chief Manuel of the Cahuilla and Serano Indians of southern California he was invited to address the tribe at their fiesta, and he remained in camp with them for 40 days.

As evidence of his pedestrian habits, Captain Chittenden in 1882, when provided with free transportation to and from the gold fields of Cariboo, left the stage in the interior and proceeded 300 miles alone on foot among the various Indian tribes inhabiting that portion of British Columbia. Two years later, in the dead of winter, with the thermometer reaching 15 degrees below zero and the snow in places 15 feet deep, he walked alone over the mountains into the gold fields of Coeur d'Alene and then crossed the Bitter Root range into Montana a distance altogether of more than 300 miles.

Country roads are child's play to Captain Chittenden, whose pedestrianship has been devoted to rougher travel than that which his rivals have experienced. He attributes his unusual degree of endurance to inheritance and careful living. He has never smoked nor taken a drop of liquor, wine, or beer, and has not drunk a cup of tea or coffee in 40 years.

Gives Aid to Birds.

New York.—Mrs. Russell Sage the other day gave $15,000 to the National Association of Audubon societies for its work in the south. Earlier in the week she gave $500 to the association. The $15,000 is to be used in educational work in Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North Carolina and South Carolina.

The $500 was given to start a special "robin protective fund" to protect the robin from extermination in this country.

Farm School Letter

SHORTAGE OF HAY IN MINNESOTA.

Owing to the unprecedented drouth the hay crop in Minnesota is probably less than fifty per cent of a normal crop. In places it is a total failure, and the farmers are not attempting to cut their meadows. Resort must be had to other roughage to feed stock during the coming winter. The alarming reports which have reached the Minnesota Experiment Station have called out the following timely article on corn fodder as a substitute for hay:

FODDER CORN, next to clover and alfalfa hay, is the most valuable forage to be grown on the farm. It permits of early or late planting, and is harvested before the general corn crop is mature. Large yields of dry forage (3 to 7 tons per acre), or of silage (10 to 20 tons per acre), are obtained which for cattle, sheep young stock or even horses, is an excellent feed. For milch cows, it is second only to alfalfa and clover. Much could be stated about this valuable crop, but the purpose of this article is merely to advise the farmers to sow corn thickly for fodder, thus tiding over the hay shortage period and save the live stock.

Preparing the Ground.

Any piece of fertile land will grow the fodder. If no other land is available for the purpose, the meadow or pasture can well be spared.

Plow the land about five inches deep, and harrow as fast as plowed. Work the furrow slice back into a firm condition again with a disk, a sub-subsurface roller (not a surface roller) and finally a harrow. This is necessary to prevent the rapid drying out of the furrow slice.

If sod land is used a more thorough preparation will be necessary for the stubble will act as a barrier between the subsoil and furrow slice, against the free capillary movement of the moisture upward to the seed bed. You must keep the moisture in the soil. This can only be done by proper tillage methods. In this connection the disk is imperative on sod land.

In the event, that plowing up pasture or meadow lands will make a shortage of either of these crops, no fear need be exercised, for fall rye or even spring grains, can be sown on the land to be used for spring pasturage or for hay, until another seeding is established. In short, the effort should be made to keep the live stock.

Planting.

The seed is planted in drill rows, about 3 feet six inches apart. From one bushel (56 pounds) to sixty pounds are sown per acre. When a two horse corn planter is not to be had a grain drill (not a broad-cast seeder) will do the work satisfactorily. Cover the seed cups of the drill with a piece of wood or tin so as to leave the open tubes the proper distance apart for the rows. Open the seed cups wide and test the planting. The seeds should be about two inches apart. If the seed cups do not open wide enough to permit of sowing at least one bushel per acre, re-adjust the closed ones so as to leave two adjacent cups open, thus planting double rows, or drills, 6 to 8 inches apart and about 42 inches, on center, apart. The seeds in the double rows should be from three to four inches apart, to sow the desired amount per acre. A little figuring and testing will be found necessary to determine just which cups to cover or to leave open, in order to best arrange for the marking and driving.

More fodder will be produced from the double rows, but more care is necessary in harvesting with the corn binder, especially if the corn is lodged. The experiment station, in 1900, planted fodder corn on July 12th, and harvested in the fall a good tonnage of excellent fodder. The stalks grew slender and about five feet high. When fed the animals left no stubs of stalks in the mangers.

Cultivation.

Harrow the land with a slant-tooth drag the next day after planting. Harrow again just as the corn is coming up. If the corn does not come up immediately harrow ever five or six days until the corn is an inch or so high.

Cultivate shallow, after the harrowing, at least once a week, until the corn is eighteen or twenty inches high. The cultivator used should have several, but small, teeth or shovels (the "duck-bill" or "eagle-claw" type). No sulky should be used, which has the common shovels (three on a side or in each gang). They are sure to run too deep. Two and a half inches is plenty deep enough. Do not neglect this harrowing or cultivation for the moisture must be kept in the soil. The culture prevents surface evaporation.

C. P. BULL,
Assistant Agriculturist, Minnesota Experiment Station.

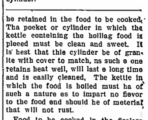
The subject of harvesting fodder corn will be treated in a subsequent article by Prof. Bull.

Fireless Cookers.

Of the many household helps and labor saving devices for women now on the market there are few which may be used to better advantage in the home than the fireless cooker. Like any other piece of machinery, to use it successfully requires thought and common sense properly combined, as well as an understanding of the principles underlying its construction.

In preparing foods requiring long, slow cooking, the use of the fireless cooker greatly diminishes the amount of fuel used and the heat in the kitchen.

A very simple heat-retention cooker may be constructed out of a candy pail, lard can or a box, material for packing, and a pail or other receptacle if desired size for the pocket or cylinder. The space between the pocket and the inside of the pail or box to be filled with packing should be not less than two inches at top, bottom and sides. Cork, excelsior, paper, or any non-conductor of heat may be used as packing. Great care should be exercised in placing the cork, excelsior or paper so that the heat will be retained in the food to be cooked. The pocket or cylinder in which the kettle containing the boiling food is placed must be clean and sweet. It is best that this cylinder be of granite with cover to match, as such a one retains heat well, will last a long time and is easily cleaned. The kettle in which the food is boiled must be of such a nature as to impart no flavor to the food and should be of material that will not rust.



A home-made fireless cooker, casting about $3.00. Nos. 1 and 2 are pads made of a flour sack, filled with the same material the box is packed with, and used, when cooking, to cover the top of the closed pocket or cylinder.

Food to be cooked in the fireless cooker must be brought to the boiling point and cooked until boiled thoroughly all through. For example: Oat meal, boil five minutes; cracked wheat, boil fifteen minutes; a nine-pound ham, boil one-half hour after reaching the boiling point. Rolled oats should remain in the cooker ten or twelve hours; cracked wheat, sixteen hours or more; the ham fifteen to twenty hours. All food, when taken from the cooker, should be made boiling hot before serving to insure perfect wholesomeness.

Remember, when using the heat-retention cooker, that all foods must be actually boiling when placed in it; and if the food requires more than ten or twelve hours' cooking, it should be removed from the cooker, brought to the boiling point and replaced in the cooker.—Mary L. Bull, Division of Domestic Science, Minnesota Experiment Station.

BROOD MARES FOR PROFIT.

It is now costing the farmer about $90.00 a year to support a horse in Minnesota, according the statistics carefully kept at the Experiment Station. The necessity is apparent for the farmer to get into methods of handling his horses so they will return a profit, in addition to the work they do, "to pay for their board." It has been suggested by the secretary of the Minnesota Stallion Registration Board that the present average farm horses be at once converted into high class brood mares capable of raising a colt annually. The geldings should be sold to people whose business will keep them busy throughout the year and pay their owners a profit. Colts of high class brood mares will sell at the end of the second or third year for a sum sufficient to give the farmer a fair profit on his mare, while her labor will have paid him part of the cost of keeping through the idle season. The farmer needs a horse that will pay him a profit every day in the year.

LAST WISH OF GREAT ARTIST

Dying Request of Great Painter Was for Royal Recognition of His Wife.

The only cloud upon the happiness of Millais was the fact that Lady Millais—Ruskin's divorced wife—could not be received at court. Queen Victoria's prejudices were so strong that she excluded from this honor ever woman who had been divorced, no matter for what cause; and Lady Millais suffered with the rest. Her husband was tormented by this exclusion, which seemed to him unjust.

In his last days, as he lay dying, the princess of Wales—now Queen Alexandra—drove to his house to ask him about his health. He begged that he might see her, and she was escorted to his studio, where he lay upon a couch unable to get up. The princess spoke to him with great cordiality, and finally, when she rose to go, she asked:

"Is there anything whatever that I can do for you, Sir John?"

"Yes," returned the dying man; "there is one thing that your royal highness can perhaps do for me. If you will promise it, I shall die with nothing to afflict my mind."

The princess, somewhat surprised by his earnest tone, gave him the promise that he asked.

"There is only one thing that I wish to ask," said he, "and that is that you will try to have Lady Millais received at court."

The princess, greatly moved, gave her promise; and it was not very long before the widowed woman was invited to a royal drawing room.—Munsey's.

Conservation as a political issue in Minnesota is sadly in the dumps.

Automobiles have found a new use. In Montana the other day one was used to chase down a runaway engine. The automobile evidently is the most rapid means of locomotion we have.

Carnegie is giving away a million a year to public libraries but the fact that his brother died in a California poorhouse the other day emphasizes the fact that he doesn't believe himself his brother's keeper. Andy is [illegible] for more glory.

"[illegible]," says the Owatonna Chronicle Journal, "is a really big man to get out and make a fight to be elected governor, senator, and congressman on the side of real live issue." [illegible] next week, dear brother. John Lind is a real big man, and he will have plenty of real live issue.

The revolt against Chairman Ed. Smith is assuming alarming proportions. From every corner of the state comes the severest criticism from the best Republicans who have hoped that the party might break away from the control of the corporate interests. In this connection those in charge of the Republican campaign should remember Lowell's injunction that "it is not the insurrection of ignorance that is dangerous, but the revolts of intelligence."

A new light is dawning in the educational world. At Boston, where the leading educators in America were gathered in convention, one man, Aley of Indianapolis, blazed a new trail when he declared that "it's time gifted children be given as much care as the defective and inefficient." Taking no notice of the risk that the teacher consist having some particular child pointed to as a "pet," it is worth while to train a genius to a realization of his possibilities more worth while than to bring a deficient child to the height of his capabilities or to the point where he passes to the next higher grade conditionally.

The joke is on the German whose horse had wandered from the stall. Desiring its return he told his troubles to the newspaper man, the German dictating the ad: "Yust put id in vat I told you," replied the man. "Dis vas vat you did say, aind id? One nite de odder day about a week ago last mont I heard me a noise by der front middle of the back yard in front of the house which did not used to be so. So I chumps to bed and runs out der door, und when I am see, I finds dat my pag gray iron mare, he vas tied loose and running mit der stable off. Whoefer prings him pack shall pay me fifty dollars revart. Is it not so?"

The bureau of immigration at Washington claims to have statistics showing that between March 1, 1909 and March 1, 1910, 95,353 Americans crossed the Canadian border, taking with them for investment $95,371,000, and that since March, 1906, ending March 1909, 125,920 Americans crossed the Canadian line for permanent residence, the majority from the middle west. While many have gone the fact is that thousands have returned to the states, and of tradesmen and mechanics the Dominion loses thousands annually because they can earn nearly twice the wages here that they can earn there. Possibly no record is kept of this but it is a known fact.

Mrs. John A. Johnson, who is at present touring Europe as the guest of Mme. Olive Fremstad, the prima donna, may return to America before the end of the month, says the St. Peter Herald. In letters written to friends in St. Paul she intimates that she longs for home, and intends to return soon. Mrs. Johnson saw the production of the Passion play at Oberammergau, June 22nd. She goes to Paris next Sunday, after which she has no plans. She has made several visits to the studio of Andrew O'Connor, the sculptor who is to make the statue of Governor Johnson that is to be placed on the state capitol grounds, and has seen him at work on the model.

WHAT IT COSTS TO LIVE.

The latest report of the department of commerce and labor shows that the cost of living in March of this year was 7.5 per cent higher than in August, 1908 and 10.2 per cent higher than the average prices of 1900.

For the ten years from 1890 to 1899, inclusive, the government experts find an average yearly increase for life's principal necessities. Then they find, by comparison, that the present cost of living is 40.2 per cent higher than the average cost in the decade prior to 1900.

These figures only refer to the wholesale cost of products. On top of these wholesale prices there must be added the retailers increasing profits. In an era of high prices, retailers' profits mount more rapidly than those of the middlemen.

WHY NOT ARSENIC?

What an unspeakable nuisance children are at times! There are those Gould kids, Dorothy and Helen. They are so utterly in the way that one wonders why on earth they were ever born, says the Winona Independent.

The other day, when their mother was attending to the mere incident of getting married, those pesky kids were there and had with them a train of nine detectives. Think of it! Having one's wedding marred by the presence of those coarse persons, gathered to watch the kids. The purpose was to see that the bride and the groom didn't take the youngsters away with them to Europe to the chagrin of their father. "We are here to follow these children wherever they go," one of the detectives admitted. "We are not to let them out of sight. Mr. Gould gave these instructions and we mean to follow them out."

Under the divorce decree granted the former Mrs. Gould she was given custody of the children for the greater part of the time on condition that she would not remarry. Neither parent, however, was to take them more than one hundred miles from New York without the others consent. In event of the mother's marriage again Frank Gould was to have his children the major part of the time. He, too, recently remarried, however, and is now in Europe, and a new agreement will have to be drawn up.

For the life of us, we can't see why a little arsenic wouldn't solve the annoying problem about as quickly as anything. Of what use are the interloping little brats, anyway, except to make trouble for their poor parents?

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Minnesota Mascot: The platform has some elements of disappointment about it. Its utterances on the tariff are hardly representative, that is to say, a representative utterance on the subject would be couched in terms denunciatory of the Payne-Aldrich tariff while the platform of the Minnesota Republicans as far as it deals with the present situation, speaks in terms of praise of one or two features of the tariff bill, features that are to be commended, of course, but, after all, only features. So the platform is not representative of the public sentiment in Minnesota when it comes to the tariff question.

Marshall News-Messenger: There are two administration sources of irritation that Minnesota Republicans wish to be kept out of the present campaign—the Payne-Aldrich tariff measure and the Ballinger burglary attempt in Alaska. It is bad enough for Minnesota Republicans to be forced upon a tariff-straddling platform, without carrying any Washington incumbrances, but the straddle is a trick of our own which we are willing to take chances on.

Madison Independent: The indorsement of the administration of Mr. Taft was tommy rot and everybody nows it. The indorsement of Mr. Tawney, who voted for the rotten Taft tariff law and the balance of the Minnesota delegation, who voted against it, was pure buncombe and means absolutely nothing. If Mr. Tawney was right all the rest of the delegation was wrong. If Mr. Tawney is entitled to praise then the rest of the delegation is entitled to censure. The people of this state do not believe Taft has done right and they do not believe Tawney has done right in the matter of the tariff, and they do not believe that the republican convention did right when it endorsed the actions of these men.

A RACE WITH FIRE CARS

A Story of the Civil War

By EDWIN C. TRASK

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

When one morning just before sunrise we swept down on Turnerville, taking the place by surprise, we found three locomotives and twenty freight cars standing in the railroad yard.

A train was made up, loaded with troops, and I, having been a locomotive engineer, was put in the cab. Before starting the general said to me:

"Sergeant, the success of this expedition depends upon you. Colonel Parker is in command, but has nothing to do with running the train. That's in your hands. As soon as the Confederates know we're here they'll send a force to cut us off. But they'll need the bridge at B., and I want you to get these men there before daylight in the morning to burn it. But you must keep a sharp lookout for snags. The citizens on the line you will pass over are all hostile, and they'll strain every nerve to wreck your train. Remember, not only the lives of the men in these cars, but the safety of the whole command depends upon you."

The first ten miles we did by daylight. Then it grew dark, and I had nothing to see by but the lantern, which lit the track dimly. My head was thrust far out the cab window, and my hand was on the throttle. Twice I stopped her within a few feet of a tie wedged in between a rail and the ties, and once I bumped a tree that had been felled across the track, having not quite stopped before reaching it. On an elevation I struck a junction and a lot of people standing about staring at us as we passed. I didn't like their looks. But the telegraph wires had been cut, and I didn't see how they could send word ahead. There were half a dozen freight cars on a sidetrack, but no locomotive.

Soon after leaving the junction I shut off steam and let her roll down the long declivity. I was nearly at the foot on a short upward grade when I had a break—the engine was only fit for a junk heap—and spent half an hour at a standstill while I patched it. As I remounted the cab Corporal Bob Jenkins, who was acting as fireman, pointed up the hill with a look of horror. I saw a bright light, and a moment later a short string of freight cars shot from out a cut. I knew at once what it meant. The citizens at the junction had started the cars I had seen on the sidetrack, first having set them afire, with the hope that they would smash us on catching us and if there was anything left of our train burn it. I jumped into the cab and pulled the throttle.

The grade behind us wasn't less than 30 degrees, and the fire train was coming like lightning. I had a few train lengths to go on nearly a level, then a straightaway track on a slight decline. The fire train was coming at a rate of a mile in forty-five seconds, and the best my old wheezer could do was a mile in two minutes. If I couldn't haul away far enough before the cars behind reached a place where they would lose momentum they would ruin us.

Then began the race of my life. I could have stopped, let the men out of the cars and permitted the smashup, but the bridge wouldn't be burned and our force at Turnerville would be cut off. I remembered the pressure of the hand the general had given me, and I tightly grasped the throttle, resolved to get away from those fire cars or get wrecked.

I held my eyes front, while Bob Jenkins kept me posted on the fire cars. "They're gaining on us mighty fast!" "Only a mile away!" "They'll catch us sure!" "They're coming like a streak of lightning!" These were the unassuring words Bob gave me while my locomotive puffed and sputtered and dragged along at what seemed to us a snail's pace.

Then suddenly turning a curve I saw a light ahead. Great heavens! Were we to have fire both in front and behind us? Running on a straight track, I saw men kindling a small bridge. They had got the fire well going, but I didn't believe they had burned the stringers sufficiently to let us down. At any rate, I determined to risk it. Leaving on full speed—I couldn't put on any more—I dashed into the flames. My locomotive crossed safely, and I was congratulating myself that the train was all over when I felt a shock. We went a short distance and stopped.

The bridge had gone down under the last two cars. Several men were badly injured, but no one killed. All were got out before the fire cars plunged in on the wreck and stopped there to mingle their burning with that of the other material.

The men of the last two cars got into those cars that had crossed, carrying the wounded. I mounted my engine, and we steamed on for the rest of the night, reaching the bridge at B. just before dawn. My work was done. I leaned out of the cab window, watching the men carry the wood and petroleum and distribute them along the structure. Then suddenly there was a flash, and from one end to the other all was aflame. I never looked at destruction before with such comfort and delight.

When I got back to camp I got a warm pressure of the hand from the general, and it was not long before, through his influence, I was given a commission. But the best work I did in the war was the flight before those fire cars.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, pursuant to chapter seven (7), Revised Laws of Minnesota, 1905, a petition was filed with the Secretary of State on the 12th day of May, 1909, praying for the creation of a new county out of the territory now lying in Red Lake County, Minnesota, the same to be known as Pennington county, and described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the southwest corner of section nineteen (19) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, according to the United States Government survey thereof, running thence east along the south line of sections nineteen (19), twenty (20), twenty-one (21), twenty-two (22), twenty-three (23), and twenty-four (24) in townships one hundred fifty-two (152) north of each of ranges forty-five (45), forty-four (44), forty-three (43), forty-two (42), forty-one (41) and forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of section twenty-four (24) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges thirty-nine (39) and forty (40) west to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north on the east line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the northeast corner of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west, thence running west along the north line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the south[illegible] corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north along the east line of townships one-hundred fifty-three (153) and one-hundred fifty-four (154) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of Marshall county as the same now exists, thence running west along the southern boundary line of said Marshall county to a point where said boundary line intersects the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian, the said point being the northwest corner of said Red Lake County as the same now exists, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west to the northwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of section nineteen (19) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, the same being the place of beginning.

The said territory so bounded being all that part of Red Lake County as now constituted lying north of the south line of sections nineteen (19), twenty (20), twenty-one (21), twenty-two (22), twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in townships one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of each of ranges forty (40), forty-one (41), forty-two (42), forty-three (43), forty-four (44) and forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian and all of townships one-hundred fifty-two (152) and one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian and also all that part of township one-hundred and fifty-four (154) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian lying and being within said Red Lake county as said county now exists.

The proposed county seat of said proposed new county shall be the City of Thief River Falls located on sections twenty-seven (27), twenty-eight (28), thirty-three (33) and thirty-four (34) in township one hundred and fifty-four (154) north of range forty-three (43) west of the 5th principal meridian.

The names and places of residence of the persons who shall constitute the first county board of said proposed new county, are as follows:

Peter C. Wold, residing on lots one (1) and two (2) and the east half of northwest quarter of section nineteen (19), in township one hundred and fifty-three (153) north of range forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

[illegible] residing on the northwest quarter of section thirty-four (34), in township one hundred fifty-three (153), north of range forty-one (41) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Ed A. Jobol, residing on lots three (3) and six (6) in section twenty-nine (29) in township one hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-three (43) west of the 5th principal meridian in said proposed new county.

[illegible] Shaw, residing in the City of Thief River Falls in said proposed new county.

Olaf Larson, residing on the south half of section eight (8) in Township one hundred fifty-four (154) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Whereas, the said petition represents and avers that the said hereinbefore territory comprises more than four hundred square miles, and contains more than two thousand inhabitants and that the remaining area of Red Lake County after deducting the territory hereinbefore described, will comprise more than four hundred square miles and contain more than two thousand inhabitants; and

Whereas, the said petition has been duly considered and found and certified to us conforming in all respects to the provisions of law;

Now, therefore, I, Adolph O. Eberhart, governor of the state of Minnesota, pursuant to the authority vested in me by law, do hereby direct and proclaim that the question of the creation of the proposed new county of Pennington be submitted to the voters of said Red Lake County at the next general election to be held in this state on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1910.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be hereto affixed, at the Capitol, in the City of St. Paul, this twelfth day of May, A. D. 1910.

ADOLPH O. EBERHART,
(Seal) Governor.
Attest: JULIUS A. SCHMAHL,
Secretary of State.

It Didn't Work.

"One night last week I thought I heard some one prowling about the house, and as there have been a number of houses broken into lately I concluded that the noise was made by burglars. As I sat up in bed listening I chanced to glance into the next room, the door of our bedroom being open, and there, sure enough, stood a burglar coolly gathering our silver plate. With this startling discovery came the chilling thought that I hadn't such a thing as a firearm in the house. But I determined to see what bluff would do so, turning to my wife, I said in a loud voice:

"'Mary, where's my revolver?'

"'John,' she answered in a voice equally as loud, 'there isn't such a thing in the house, and you know it.'

"After that I closed and locked the door and blew a police whistle."

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S.S.S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

MRS. LUCY GOODING
Pollock, La.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

PETITION FOR PUBLIC DITCH

The undersigned landowners whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for the expense of the construction of the Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and construction of a ditch along the following described route in the town of Silverton in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility. A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at the North East corner of section thirty three (33) in township one hundred fifty four (154) north of range forty-two (42) west, thence running west along the section line between sections twenty eight (28) and thirty three (33), twenty nine (29) and thirty two (32) and between sections thirty (30) and thirty one (31) all in said township one hundred fifty four (154) North of Range forty two (42) West, and terminating at the County Ditch No. 33 on the range line between townships one hundred fifty four (154), Range forty [illegible] and township one hundred [illegible] Range forty three (43) [illegible] being County ditch No. [illegible] in said Red Lake Co.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such drainage ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter two hundred thirty (230) of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

TIMIDITY OF LOVE

A Veteran of the Civil War Quails Before a Woman

By ARNOLD BROWN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

It was April —, 1861. The —th regiment was ordered to march the next day to the defense of Washington. A reception was to be held the evening before departure in the armory, at which mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts could bid adieu to their loved ones, some of whom might not return. During the afternoon previous to the reception young Norman Egerton, second lieutenant of G company, sat at a desk in his comfortable room writing. This is what he wrote:

> I have delayed to speak, fearing to be repulsed, but now at the last moment I must tell you that I love you better than my life, everything but my duty. May I hope at I return that I [illegible] claim you? If [illegible] wear [illegible] of these flowers bought [illegible]

The words, such as a boy would write who is [illegible] into what he was doing, were intended for Miss Mabel Harding, even younger than himself. They were written on a bit of thin paper, which he folded into a small compass, and, taking up a bouquet that lay beside him, he thrust his missive into its center, covering it with the flowers as if fearful the girl would find it. Calling a servant, he directed him to carry the flowers to their destination and report to him that they had been received by the young lady. Then he waited the hour till the report had been made.

That night at the armory he watched eagerly for the signal. Presently he saw Miss Harding walking toward him on the arm of a man whom he had feared as a rival. She wore no flowers. The young officer, like many a man in his first fight, quailed. He left the hall and did not return to it.

Egerton proved the reverse in war of what he was in love. He returned with an empty sleeve and a colonel's commission, with brevet rank of brigadier general. But he had no sooner reached home than his lover's cowardice got the better of him. Sensitive to a high degree, he dreaded meeting the girl who had refused him, his dread being enhanced by the absence of his right arm. A mutilated man nurses his misfortune, and it is doubtful if any soldier is proud of the loss of a limb. The general rankled at his maiming, for he considered that it removed him further, if that could be, from the woman he still loved. To escape a meeting with her as soon as he was mustered out of the service he made a tour abroad. But this only deferred the meeting, and at last he summoned courage and went back to the city where they both lived.

On the street one day he saw her coming. If he continued to advance he would meet her face to face. He looked about him, as he had seen many a man do on the field of battle, for cover. An alley was near. It was a narrow, mean looking lane, but he dashed into it. It led nowhere, and he found himself in a pocket flanked by the rear of small shops. He stood trembling till he knew that his enemy must have passed, then slunk out of it and pursued his way.

A few days later he received a fright that took away his breath. It was an invitation to an evening function given at Miss Harding's home. Fortunately the date of the affair was some days away. He resolved a dozen times to "regret" to go, but, having time to get up a little courage at the last moment, sent an acceptance. It had no sooner been dispatched than he wished to recall it. But it was too late.

On the appointed date he got into evening dress, pinned up his empty sleeve, heaving a deep sigh as he did so, and went to the house. Half an hour in the robing room was necessary to give him the requisite courage to go below. The hosts were drawn up to receive their guests, to Egerton appearing like an opposing line of battle to a raw recruit. He approached, saluted and, seeing a look of embarrassment on Miss Harding's face, as soon as the ceremony was over beat a precipitate retreat.

Later he was stalking about, wondering if sufficient time would ever pass to enable him to depart with propriety, when he felt a hand slipped on his arm and, turning, saw the girl who had refused him.

"General," she said, while her eyes on the floor, "why did you not come to see me after your return from the war?"

"I—why—I went abroad."

"Then why not since your return?"

There was a warm hand on his left arm that imparted courage to his heart.

"I—didn't suppose—that you wished to see me."

"Why not?"

There was a pause before the reply. It came at last. "Do you remember that I sent you a bouquet of flowers before the reception given the evening previous to our departure?"

"I do."

"And the scrap of paper in it?"

"The scrap of paper?"

"Yes."

She had led him into a corner where no one but themselves was present.

"Wait here," she said.

Darting away, she ran upstairs and returned with a withered bouquet. Diving into it, she withdrew his note written six years before and, opening it, read for the first time his message. Then, taking all that was left of a rose, the stem, she inserted it in her corsage.

Valuable Aid to Rural Teachers.

County superintendents and principals of schools will soon be called upon to introduce industrial training, agriculture, domestic art and domestic science into rural schools. They will find valuable help by attending the short course for teachers at University Farm, for six weeks from June 20. Insight into the subjects now demanding attention of school men and women will be given. They will then be able to introduce the subjects and supervise instruction in those subjects with confidence and intelligence.

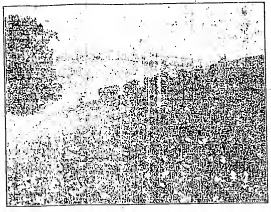
How to Supply Pasture for Cows.

D. A. Gaumnitz, Division of Animal Husbandry, Minnesota Experiment Station.

There is probably no phase of farm industry more neglected than that which has to do with supplying pasture for cattle. They are fed in the yards on dry hay when fresh grass is more palatable, more digestible, more nutritious and cheaper, the necessary fencing included, than hay.

Where lands are cheap it may pay to use wild pasture; but pastures in the wood lot, particularly where the trees are thick, are only about half as productive, and, consequently, only half as efficient, as cultivated pastures.



Cows feeding in rape and clover. Seed was sown with grain crop in spring and made excellent fall pasture at very little expense.

While lands that lie low, as along creek bottoms, are from one-half to twice as productive as lands that lie high and dry, yet high, or prairie, lands are greatly to be preferred to wet, swampy tracts. A low, reasonably dry piece of land is the ideal one for pasture.

Pasture lands that cannot be brought under cultivation may well be sown to Kentucky blue grass. In pastures that are under rotation this grass is too slow to start, requiring a couple of years to become well seeded.

Blue grass, one pound.
Timothy, six pounds.
Bromus, four pounds.
Red top, three pounds.

Where crop rotation is practiced pasture will come into the rotation. Probably the best mixture for this purpose would be red clover and timothy, about three pounds to seven pounds of red clover and nine pounds to fourteen pounds of timothy per acre; or red clover and bromus, in which case about five pounds of red clover and ten to fifteen pounds of bromus are sown per acre.

Annual pastures are not practicable for cattle, at least in the sense in which they are used for sheep. Corn which is grown to maturity, rape which has been grown with a grain, makes a very good pasture for cattle, but only under the conditions mentioned.

The greatest total amount of pasture can be gotten by permitting the grass to get a fair start before turning cattle upon it. When cropped too closely, the grass which the cattle get is too watery and does not contain enough nutrients. On the other hand, grass which is allowed to get too matured is woody and unpalatable, and it of course soon ceases growing entirely and goes to seed, thus lessening the amount of pasture possible. Spots where cattle leave the grass should be mown down to insure continued growth. The most satisfactory system of pasturing is where the pasture is divided into two parts and these parts pastured alternately. By following this system there is little chance of the grass going to seed, and all of the grass is eaten down more uniformly than when the cattle have access to the entire lot.

Every man should aim to have plenty of pasture so that the cattle will grow fat on a very cheap feed. It is much more profitable to do the fattening on these cheap feeds than to do it in the winter with expensive grains and roughages.

THE FARM HORSE.

If Properly Managed He Will Add to Profits of Owner.

Farmers who have made a careful study of farm economics have discovered that the horse, as ordinarily kept and managed, is one of the most expensive farm laborers. If properly managed the farm horse may be made to pay his way and add to the profits of the farm. Statistics compiled by the Minnesota Experiment Station through the years from 1901 to 1907, inclusive, show that in the southeastern part of the state it costs $90.39 per year to maintain the average farm horse and that in return the horse is doing, on an average, 977 hours of work per year. His labor is costing the farmer 9.2 cents per hour. In the northwestern part of the state it costs $75.05 to maintain a horse and in return he is doing 1,025 hours' work per year. His work is costing 7.1 cents per hour. If the horse is to keep up his end of the profit making he must earn something in addition to the actual labor he performs and not as

A logical solution of the problem seems to be to convert the present horse stock into high class draft brood mares, capable of producing good foals annually in addition to the work done in the harness. The geldings, now spending so much idle time on the farm, should be working where they can bring greater annual returns to their owners, who can make use of them constantly. Brood mares, with ordinary care, would do the work on the average farm in addition to raising a colt that would, at the end of the second or third year, sell for a good price. The farmer would then realize a profit from the mare's labor.

A horse depreciates in value rapidly after passing a certain age and some farmers, realizing that depreciation detracts directly from their profits, are doing farm work with young horses that are increasing in value while laboring.

The farm is an excellent place to develop a young horse. It is a poor place to make a profit with a horse that is giving nothing but labor in return for his feed and care. Brood mares will be found valuable in the mortgage lifting enterprise.—J. S. Montgomery, Secretary Stallion Registration Board at Minnesota Experiment Station.

THE OLD HEN AND CHICKENS

Cleanliness, Good Food and Regular Care Imperative.

Through her efforts to lay and reproduce her species, the hen, in the spring and summer, cheapens her product, enabling mankind to procure fresher and cheaper eggs than is usual in winter. Hens are not to be charged with producing poor eggs, for their owner is always at fault when the egg is not standard in quality.

Cleanliness, good food, regular care, with protection from weather and natural enemies, cannot be too emphatically emphasized. Cleanliness must be practiced in the hennery, in the yards, in the brooders and in the feed. White diarrhoea may be introduced by slight neglect to keep things clean about the yards, drinking and feeding utensils, etc. When the disease is once present its ravages are extremely fatal.

Poultry should not be fed mouldy or musty grain. Young chicks may first be fed when thirty-six hours old. Hard boiled eggs, which have been tested on the seventh day of incubation and found infertile, mixed with bread crumbs, may be fed the first week. If moistened with sweet skimmed milk and squeezed dry this food will be greatly relished by young chicks, and no harm will result if they are fed in clean dishes. When chicks are a week or ten days old these feeds may be followed with finely cracked grains. Rolled or pinhead oats may also be fed at this time. Pure water and grit should at all times be supplied in abundance. Green food is important and should be supplied, especially when chickens or old birds are kept in confinement, by chopping mangles, potatoes, clover, etc. A green sod placed in the pen will be enjoyed by the chickens. Exercise may be insured by the use of straw or chaff.

Never allow the young flocks to go over a feeding time without food. Bad results are apt to follow. Keeping a supply of food where it can be fed liberally five times a day for the first three or four weeks, and afterward four times a day, is practiced at the Minnesota Experiment Station at St. Anthony Park until the flock is at least half grown.

When a chick is seen in a crouching position, wings drooping, eyes closed, isolate it from the flock. Kill and bury it rather than permit it to run with the flock.—Dwight Lane, Minnesota Experiment Station.

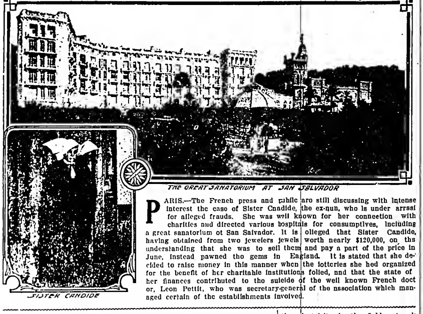
CHARITY SCANDAL CAUSES SENSATION IN FRANCE



THE GREAT SANATORIUM AT SAN SALVADOR

SISTER CANDIDE

PARIS.—The French press and public are still discussing with intense interest the case of Sister Candide, the ex-nun, who is under arrest for alleged frauds. She was well known for her connection with charities and directed various hospitals for consumptives, including a great sanatorium at San Salvador. It is alleged that Sister Candide, having obtained from two jewelers jewels worth nearly $120,000, on the understanding that she was to sell them and pay a part of the price in June, instead pawned the gems in England. It is stated that she decided to raise money in this manner when the lotteries she had organized for the benefit of her charitable institutions failed, and that the state of her finances contributed to the suicide of the well known French doctor, Leon Pettit, who was secretary-general of the association which managed certain of the establishments involved.

ASSIST CROP YIELD

Sir Oliver Lodge's Plan of Utilizing Electricity.

Says Small Dynamo Attached to Farm Will Work Wonders in Increasing Output—Practical Auxiliary of Husbandry.

London.—In spite of the obstinate conservatism of the average farmer, much has been done to carry out Sir Oliver Lodge's plan of utilizing electricity for reinforcing the fertility of plants.

Watched as a business proposition, Sir Oliver Lodge's system has justified itself, and what was tentative and experimental is now being taken up on commercial lines as a practical auxiliary of husbandry.

Lionel Lodge, who has control of this department of Sir Oliver's work, has explained the developments of the last year or two and the hope they afford of further progress.

"Have you ever noticed what a remarkable impulse is given to the growth of crops by a thunderstorm?" asked Mr. Lodge. "That is the effect of the strongly charged atmosphere, and our object is to supply a similar stimulus systematically.

"The growth and development of plants in the arctic regions compares favorably with that in southern countries, and yet their summer is very short, and the sun's rays have to travel in such an oblique direction that much of their heating power is lost. Why is it, therefore, that the plants flourish? The explanation lies in the strong electrical currents which are passing from the air to the earth, the effect of which can be seen in the Aurora Borealis.

"The electric current can be generated either by a small dynamo or from the nearest supply company's mains, and by means of a transformer it is raised to the high pressure required (about 100,000 volts). The current from the transformer is more or less alternating; that is, it is not a steady current in one direction, but oscillating first in one direction and then in the opposite. For convenience we call the current in one direction positive and in the other negative. It is the positive current that we discharge from the network of wires above the plants. Under special conditions—as where there is an excess of natural electricity—it might be advisable to use the negative, but alternating current would be of no use.

"To sort out the positive and negative currents from the transformer valves specially invented for the purpose by Sir Oliver are used. Working exactly like the valves in an ordinary pump, they allow the current to flow in one direction only, and prevent its getting back; they thus store the electricity in the field network from which it 'fizzes' off to the plants below.

"This field network consists of fine iron wire, the wires being spread about ten yards apart and eighteen feet or so above the ground. The wires are so fine that it is difficult to see them even when standing immediately below them.

"The action that the electrical discharge has on the plants, Sir Oliver suggests, may be considered as artificial sunshine, and as in no way taking the place of fertilizer. The richer the soil the larger the increase that may be expected. With more plants, on average soil, the electrified area may be expected to yield 30 per cent more than the non-electrified. If a higher increase than this is obtained we consider the results good and if lower poor. On rich soil very much larger percentages have been obtained. The power required is quite small, and many of the installations at present working are in unskilled hands."

Fortune for a Feast

Modern Food Fads Recall Expensive Palates in Earlier Days—Minced Cat, Stewed Rats and Dog's Liver Served in Paris.

London.—The food fads, about which so many members of society have gone almost crazy, recall the food fads—quite different in their essence—of olden days. From time immemorial wealthy epicures have not hesitated to spend large sums on single meals for themselves and a select and limited number of friends.

For instance, there are on record some nice little repasts indulged in by the Roman gourmands. Aelius Verus gave a banquet to a dozen guests, which must have been a sight for gods and men, seeing that it cost if reckoned in American money, more than $240,000. The Emperor Vitellius once entertained his brother Lucius to a dainty "snack" which ran away with something like $200,000. This latter feast could not have been a meager affair when it is considered that among the courses were 2,000 different sorts of fish and 7,000 varieties of fowl.

It is said that the equivalent of something like $40,000,000 was spent by Apicius Coelius during his lifetime, merely in continual tickling of the palate. He committed suicide when his extravagance in eating and drinking and in other directions had reduced his income to about $400,000 a year, a sum on which he imagined he could not be happy.

In modern times the art of feeding has been by no means neglected; but who would care to sit down to a banquet such as that organized by Geoffrey St. Hilaire during the siege of Paris? After swallowing a consomme de cheval da millet the company partook of minced cat, stewed rats, grilled dog's liver and plum pudding.

The feast seems to have been a great success, for it is on record that "the soup was perfect, the dog's liver tasted like sheep's kidneys, the minced cat resembled veal, the rat stew was very good and reminded the guests of boiled chicken."

Rats, by the way, are described as an exquisite form of nourishment, which is an obiter dictum to which many have agreed, notably a famous naturalist, the late Frank Buckland. He used to swear by roast alligator, which he declared was more succulent even than boiled boa constrictor, one of his most prized dishes, and this in turn he preferred to the finest veal.

Crows Eat Fish Bait.

Covington, La.—Crows have invaded a hitherto uninvaded field. The field is liquid, and crows are carnivorous, according to reports from many fishermen in this section. Crab fishermen, it is declared, along the shores of Lake Pontchartrain have left their baited lines only to find on their return empty hooks. Several fishermen standing guard in an effort to discover the secret of the unbaited hooks witnessed the raising of the lines and the devouring of the bait by crows. They have borrowed scare-crows from cornfields and placed them on the water.

Panama is Mosquito Proof

Canal Zone Is Now Healthier Than New York City, Declares Health Officer Pierce.

New York.—Stating his belief that the Panama canal would be completed in 1913, a year and a half ahead of the schedule time, Dr. C. C. Pierce, a health officer in the Canal zone, arrived here the other day.

"The greatest advance during the six and a half years I've been there," he said, "was in the extermination of mosquitoes. We have filled innumerable swamps, drained off standing water and even filled the gutters from housetops.

"Panama is a healthier place than New York city today, because authority to carry through reforms is vested in the Isthmian Canal commission and must be obeyed. If you attempted to make this city mosquito-proof and ordered a New Yorker to take down his gutters, you would first have to get an order from a court and he in turn would obtain an injunction. In the Canal zone what the authorities say goes without question."

The doctors could not understand why the wound should pain, and made a further examination of the leg, with the result of locating the nail. When the nail was extracted it was bent and in a blackened condition. The physicians who performed the operation say that now, as the nail has been removed, there is little possibility of any further trouble from the wound.

Mail by Airship Line.

Washington. — The carrying of United States mail by airship or aeroplane may be the next step in aerial navigation.

Representative Sheppard, of Texas, has introduced a resolution "authorizing and directing the postmaster general to investigate the practicability and cost of an aeroplane or airship mail route between the city of Washington and some other point or points suitable for experiment."

Trout Gets Revenge on "Jonah" Eel.

Winsted, Conn.—Harry Hall of Newington had an unusual experience on a trout fishing expedition to Talcott Mountain. A "Jonah" eel had partly swallowed a large trout, which, when it realized its danger, grabbed Hall's hook. Hall got both eel and trout, the former refusing to let go its catch.

Mayor Gets Small Salary.

Pontiac, Ill.—The mayor of Hoopeston has just received a check for 50 cents, his salary for the municipal year just ended. The aldermen's checks called for 25 cents each.

$23,080 FOR CARE OF ZOO

London.—An insight into what it costs to feed all the inhabitants at the zoo is given by the report presented at the annual meeting of the Zoological society. Here are just a few of the items in the year's food bill:

Hay, $2,650; green food, $580; grain and seed, $1,300; fish, $2,250; clover, $2,400; oats, $1,600; fruit, $2,920; fowls' heads, $385.

The total cost of the commissariat for the year was $23,080. Among the quantities of foodstuffs consumed were: Plaice, 12,207 pounds; monkey nuts, 4,500 pounds; horses, 212; eggs, 40,054; goats, 150; grapes, 4,600 pounds; oranges, 14,897; fowls' heads, 37,967; milk, 6,695 quarts.

Praise for Little Spider

Interesting Story Contributed by Writer, Greatly Struck by Intelligence of Insect.

London.—An interesting article is contributed to the Scotsman by a writer who has been studying the life and habits of the spider and who has been greatly struck by its intelligence.

"Of all the solitary insects I have ever seen," he says, "the spider is the most sagacious, and its actions, to one who has attentively considered them, seem almost to excel belief. The spider is formed by nature for a state of war not only on other insects, but on its fellows. For this state nature seems perfectly well to have formed it with singular perfection.

"Its head and breast are covered with a strong natural coat of mail, which is impenetrable to the attempts of every other insect; and its lower parts are enveloped in a soft, pliant skin which eludes the sting even of a wasp. Its legs are terminated by strong claws, not unlike those of a lobster, and their vast length, like spears, serves to keep every assailant at a safe distance. Not worse furnished for observation than for attack and defense, it has several eyes, large and transparent."

Pauperism in England.

London.—Pauperism in England, according to statistics just issued, has fallen to the ratio of 1904, but the total number of paupers, 789,008, was exceeded only in 1909 and 1908. London had 121,749, a fall of 1,500. This means twenty-five paupers per 1,000 people in London.

STORING PLANT FOOD FOR PRODUCING ENERGY

Place and Manner of Storage Differ in Composition to Starch or Some Proteid Compounds—Century Plant Popular.

"After the plant's food has been made in the green leaves, what is done with it?" This is the natural question which students of plant life ask themselves. Careful investigation shows that some is variously changed and used in the leaves themselves, some is carried to other parts of the plant where it is needed for the production of energy and the building up of new cells, and the surplus is stored away for the future needs of the plants. The place and manner of storage differ widely in different plants. Sometimes the surplus is accumulated in the form of various sugars, very often as starch and less frequently as mucilage similar in composition to starch or some proteid compounds.

There are difficulties encountered in storing this surplus food just where it is made. It may so obstruct the cells of the leaf that food making is hindered and leaves are usually rather small so they can contain only a small reserve. Besides many plants retain their leaves for a few months only, when they fall to the ground to be replaced by others when another growing season arrives, hence reservoirs of food are usually larger and more permanent organs. Small amounts of starch and sugar are usually kept in leaves for a short time and this is more particularly true of thick fleshy leaves that persist for many months or even years. The best known instances are seen in bulbous plants, where the storage organs are the thick leaf bases that surround a bit of stem in the center. A hyacinth bulb, a globular mass of leaves, reveals when cut through the center a miniature cluster of flower buds in the center. Place the bulb in a glass of water and, using the food stored in the leaves, the buds will expand into beautiful flowers.

An excellent example of thick leaves producing a food storehouse is found in the American century plant, Agave Americana, found most abundantly in the warm regions of southern United States and the drier parts of Mexico and Central America. As public parks and greenhouses have been multiplied, century plants have become familiar objects in many parts of the country. Found in hot dry countries they have successfully solved the problem of obtaining plenty of sunlight without exposing too much leaf surface to the drying winds of the desert. Their leaves are long and thick, arranged in a loose rosette and covered with an exceedingly thick epidermis. In these thick leaves large quantities of sugar and mucilage are stored.

Century plants are long-lived but seldom reach the hundred years that their names would suggest. The early years of their life are devoted to the task of making and storing an accumulation of food to be expended in the spectacular closing year of their existence. In the warm climate of Mexico and Central America, this task is accomplished in 10 to 30 years, but in the cooler regions farther north it may require 40 to 60 years. Finally a large rosette of leaves forms a storehouse filled to the full and ready to furnish the supplies needed for the rapid development of the flowers and seeds which is the climax of the plant's active life.

KINDNESS TO FARM ANIMALS

Gives to All of Them That Kindly Disposition Which Makes Them Quiet, Teachable and Reasonably Safe.

(By C. C. MILLER.)

There is always a way to overcome fear in our domestic animals and that is by kindness. Kindness from the day of their birth, and continued as long as they live. This gives to all of them that kindly disposition which makes them accommodating, quiet and teachable, and safe. It makes them loving and loyal. It adds to their length of life. A horse of a fretful disposition is old at ten, while one that has a quiet disposition may still be young at twenty. It is strange that we do not learn this. How often does a young man just starting in life, buy a good team of young horses, and in order to make them appear to have much spirit and life, checks them up high, cracks his whip over them, and sometimes strikes them, drives them fast with a heavy wagon, and sometimes with a load, and in a few years they are a span of plugs, or perhaps one is dead, and the owner is a poor man, whereas, another man with kindly treatment, keeps a similar team for 20 years, doing incredible amounts of work, and hard work, and yet he never frets them, and never has required of them anything they were not able and willing to do. They have made him rich, and he has made their lives happy.

In Paris, it is said, horses are treated more cruelly than anywhere else in the world, and because of this treatment, though they have the best street draft horses in the world, the Percheron, they live on the average but three years.

DAIRY COWS FIGHT FLIES

No Time for Making Milk While Thus Employed—Should Have Clean Water and Shaded Place.

A cow that has to fight flies all day in a pasture where the grass is scant, travel half a mile or more every time she wants a drink, and stand all night in a hot, close and dirty stable ought not to be expected to earn much money by her milk.

Why, the cow is actually fighting for her life during the hot days unless she is properly cared for, and if she gives a drop of milk it is more than she ought to do.

Cows drink a surprisingly large amount of water every day if they can. In a herd of a dozen some of them will be taking a mouthful every hour of the day where there is a running stream or cool, clean water in a trough.

If cows have to travel half a mile three or four times a day in hot weather to get a drink they will certainly lose in the milk-giving power every time. It isn't nature to keep up a normal supply under such conditions.

It is not an uncommon sight to see cows running wildly across the sun-scorched field, mad with thirst and the torment of flies, in search of shade and water.

Is it reasonable to suppose the milk supply can be kept up when a cow is in such misery? Hardly.

A cow is a milking machine and should be treated as such. If she is of good dairy blood, has good food, clean water, shade, and is kept free from worry, she will pay her way every time. But even a cow has her limitations.

LOSE TIME, SEED AND MONEY

The illustration shown herewith was drawn from an actual photograph. The owner of the farm had no corn crop and wondered why. Apparently the ground had been broken up when it was dry and no attempt had been made to reduce the big lumps and put the soil into good condition for planting.

Of course, soil in this condition would hardly produce an average crop. In planting some of the corn would lodge on top of the clod while others might fall down into the holes between, six inches deeper.

Time spent in putting corn ground in good condition before planting is never wasted. If the soil is well fined the weeder can be run over it just before the corn comes up and cultivation thereafter will be much easier than if the ground is left in a rough condition.

In case of drought well fined soil will, if it receives frequent cultivation, retain moisture much longer than rough ground, and there is really no reason, except ignorance or laxness, which should prevent this most important work in the growing of corn.

PRES. DIAZ IS RE-ELECTED

RAMON CORRAL IS NAMED AS VICE-PRESIDENT.

President of Mexican Republic Wins Out by an Overwhelming Majority in National Election.

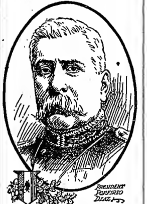
The anti-re-electionists' ticket, headed by Francisco I. Madero, now under arrest in San Luis Potosi, received about 2 per cent of the votes cast in Mexico City, according to an unofficial statement. It is estimated that between 40,000 and 50,000 were cast in the capital.



PRESIDENT PORFIRIO DIAZ

Eight hundred electors were chosen in Mexico City, of whom only four are of the anti-re-electionists. From telegrams received from various parts of the republic, the same proportionate vote prevailed throughout the country.

RAMON CORRAL

The election in Mexico City passed off quietly.

The electors now chosen will meet in the electoral college on July 10 to vote for deputies and senators, on July 11 to officially declare the election of a president and vice-president and on July 12 to name judges of the supreme court.

AMERICANS ARE VICTORIOUS.

Berlin.—The Americans interested in the long and bitter fight waged by rival industrial interests and German newspapers against the Deutsche Vacuum Oil company, one of the branches of the Standard Oil company, have just scored a big victory, the public prosecutor at Hamburg having decided that no necessity exists for action by his office against the concern.

A well-known Hamburg newspaper for months printed such a series of attacks on the "American graft methods" alleged to have been practised by the vacuum company in the conduct of its German business that the public prosecutor of Hamburg felt constrained to make an official investigation with a view to eventual indictments. The prosecutor has now concluded his investigation, especially of the work of E. L. Quarles, American manager of the German company's sales department, and announces that no necessity exists for pursuing the inquiry further.

No evidence of anything warranting prosecution was found against Mr. Quarles, and the costs of the entire inquiry will be borne by the state.

The result of the investigation constitutes a notable triumph for American interests in Germany.

It is not the first time that Germans, finding themselves unable to compete with Americans on ordinary terms, have resorted to slander.

Deadwood Gas Plant Burns.

Deadwood, South Dakota. — Fire, starting from some hot ashes dumped near the woodwork, caused a fire which almost totally destroyed the plant and mains of the Deadwood Gas company, between the two cities. Owing to the distance from water, the firemen were powerless to do much, and they were afraid of explosions. The company supplies both cities with gas and is now practically out of business for some weeks. The loss is about $35,000, with little insurance. New machinery has been ordered.

Get After the Flies.

With the warm days flies multiply amazingly. Now is the time to attack them and prevent the breeding of millions from the few hundreds that already exist.

Perhaps the most effective method of destroying flies is by burning pyrethrum in each room. This stuns the flies and they can be swept up and burned.

Flies are dangerous carriers of disease and an enemy of humankind. Do your part toward keeping down the pest and improving the health of your community.

The Luggage Question.

DeLancey Nicoll, lawyer, is always a well-dressed man, and abominates a slovenly appearance. At the Union club he said of a westerner one day:

"He has come on to New York for a week and I don't believe he has brought a stitch of luggage with him."

Here Mr. Nicoll smiled.

"Unless, indeed," he added, "he's stowed something in the large bags he carries in the knees of his trousers."

German Alcohol Stills.

An authority on alcohol stills says that there are 20,000 farm stills in operation on as many forms in Germany. The German government permits the farmer to produce a certain amount of grain or potato alcohol, the amount depending upon the size and location of the farm and the annual demand for the product, upon the payment of a reduced revenue tax. Alcohol distilled in excess of the quantity allowed is subject to the higher rate of taxation. Denatured alcohol, however, is not subject to any tax.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson told Miss Innes that she was hiding evidence from him. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. It developed that the intruder was probably a woman. Gertrude was suspected, for the intruder left a print of a bare foot. Gertrude returned home with her right ankle sprained. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff button.

"Undoubtedly. Why, what could it be but flight? Miss Innes, let me reconstruct that evening, as I see it. Bailey and Armstrong had quarreled at the club. I learned this to-day. Your nephew brought Bailey over. Prompted by jealous, insane fury, Armstrong followed, coming across by the path. He entered the billiard room wing—perhaps rapping, and being admitted by your nephew. Just inside he was shot, by some one on the circular staircase. The shot fired, your nephew and Bailey left the house at once, going toward the automobile house. They left by the lower road, which prevented them being heard, and when you and Miss Gertrude got downstairs everything was quiet."

"But—Gertrude's story," I stammered.

"Miss Gertrude only brought forward her explanation the following morning. I do not believe it, Miss Innes. It is the story of a loving and ingenious woman."

"And—this thing to-night?"

"May upset my whole view of the case. We must give the benefit of every doubt after all. We may, for instance, come back to the figure on the porch; if it was a woman you saw that night through the window, we might start with other premises. Or Mr. Innes' explanation may turn us in a new direction. It is possible that he shot Arnold Armstrong as a burglar and then fled, frightened at what he had done. In any case, however, I feel confident that the body was here when he left. Mr. Armstrong left the club ostensibly for a moonlight saunter, about half after eleven o'clock. It was three when the shot was fired."

I leaned back bewildered. It seemed to me that the evening had been full of significant happenings, had I only held the key. Had Gertrude been the fugitive in the clothes chute? Who was the man on the drive near the lodge, and whose gold-mounted dressing-bag had I seen in the lodge sitting room?

It was late when Mr. Jamieson finally got up to go. I went with him to the door, and together we stood looking out over the valley. Below lay the village of Casanova, with its Old World houses, its blossoming trees and its peace. Above on the hill across the valley were the lights of the Greenwood club. It was even possible to see the curving row of parallel lights that marked the carriage road. Rumors that I had heard about the club came back—of drinking, of high play, and once, a year ago, of a suicide under those very lights.

Mr. Jamieson left, taking a short cut to the village, and I still stood there. It must have been after 11, and the monotonous tick of the big clock on the stairs behind me was the only sound. Then I was conscious that some one was running up the drive. In a minute a woman darted into the area of light made by the open door, and caught me by the arm. It was Rosie—Rosie in a state of collapse from terror, and, not the least important, clutching one of my Coalport plates and a silver spoon.

She stood staring into the darkness behind, still holding the plate. I got her into the house and secured the plate; then I stood and looked down at her where she crouched trembling against the doorway.

"Well," I asked, "didn't your young man enjoy his meal?"

She couldn't speak. She looked at the spoon she still held—I wasn't so anxious about it; thank Heaven, it wouldn't chip—and then she stared at me.

"I appreciate your desire to have everything nice for him," I went on, "but the next time, you might take the Limoges china. It's more easily duplicated and less expensive."

"I haven't a young man—not here." She had got her breath now, as I had guessed she would. "I—I have been chased by a thief, Miss Innes."

"Did he chase you out of the house and back again?" I asked.

Then Rosie began to cry—not silently, but noisily, hysterically. I stopped her by giving her a good shake.

"What in the world is the matter with you?" I snapped. "Has the day of good common sense gone by! Sit up and tell me the whole thing."

Rosie sat up then, and sniffled.

"I was coming up the drive—" she began.

"You must start with when you went down the drive, with my dishes and my silver," I interrupted, but, seeing more signs of hysteria, I gave in. "Very well. You were coming up the drive—"

"I had a basket of—of silver and dishes on my arm, and I was carrying the plate, because—because I was afraid I'd break it. Part-way up the road a man stepped out of the bushes, and held his arm like this, spread out, so I couldn't get past. He said—he said—'Not so fast, young lady; I want you to let me see what's in that basket.'"

She got up in her excitement and took hold of my arm.

"It was like this, Miss Innes," she said, "and say you was the man. When he said that, I screamed and ducked under his arm like this. He caught at the basket and I dropped it. I ran as fast as I could, and he came after as far as the trees. Then he stopped. Oh, Miss Innes, it must have been the man that killed that Mr. Armstrong!"

"Don't be foolish," I said. "Whoever killed Mr. Armstrong would put as much space between himself and this house as he could. Go up to bed now; and mind, if I hear of this story being repeated to the other maids, I shall deduct from your wages for every broken dish I find in the drive."

I could fancy Liddy's face when she missed the extra pieces of china—she had opposed Rosie from the start. If Liddy once finds a prophecy fulfilled, especially an unpleasant one, she never allows me to forget it. It seemed to me that it was absurd to leave that china dotted along the road for her to spy the next morning; so with a sudden resolution, I opened the door again and stepped out into the darkness. As the door closed behind me I half regretted my impulse; then I shut my teeth and went on.

I Was Conscious That Some One Was Running Up the Drive.

I have never been a nervous woman, as I said before. Moreover, a minute or two in the darkness enabled me to see things fairly well. Beulah gave me rather a start by rubbing unexpectedly against my feet; then we two, side by side, went down the drive.

There were no fragments of china, but where the grove began I picked up a silver spoon. So far Rosie's story was borne out; I began to wonder if it were not indiscreet, to say the least, this midnight prowling in a neighborhood with such a deservedly bad reputation. Then I saw something gleaming, which proved to be the handle of a cup, and a step or two farther on I found a V-shaped bit of plate. But the most surprising thing of all was to find the basket sitting comfortably beside the road, with the rest of the broken crockery piled neatly within, and a handful of small silver, spoons, forks and the like, on top! I could only stand and stare. Then Rosie's story was true. But where had Rosie carried her basket? And why had the thief, if he were a thief, picked up the broken china out of the road and left it, with his booty?

It was with my nearest approach to a nervous collapse that I heard the familiar throbbing of an automobile engine. As it came closer I recognized the outline of the Dragon Fly, and knew that Halsey had come back.

Strange enough it must have seemed to Halsey, too, to come across me in the middle of the night, with the skirt of my gray silk gown over my shoulders to keep off the dew, holding a red and green basket under one arm and a black cat under the other. What with relief and joy, I began to cry, right there, and very nearly wiped my eyes on Beulah in the excitement.

CHAPTER IX.

Just Like a Girl.

"Aunt Ray!" Halsey said from the gloom behind the lamps. "What in the world are you doing here?"

"Taking a walk," I said, trying to be composed. I don't think the answer struck either of us as being ridiculous at the time. "Oh, Halsey, where have you been?"

"Let me take you up to the house." He was in the road, and had Beulah and the basket out of my arms in a moment. I could see the car plainly now, and Warner was at the wheel—Warner in an ulster and a pair of slippers, over heaven knows what. Jack Bailey was not there. I got in, and we went slowly and painfully up to the house.

We did not talk. What we had to say was too important to commence there, and, besides, it took all kinds of coaxing from both men to get the Dragon Fly up the last grade. Only when we had closed the front door and stood facing each other in the hall did Halsey say anything. He slipped his strong young arm around my shoulders and turned me so I faced the light.

"Poor Aunt Ray!" he said gently. And I nearly wept again. "I—I must see Gertrude, too; we will have a three-cornered talk."

And then Gertrude herself came down the stairs. She had not been to bed evidently; she still wore the white negligee she had worn earlier in the evening, and she limped somewhat. During her slow progress down the stairs I had time to notice one thing: Mr. Jamieson had said the woman who escaped from the cellar had worn no shoe on her right foot. Gertrude's right ankle was the one she had sprained!

The meeting between brother and sister was tense, but without tears. Halsey kissed her tenderly, and I noticed evidences of strain and anxiety in both young faces.

"Is everything—right?" she asked.

"Right as can be," with forced cheerfulness.

I lighted the living room and we went in there. Only a half-hour before I had sat with Mr. Jamieson in that very room, listening while he overtly accused both Gertrude and Halsey of at least a knowledge of the death of Arnold Armstrong. Now Halsey was here to speak for himself: I should learn everything that had puzzled me.

"I saw it in the paper to-night for the first time," he was saying. "It knocked me dumb. When I think of this houseful of women, and a thing like that occurring!"

Gertrude's face was still set and white. "That isn't all, Halsey," she said. "You and—and Jack left almost at the time it happened. The detective here thinks that you—that we—know something about it."

"The devil he does!" Halsey's eyes were fairly starting from his head. "I beg your pardon, Aunt Ray, but—the fellow's a lunatic."

"Tell me everything, won't you, Halsey?" I begged. "Tell me where you went that night, or rather morning, and why you went as you did. This has been a terrible 48 hours for all of us."

He stood staring at me, and I could see the horror of the situation dawning in his face.

"I can't tell you where I went, Aunt Ray," he said after a moment. "As to why, you will learn that soon enough. But Gertrude knows that Jack and I left the house before this thing—this horrible murder—occurred."

"Mr. Jamieson does not believe," Gertrude said drearily. "Halsey, if the worst comes, if they should arrest you, you must—tell."

"I shall tell nothing," he said with a new sternness in his voice. "Aunt Ray, it was necessary for Jack and me to leave that night. I cannot tell you why—just yet. As to where we went, if I have to depend on that as an alibi, I shall not tell. The whole thing is an absurdity, a trumped-up charge that cannot possibly be serious."

"Has Mr. Bailey gone back to the city," I demanded, "or to the club?"

"Neither," defiantly; "at the present moment I do not know where he is."

"Halsey," I asked gravely, leaning forward, "have you the slightest suspicion who killed Arnold Armstrong? The police think he was admitted from within, and that he was shot down from above, by some one on the circular staircase."

"I know nothing of it," he maintained; but I fancied I caught a sudden glance at Gertrude, a flash of something that died as it came.

As quietly, as calmly as I could, I went over the whole story, from the night Liddy and I had been alone up to the strange experience of Rosie and her pursuer. The basket still stood on the table, a mute witness to this last mysterious occurrence.

"There is something else," I said hesitatingly, at the last. "Halsey, I have never told this even to Gertrude, but the morning after the crime I found, in a tulip bed, a revolver. It—it was yours, Halsey."

For an appreciable moment Halsey stared at me. Then he turned to Gertrude.

"My revolver, Trude!" he exclaimed. "Why, Jack took my revolver with him, didn't he?"

"Oh, for heaven's sake don't say that," I implored. "The detective thinks possibly Jack Bailey came back, and—and the thing happened then."

"He didn't come back," Halsey said sternly. "Gertrude, when you brought down a revolver that night for Jack to take with him, what one did you bring? Mine?"

Gertrude was defiant now.

"No. Yours was loaded, and I was afraid of what Jack—might do. I gave him one I have had for a year or two. It was empty."

Halsey threw up both hands despairingly.

"If that isn't like a girl!" he said. "Why didn't you do what I asked you to, Gertrude? You send Bailey off with an empty gun, and throw mine in a tulip bed, of all places on earth! Mine was a 38 caliber. The inquest will show, of course, that the bullet that killed Armstrong was a 38. Then where shall I be?"

"You forget," I broke in, "that I have the revolver, and that no one knows about it."

But Gertrude had risen angrily.

"I cannot stand it; it is always with me," she cried. "Halsey, I did not throw your revolver into the tulip bed. I—think—you—did—it—yourself!"

OREGON HAS KINDEST MAN

Panjah River Hermit Refuses to Kill Wild Animals That Destroy His Crops.

If you lived in the woods where bear, deer and cougars actually interfered with your farming operations and devoured your crops, would you have any hesitation about killing the offending varmints? Frank Lotcon, a German hermit living alone on the Panjah river in the Blue mountains, in Oregon, thinks it wrong to kill wild animals and they bully him unmercifully.

Although for years he has lived in a district where all sorts of wild animals are numerous, he has never killed one yet. "They frequently cause me much trouble," he says, "but it is wrong to kill them."

Recently he awoke in the morning to see two large cougars glaring at hit through the windows of his cabin. The mountaineer could easily have killed both of them, but he said he had no objection to have them inspect the interior of his house. After watching him for several minutes, the wildcats slunk away into the timber.

A field of corn planted and cultivated by Lotcon with great care, was destroyed by a herd of deer. Several acres of the corn was eaten to the ground. Mr. Lotcon could easily have killed the deer the morning after the animals devoured the corn, but he did not molest them. A big deer recently created havoc with the irrigation scheme Mr. Lotcon has carried out on his farm. Wallowing in the spring from which the water is drawn, the deer squeezed mud into the outlet pipe, stopping it up, and the crops suffered before the cause of the trouble was discovered.

Taking all these things into account, Oregon may claim to have the kindest man.

A Burglar's Text Book.

The police of New York found upon a burglar, arrested by them, a treatise on safe-cracking that is said to be the most remarkable document that has ever fallen into their hands. The contents are so well compiled that the police unhesitatingly declare the author a past grand master in his profession, and, according to Popular Mechanics, are somewhat anxious to find out just how many copies are in circulation throughout the country.

For the most part the manuscript is in the yegg code, a lingo freely used by thieves the country over. It describes the two kinds of safes recognized by the profession, namely, the fireproof and the burglar-proof, asserting, however, that there is no genuine burglar-proof safe, and that kind that are drill-proof are only called so by courtesy. Minute directions for cracking a safe are given, together with diagrams to illustrate the treatise.

His Favorite Song.

There is a young optician in Denver, Col., who sings very well. The other night he was making a call on a couple of sisters up on Corona street when he was asked to sing.

"What shall it be?" he asked as he went to the piano.

"All right," he replied: And then the optician sat down and sang "The Night Hath a Thousand Eyes."

Guilt Revealed.

"Johnny, do you smoke cigarettes?"

"I d-d-do a l-l-little, sir," stammered Johnny, paling beneath the tan of the baseball field.

"Then gimme me one," he said. "I left mine on the bureau."

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

A Teacher in the Making.

She was a popular young normal student, who had been to a party the night before, and as a consequence, was "not prepared" in the geography class.

The woman instructor, true to her method of drawing upon the general knowledge of a student rather than to permit a failure, after eliciting two or three inconsequential "stabs" from her fair but jaded disciple, asked for the products of China.

The victim brightened. "Tea," she asserted, preparing to sit down.

"Yes, and what else?" encouraged the instructor.

The young woman smiled with sweet hopelessness.

"Now you can mention others, I am sure. Just think about it."

"Tea," drawled the flute-like voice of the pretty girl, "and," puckering her forehead with an intellectual tour de force, "and laundry work."—Youth's Companion.

BOY TORTURED BY ECZEMA

"When my boy was six years old, he suffered terribly with eczema. He could neither sit still nor lie quietly in bed, for the itching was dreadful. He would irritate spots by scratching with his nails and that only made them worse. A doctor treated him and we tried almost everything, but the eczema seemed to spread. It started in a small place on the lower extremities and spread for two years until it very nearly covered the back part of his leg to the knee.

"Finally, I got Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills and gave them according to directions. I used them in the morning and that evening, before I put my boy to bed, I used them again and the improvement even in those few hours was surprising, the inflammation seemed to be so much less. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, the same of the Pills and the Soap and my boy was cured. My son is now in his seventeenth year and he has never had a return of the eczema.

"I took care of a friend's child that had eczema on its face and limbs and I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They acted on the child just as they did on my son and it has never returned. I would recommend the Cuticura Remedies to anyone. Mrs. A. J. Cochran, 1823 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 20, 1909."

In the Way.

"You haven't much of a memory for dates," said the conversational boarder.

"Nope," replied Farmer Corntossel. "I used to have. But it interferes with business when you're sellin' spring chickens."

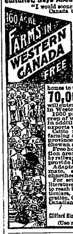
WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:



"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel (800 miles north of the International boundary). Your vacant land will be taken at a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly

70,000 Americans

Ohio Political Fight Opens.

Cleveland, O.—Cheered by an audience of progressive republicans as the "peoples' candidate for governor of Ohio," James R. Garfield Monday night opened the fight to place Ohio in the "insurgent" column. In a two-hour speech in which he avowed himself an "insurgent" and eulogized the section of congress which is known by that name, the former secretary of the interior set forth the platform upon which the "progressive" republicans of this state will enter the fall campaign.

ASKS FOR PROBE

E. ARMITAGE, ONE OF NORTH STAR CO. CREDITORS, SEES COUNTY PROSECUTOR.

WANTS FULL SETTLEMENT

He Declares That Investigation Has Only Scratched the Surface—Seeks To Learn If Stockholders Can Be Compelled To Pay.

Minneapolis, Minn.—E. Armitage, general merchant at Waterville, Minn., a creditor of the defunct North Star Shoe Company to the amount of $5,000, announced that he would lay the matter of the Heffelfinger failures before County Attorney Al Smith and ask that the grand jury investigate.

Mr. Armitage called on the county attorney for this purpose several days ago, but that official was too busy to hear the complaint and it was agreed to take it up later.

Each hearing of the Heffelfinger cases before the referee in bankruptcy has found Mr. Armitage one of the first to arrive and the last to leave. He has had to depend upon the newspapers, he says, for information as to dates of hearings, and declares that the whole conduct of the investigation and efforts at settlement has caused him to take this step toward a grand jury probe.

"When the hearings were started we had reason to believe that the whole thing would be probed to the very bottom," said he, "but, as a matter of fact, just about the net result of the hearings is that W. W. Heffelfinger has been produced in court.

"I, along with numerous other creditors, want to know who the stockholders of the Heffelfinger Shoe Manufacturing Company are and just how many stockholders of the North Star were protected by having their stock transferred to the manufacturing company just before the North Star failure, when it was well known that the North Star was insolvent.

Seek Dollar-for-Dollar Settlement.

"We have information from a former employe of the North Star that the stockholders of the North Star who were protected in this way could pay the North Star creditors dollar for dollar. Also we have legal advice that they could be made to pay.

"This offer of 40 or 50 cents on the dollar as a settlement with creditors does not suit me at all. I do not believe there are any philanthropists engaged in the business of settling bankrupt estates. The stock in trade of the North Star should have brought $200,000 instead of $147,300. The St. Louis concern paid the latter amount for the stock, patents, copyrights, right to the use of the name, and subsequently sold the whole thing with a handsome profit. Why couldn't the creditors, instead of the St. Louis concern, have received what the property was worth and what it brought at final sale?

"There are many more matters of a similar nature which many creditors would like to have exploited and which there is no prospect of under existing conditions."

CARS CRUSH AUTOMOBILE.

Driver Has Narrow Escape From Death When Machine Crumbles.

Minneapolis.—Almost up to his neck in a writhing mess of crackling, crushing, bending wreckage, Louis J. Newmann, 19 years old, 924 Goodrich avenue, St. Paul, miraculously escaped death or injury when his automobile was caught between two street cars coming in opposite directions and literally crumbled to pieces.

The accident occurred at Forty-seventh street and Nicollet avenue. Newmann escaped being seriously hurt by standing high on the front seat while the large machine was rolled and flattened out beneath him. He received only a slight cut on the chin.

Newman, driving a large car, attempted to pass to the left of a outbound Washburn Park and Columbia Heights car which was going in the same direction. It was necessary to cross one track and to the other, on which an inbound car was approaching. Newmann had almost succeeded in passing ahead of the first car and "sneaking" between the two when the crash came.

FIREMEN HOLD RACES.

Tournament of Northern Minnesota Association Arouses Interest.

Bemidji.—The second day of the Northern Minnesota firemen's tournament passed without friction of any kind among the firemen participating in the races and contests. There was a fair crowd in attendance and intense interest was shown in the program.

All visiting firemen are loud in their praise of the hospitality extended by the Bemidji firemen and the Bemidji people generally.

DAN PATCH AIR LINE IS OPENED.

Minneapolis.—The new Dan Patch Air Line began its first regular scheduled service between Minneapolis and Savage, a distance of 12½ miles, when the first motor car left the Washburn park hill at the end of the Nicollet avenue street car line. Two cars were in service, one which was used on the inspection trip, and the other, the "Irene," which has just arrived. The cars carried capacity loads and to each were attached two trailers.

Train Wrecked; No One Hurt.

Faribault.—A Chicago Great Western passenger train was wrecked at Bridgewater, six miles north of here. The front wheels of the engine broke, causing the wreck. No one was hurt. The wrecking crew brought the wrecked train in this morning.

Minneapolis is Wealthy.

Minneapolis. — The Minneapolis assessment for 1910 will probably reach $195,000,000. Last year it was $179,000,000.

TO SELL TIMBER AT AUCTION.

Involves About 375,000,000 Feet on Ceded Indian Lands.

Washington, D. C.—The interior department announced that all the remaining pine timber on the ceded Chippewa Indian lands in Minnesota will be offered for sale to the highest bidder. This involves about 375,000,000 feet, covering 152,840 acres, located in the former Pigeon river, or Grand Portage, Fond du Lac, Boise Fort, Chippewa of the Mississippi, Winnibigoshish, Leech Lake, Red Lake and White Earth reservation.

The greater portion of the timber stands in the Minnesota national forest. It will be the largest sale of Chippewa timber yet held, and the sealed bids under which it will be sold will be opened at the district land office in Cass Lake, Minn., on Sept. 15.

Under the law and rules governing the sale, the timber will be cut and logged by the purchaser, but the logging will be supervised and the scaling will be done by the superintendent of logging and his assistants appointed by the interior department. The purchaser will be allowed four years to remove the timber which is outside the national forest and five years to remove that which stands inside.

BOOSTERS WILL START WORK.

Headquarters For National Gathering Opened in State Capitol.

St. Paul, Minn.—Headquarters have been opened and work actually commenced to preparation for the national conservation congress to be held in St. Paul, Sept. 6.

Thomas R. Shipp, executive secretary, has established offices at the lieutenant governor's office at the state capitol. A meeting of the local board of managers was held at the governor's office. Those present were Governor Eberhart, Frank B. Kellogg, George H. Prince, Paul Doty, J. H. Beek, Ralph W. Wheelock and Thomas R. Shipp. Plans for the raising of the necessary $10,000 were drawn up. The business men of the Twin Cities will be appealed to. Stenographers have been employed and the work of sending out the invitations will be started immediately.

Frank B. Kellogg was appointed vice-chairman of the local board of managers. The governor is the chairman. George H. Prince was selected as treasurer. Major W. C. Heody was appointed secretary to the local board. He will have active charge of all the routine work in connection with the preparation of the congress.

STILLWATER HAS BIG FIRE.

Only Hardest Kind of Work Saves Business Section.

Stillwater, Minn.—Stillwater was visited by a very destructive fire in the business part of the city. The fire started, it is supposed, from a locomotive spark in the second story of the farm implement warehouse of Burtzlaff brothers. This frame structure was rapidly destroyed, with the contents. The brick building and granite establishment of P. N. Peterson was also destroyed. The coal sheds of Fred Luchsinger and J. J. Kilty, were partly burned. The boat houses of G. S. Welshons and Peder Gnalan'e, with their gasoline launches, were destroyed. Several freight cars loaded with hay and merchandise were partly burned.

The total loss will reach $30,000, with about a third of the loss covered by insurance.

The property scorched and saved by hard work of several hundreds of regular and volunteer firemen were the Stillwater equity market, feed mill and elevator, the McKellar and company carriage and wagon factory and a number of other buildings.

M. MULLEN OF NEW ULM DIES.

Prominent Old Settler, Long Identified With Banking Business.

New Ulm. — M. Mullen, seventy-one years old, a prominent old settler of this city, died of paralysis at this home here. In March Mr. Mullen sought to benefit his health by a trip to Texas, but the journey benefited him but little and he began to fail upon his arrival home.

Mr. Mullen was born in Vermont and came to St. Peter in the early days and to New Ulm as early as '69. He was long identified with the Citizens bank here, which bank became a state bank and then a national bank. He was president of the Minnesota & Dakota Cattle company.

WOMAN SHOOTS NEIGHBOR.

Becker, Minn., Victim of Accident is Seriously Wounded.

St. Cloud.—Mrs. Martha Madder, the wife of a prominent farmer, living near Becker, Sherburne county, was brought to the hospital in this city suffering from a bullet wound received on the Fourth of July. A neighbor woman was toying with a 32-calibre revolver, which accidentally was discharged. The bullet struck Mrs. Madden squarely on the chin, shattering the jaw bone, passed around her throat and lodging near the spine.

LUMBER IS BURNED.

Virginia.—Fire at the Virginia and Ratay Lake Lumber Company's mill destroyed between $5,000 and $10,000 of lumber, which was insured.

The quick work of the company's fire department, combined with that of the city department, subdued the fire within fifty feet of the new planer. The wind favored the fighters. The origin was possibly from sparks of near-by burning forests.

BRACE ACCUSED OF ROBBERY.

St. Paul.—Fred Miller and John Burk were arrested at the Union Depot on complaint of John Huss, who said they had taken $10 from him, using the good old-fashioned Queensberry rules.

The cries of Huss attracted the attention of Detective Mike Sweeney and Officer McMahon, and they found the three, in a dark alley by the side of the depot. Huss had a black eye, and gave other evidences of rough handling.

MORE OPTIMISTIC

BIG ORDERS FROM NORTH DAKOTA ARE BEING RAPIDLY REINSTATED.

BUSINESS TONE BETTER

Merchants Who Held Up Orders Some Time Ago Now Request Them to Be Filled—Twin City Jobbers are Optimistic.

St. Paul, Minn., July 14.—A buyer from North Dakota in the city this morning called at the office of the manufacturers whom he had asked to hold up an order of $3,000 worth of clothing. He told them to ship all but $500 of it. Another firm from Grand Forks recently modified their cancellation with the same firm, cancelling only $750 of a $4,000 order they had suspended.

These experiences are typical of most of the jobbing houses of the city. In some lines, where all of the suspensions of orders came from North Dakota, there have been no reinstatements. "It is a little early," said one jobber. From other parts of the northwest full orders are being reinstated.

"The situation is much brighter," said Ambrose Guiterman this morning.

"It's looking so good to me that I intend to leave town," remarked C. L. Kluckholm of Gordon & Ferguson. He leaves today or tomorrow for a ten weeks' trip to Russia, where he will visit the fur centers. Charles W. Gordon of the same firm is also out of town.

"The country merchants are acting as I like to see them," said C. J. McConville, of Finch, Van Slyck & McConville. "When they see that they can't sell the goods we don't want them to take them. The 'hold-ups' we have received amount to only a very small part of our orders, and they are all from North Dakota."

Hold Up Proposed Increase.

Washington, July 14.—The interstate commerce commission announced today its intention to suspend all tariffs naming general and important rate advances, pending an investigation as to the reasonableness of the proposed increases.

"No more definite statement in this regard can be made now," says the commission, "but specific orders will be announced from time to time as they are entered and served."

It is expected the suspension in each case will be for 120 days from the effective date named in the tariff, but the commission intends by subsequent orders to provide for making effective on the same day such advances as may be allowed.

After Real Criminals.

Chicago, July 14.—Judge K. M. Landis' charge to a special federal grand jury empaneled in the United States district court today to hear the evidence in regard to the alleged violation of the anti-trust law by the National Packing Co. and subsidiary companies was most direct and in its instructions to get the real offenders disregarding the mere "aliases" the grand jurors might find. Individual indictments are expected as a result. The jury was cautioned by Judge Landis in his charge to allow their actions to be wholly free from the influence of the oft heard argument that law enforcement will "unsettle business."

East Faces Railroad Strike.

Philadelphia, July 14.—The positive declaration that the failure of the company to meet the demands of the men would be met with a strike was made by W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, just before he joined a conference between W. Heywood Meyers, general manager of the Pennsylvania railroad for the lines east of Pittsburg and 120 committeemen of the conductors' and trainmen's union in the assembly room of the Pennsylvania railroad state today.

Fined for Refusing Census Returns.

Helena, Mont., July 14.—Lewis Wagner, an aged Valley county farmer, who was indicted on the charge of refusing to answer questions propounded by a census enumerator, despite repeated efforts to secure the desired statistical information, entered a plea of guilty and was fined $100. This he paid and immediately afterwards visited the census office and freely answered all queries propounded by the supervisor of this district.

To Settle Boundary Dispute.

Washington, July 14.—A conference on the boundary dispute between Peru and Ecuador today occupied the attention of Acting Secretary of State Huntington Wilson, Charge d'Affaires De Lima E. Silva of Brazil, and Charge d'Affaires Villagas of Argentina, representing the three mediating powers which are endeavoring to bring about amicable relations between the two republics by arranging the long disputed border line.

Appointed Collector.

Washington, D. C., July 14.—Willis C. Cook of North Dakota has been appointed collector of internal revenue for the district of North and South Dakota.

Conservation Convention Program.

Chicago, July 14.—Gifford Pinchot, president of the national conservation congress, and its executive committee met here today to consider the features of the tentative program of the next meeting of the congress. Mr. Pinchot went into secret conference with the members of the committee.

Governor Eberhart of Minnesota also was present.

It is understood that objections have been made to certain features of the proposed program which are thought to have decided leanings toward the Pinchot side of the Pinchot-Ballinger controversy.

Consul Asks for Tent.

Washington, July 14.—With the entire town of Campbellton, N. B., swept away by fire, United States Consul Botkins today telegraphed to the state department requesting that a wall tent be sent him for use as a temporary office. He said not a store was left in the town and only a few buildings.

King Edward's Funeral Cost $202,500.

London, July 14.—The elaborate funeral given King Edward cost the nation $202,500 as is shown in the supplementary financial estimate issued today.

CONFERS WITH HUGHES

ROOSEVELT DISCUSSES SITUATION IN NEW YORK.

Wants Best Man for Governor of New York and one Acceptable to Rank and File of the Republicans

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 13.—Theodore Roosevelt gave his first indication of his position in respect to the nomination of the republican governor of New York this fall.

Mr. Roosevelt in an interview said: "My position in regard to the governorship this fall is this: I went to find the best man for the office, a man who is most acceptable to the rank and file of the republican party and the independent voters. I intend to do everything in my power to see that such a man is elected."

Roosevelt's indication of his position made less than an hour after the departure for New York of Governor Hughes, is taken as a significant sidelight on the conference between the governor and the colonel. While both men refused this morning to disclose the precise subject matter of their conference, it is believed from the colonel's attitude that it was decided that Mr. Roosevelt shall take an active personal part in the nomination of a candidate for governor.

Governor Hughes left at 10 o'clock for New York in the automobile of Wm. R. Wilcox. He said he would meet his military secretary, Frederick M. Crossett at the Hotel Astor and that they would leave this afternoon for Washington, where the governor is to select a house to move into this fall when he goes on the supreme court bench.

That was all he would say.

"I had a delightful visit with Governor Hughes," he said. "We had a most interesting talk."

"Did you talk politics with him?" he was asked.

The question seemed to amuse him. "Of course, we talked of political conditions. What else could we talk about? We discussed things which we have been anxious for a long time to talk of."

That was all he was willing to say as to the conference.

Eagles in Parade.

Fargo, July 13.—The big event of today for the state meeting of Fraternal Order of Eagles, which began its annual convention in this city yesterday afternoon was the street parade which took place at 10 o'clock this morning, and which notwithstanding the fact that there were not many people in line as expected was a most creditable one.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon the state aerie went into secret session for the purpose of hearing reports of the various committees, election of officers and a place for the 1911 convention. This, it is expected will occupy the attention of the convention until the hour for adjourning which has been set for 5 o'clock.

Murderer Gets Thirty Years.

Ellendale, N. D., July 13.—Robert Boatner, charged with the murder of Richard A. Mock at Forbes, this county on May 3 over a dispute of $5 due on wages, was found guilty of murder in the second degree by a jury this morning.

The jury fixed the sentence at thirty years in the penitentiary. The trial was concluded at midnight and the jury was out five hours.

Mock was shot twice. He was taken to a hospital at Minneapolis on the evening of May 3, where he died on May 6. The shooting was declared to have been premeditated and without cause.

Boatner admitted the killing, but claimed self-defense.

Nation Wide Strike Possible.

New York, July 13.—It was announced today by the general strike committee of the 60,000 striking cloak makers that there was the possibility of a general strike of the cloak makers throughout the country. Representatives of the union in all large cities where cloaks and suits are made are in New York to confer with the strike leaders. The report said that unions in their various cities are ready to call a strike at a moment's notice.

Train Dispatcher Fired.

Cincinnati, O., July 13.—Albert Smith a train dispatcher for the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad at Dayton has been relieved of his position. He was dismissed, the officials said today, more than a week ago for his connection with the Middletown wreck in which twenty-three people lost their lives July 4.

Five Aeronauts Killed.

Leichlingen, Rhenish Prussia, July 13.—Oscar Erbsloch, the German aeronaut who won the international balloon race at St. Louis in 1907, and four companions were killed today when the dirigible balloon Erbsloch burst at a height of several hundred feet and dropped to the ground a crumpled mess.

Farmer Is Fined.

Hampton Iowa, July 14.—It cost S. S. Sharpe a fine of $99 and costs to pay for damages done by his sheep to the crop of William Rodemeyer, a neighbor. The controversy has been pending some time and at one time bordered on an incipient feud.

Drown When Track Sinks.

Kenora, Ont., July 13.—The War Eagle dump on the Canadian Pacific went down early today and the water is flowing over it. A pile driver and a train load of piles, and timber were sent to bridge the gap, train No. 97 and the boat express being held here. Passengers on the Kenora local were transferred and brought here on a special.

When the dump went down four Galician laborers were thrown into the water. Three scrambled out, but one was drowned. The old single track dump at War Eagle had stood undisturbed for twenty-five years.

Shooting Mystery Solved.

Chicago, July 13.—The mystery in the shooting of Raymond Mahonay, by Elher Cooper, Monday morning was solved today according to the police by the confession of Theodore Burgess, who declared that Mahonay, John Rush and himself lay in wait for Cooper and attempted to rob him.

Rush is a brother of Cathryna Rush, Cooper's fiancee who said good night to Cooper just before the fatal shot was fired. Burgess was wounded in the back by one of the shots from Cooper's revolver and was in hiding until this afternoon when he was traced to a physician's office.

EAGLES IN FARGO

FRATERNAL ORDER IS HOLDING ANNUAL CONVENTION IN GATE CITY.

100 DELEGATES ATTEND

Every Aerie in North Dakota Represented at the Big Meeting—Wednesday Will Be the Big Day of the Convention.

Fargo, July 12.—The annual convention of state aerie of the fraternal order of Eagles convened this afternoon at 2 o'clock in Loyal Knight's hall, this city. It was called to order by Bernard Mullen, state president of Grand Forks, with all the state officers present.

There were in the neighborhood of 100 accredited delegates here, representing the nineteen aeries in the state and a membership of 2,700. Mr. Mullen in opening the convention stated that the object of the state conventions was to suggest new laws to better the condition or the subordinate aeries as well as to get recognition on the part of the grand aerie for the individual states.

In the absence of Mayor, Lovell. Alderman E. E. Cole gave a hearty welcome to the visitors, at the hearty welcome to the visitors, at the same time extending to them the hospitality of the city. He said that Fargo was always glad to welcome visitors and was particularly pleased to welcome representatives of this large and growing fraternity.

Then followed the appointment of the committees on credentials, resolutions, on constitution and additional by-laws and routine business. The convention will adjourn shortly after 4 o'clock this afternoon to enable the visitors to witness the baseball game between the Athletics of this city and the celebrated Picketts of Grand Forks. This evening the ladies will be given a ride over the trolly lines and at 8 o'clock the annual banquet to delegates and state officers will take place in the dining room of the Metropole hotel. This will be followed by a reception and ball for Eagles and their ladies at Stone's Music hall.

FAKE UPRISING.

Stock Broker Was Behind Recent Cuban Insurrection.

Havana, July 12.—The purpose of Colonel Joorje Valora and his associates were arrested yesterday, was to compel American intervention, according to government's information. The secretary of the interior has issued an official statement that it was learned some days ago a conspiracy existed with the design of blowing up bridges and railways and the destruction of property of foreigners.

The investigation resulted in the discovery that the suspects were in constant communication with a stock broker whose name is not known.

A description of him has been obtained and the police are making an active search for him. The arrests were delayed until the four conspirators had started for Viaja Bermeja, where is is believed they intended to begin operations.

When arrested one of the conspirators named Valeriana Pico, voluntarily declared the whole conspiracy was a fake and merely an attempt to make a pretense of an uprising to break the local stock market by committing some damage, not serious to property.

Pinchot to Aid Campaign.

New York, July 12.—Gifford Pinchot, the close friend of Colonel Roosevelt and the deposed United States forester, announced today that he would leave for California tomorrow to take the stump in behalf of Hiram Johnson, who is seeking the gubernatorial nomination in California and who is endorsed for that honor by the Lincoln-Roosevelt league of California.

Pinchot's announcement was made shortly after a conference with Colonel Roosevelt in which Marshal Stimson of Los Angeles, Cal., also took part. Mr. Pinchot said he would make several speeches in behalf of Mr. Johnson's candidacy which he indicated was being strongly opposed by the old line republican organizations of that state.

Neither Mr. Pinchot nor Marshal Stimson would say that Colonel Roosevelt had given his assurances of support to Mr. Johnson's gubernatorial aspirations, but the fact that Mr. Pinchot's announcement came within a few minutes after leaving Colonel Roosevelt's office caused general belief among politicians that Mr. Roosevelt endorsed Mr. Johnson in his efforts to secure the nomination.

Stage Goes Over Cliff.

Yosemite, Cal., July 12—A four-horse stage coach carrying eleven passengers bound for El Portal, the gateway of the Yosemite National park, went over a cliff into the Mercer river, a fall of 100 feet, Sunday. One man and three women were carried down with the stage and were injured seriously. The other passengers and the driver jumped in time. Two horses were killed.

The coach was rounding a sharp curve known as "Devil's Elbow" on the stage road between Yosemite and El Portal. One of the leaders stumbled and knocked the outside leading horse over the cliff. Two wheelers and stage went over after it. When the driver saw that the coach was going, he called to the passengers to jump, at the same time leaping to safety himself.

Noted Englishman Dead.

Bournemouth, Eng., July 12.—Hon C. B. Rolls, son of Lord Llangatteck, and the hero of the recent channel flight from Dover to France and return, was killed this morning by a fall while flying with his Wright biplane. The machine suddenly buckled up while forty feet from the ground, was overturned and the young aviator was dashed to the earth.

Captain Rolle was 33 years old and was one of the most popular young sportsmen in England. His death will be a great blow to the aristocratic sporting enthusiasts, with all of whom he was a great personal favorite.

Roblin Wins Out.

Winnipeg, Man., July 12.—Roblin government of Manitoba and government ownership of elevators, succeeded at the polls today, conservatives electing twenty-seven and liberals fifteen seats. All cabinet members had big majorities.

Arrested for Rioting.

Columbus, O., July 12.—Four men were arrested at Newark early today on information furnished by the governor's office and charged with participating in the lynching riot last Friday night.

WHEN BIG BOSSES MIX

by JOHN BRAND

COPYRIGHT BY THE AUTHOR

SO FAR as things political go, Pat O'Brien owns the town. So far as the railroad goes, and that is to the jumping-off place in the Pacific ocean, Joe Dale owns the railroad. Dale's railroad moves and has a large part of its being in O'Brien's town. Soon or late these two men were sure to war for supremacy in the town, and this is the story of how it happened. The people of the town and the stockholders of the railroad don't come into the story at all. They only furnished the sinews of war, which fact is abundant proof that the story is true.

Pat O'Brien's town calls him the cardinal. In a moment of angry defeat, a silk-stockinged enemy, too polite to liken Pat to the devil, sourly dubbed him a second Cardinal Richelieu. The name tickled the town's fancy, and it stuck.

The cardinal didn't mind. He was too busy to cavil at mere names. His business as a stockbroker grew with the town, he had for customers men like John, the son and henchman of Joe Dale, and when John bought and sold stocks it was to be supposed that the cardinal profited through inside knowledge. Other business friends were powerful and their friendship financially was worth while. Colonel Legarde, who controls the Superior railroad, is also president of the Interstate Electric railway, an electric road, with terminals and local lines in the town. The electric road needed many political favors and the cardinal obtained them for it, or for his friend Colonel Legarde. Really there was no other way to get anything. Unless and until Pat nodded his head there was nothing doing, for the town council fed out of his hand and state legislators followed out his orders.

Pat O'Brien waxed rich. But one generation away from the "ould sod" his clothes spelled American business man, but his neckties faded the solar spectrum to a neutral tint, and marked the politician who bought and sold franchises and dealt out jobs at will. Knowing the times to talk and to keep silence, a loyal friend and a deadly enemy, he made money for his stock dabbling [illegible], serenely grafting his political way as the safest means to a desired end, and was worth a million and a half, at least. He owned the town.

As John Dale's business of owning the railroad grew greater and more complex, he was more and more away from Lacedaemon—for that is better Greek than the real name of the town, anyhow—it became necessary for him to ask favors of the cardinal, and the favors were given with open hand. Dale found it necessary, too, to have a daily local organ and a voice wherewith to fool the people. He bought the Daily Planet Publishing company, and made Pat O'Brien president. Dale regarded the presidency a reward for favors received and a final binding of the town boss to his chariot tail. The cardinal knew that Pollock, the editor, received all his orders from Dale, and regarded the presidency as something of a joke. Grown to full stature among the other railroad kings, ruling had become a habit with Joe Dale. He made and unmade towns and the people in them at will, and expected no other interest than Joe Dale's to be thought of, or moved in, or lived for by any one connected with him. Sometimes he mistook his man, as when one day he went into the office of one of his eminent and well-paid legal aids and found the lawyer dead to the outside world and Joe Dale's business in a volume of Balzac.

The railroad king blew up. "I don't pay you to read dum French novels," he roared. The lawyer looked at him a long moment.

"Mr. Dale," he finally said, "You pay me for what I know, not what I do. I'll read dum French novels"—crescendo—"or do any other dum thing"—forte—"any dum time or any dum place"—fortissimo—"I dum please!" ending with a Wagnerian bang on the table.

Whereupon Joe Dale changed the subject.

Dale thought he owned the president of the Daily Planet company, but the cardinal had other thoughts about the matter. Colonel Legarde wanted a new franchise for an extension of the Interstate to a summer resort, some 30 miles away. The proposed extension would pass through another town or two on its way to the lake and would parallel Joe Dale's steam road. Now Joe Dale and the colonel were bitterly at outs over various grabbings and snatchings each had made at the other's magnateship. The cardinal could not see that this concerned him at all. The extension would be a benefit and a convenience to the town. There was money in it for him. The deal was on.

Then Joe Dale came from New York and sent for the cardinal. The two men faced each other with the eyes of poker players in a game, keen, deep, unfathomable. For the rest, it might have been a whiskered farmer in his Sunday suit meeting a city man, otherwise correctly clad, wearing a red, red ascot tie.

"I hear," said Dale, "That the Interstate people want a franchise for that foolish summer resort extension of theirs."

"I hear so too," the cardinal replied.

"I don't want it. It parallels my road. Your city council must refuse the franchise." Here was no slushy talk or thought of the rights of people or of stockholders. It was "my road," and "your council." The cardinal was undisturbed. "The people want it, Mr. Dale," he said, "it will be a great convenience for travel between the towns and the lake."

Dale measured his man again. There were the cool, unfathomable eyes, the correct clothes, the red tie. The red necktie settled it. O'Brien was only a cheap politician after all. He must be shown.

"You know, O'Brien, the Planet will oppose this thing to the bitter end, and you are the president of the Daily Planet Publishing company. It will place you in a nasty light." This was no news to the cardinal, and his eyes were accustomed to nasty lights. But he said, in the tone of a man who half surrenders: "I hadn't thought of that."

"YOU BLOCK THAT FRANCHISE OR YOU WON'T BE PRESIDENT OF THE PLANET COMPANY LONG"

"PAT, I HAVE A PRIVATE TIP THAT A BIG KILLING IS COMING OFF IN NIPPER STOCK"

"Pollock will roast you," the magnate went on, "Of course he can't do it by name, but he will do you up. You must block this franchise. I insist on it, as your friend."

"Well, Mr. Dale, Colonel Legarde is my friend too," continued the cardinal.

"The extension will parallel my road. You must stop it," snapped Dale, irritated by the mention of his enemy's name. He cared nothing about the extension itself, but that Colonel Legarde wanted it was enough to make him fight the franchise. O'Brien knew this as the real reason and went on deliberately.

"It will be a hard thing to do. Colonel Legarde is popular—"

This second mention of Legarde was too much for the temper of the railroad king. He blew up.

"Dum Legarde!" he shouted. "You block that franchise or you won't be president of the Planet company long."

"Hold on, Mr. Dale. Don't get hostile. I'd no idea you were so dead set against this thing."

"Well, I am. And I don't want to have to tell you about it again."

"You won't have to," the cardinal assured him, and departed, well satisfied with the fact that he had made Dale too mad to see that no promise had been given to block the obnoxious franchise.

Joe Dale went back to New York convinced that he had shown the man with the red necktie it was not safe for Joe Dale's men to fool with the Dale buzz saw. Apparently he had, for when the franchise came before the council it was chewed over, chewed up, delayed, tabled, taken up again, juggled with, side tracked and everything but killed outright. Public interest in it lagged. Pollock of the Planet, his fears soothed by the parliamentary acrobatics which he thought were only O'Brien's method of "saving face," took himself and his loaded editorial pen to New York on business.

This was the cardinal's time, and he acted quickly. At the next meeting of the city council the franchise was rushed through. But this was not all. In the absence of Pollock the president of the Planet company assumed authority, and the morning after, out came the Planet with news descriptions of the Interstate extension, scare-head, first page, and double-leaded indorsement of the council's action, the need of Lacedaemon for the proposed road and the many benefits it would bring to the city, on the editorial page. The people read and marveled. Some laughed and others of the knowing ones looked scared. Dale's guns were spiked. He had no other local means of attacking the franchise or the cardinal, and any way the deed was done. All wondered what he would do.

They didn't wonder long. As fast as a railroad king can get over the rails, Joe Dale came to Lacedaemon. He almost literally threw the Daily Planet out of its office windows, murdered it and jumped on its corpse. He fired Pat O'Brien from the presidency with force and arms. It would have been tragic, if everybody had not been grinning at Dale's futile wrath. As it was, the only satisfaction the irate railroad king got out of it was to tell a few party leaders who besought him to continue the paper or sell, that he would let the Western Associated press franchise expire rather than see another fool paper like that in Lacedaemon. Even this small satisfaction was lessened when Pollock insisted on his salary being continued to the end of an iron-clad four-year contract. Mr. Dale went back to New York with new ideas about city bosses and their ways.

The episode, for it was only an episode in the life of busy Lacedaemon, was soon almost forgotten. The cardinal had shown Joe Dale that he was boss of the town. Joe Dale had chopped off the cardinal's presidential head in retaliation. John Dale continued his business friend and customer, and the whole affair was dismissed from the cardinal's busy mind as closed, with honors even.

But Joe Dale was not through with Pat O'Brien. It is a railroad king's prerogative to punish, as well as to reward, and for the punishment of O'Brien, Dale laid a trap the effectiveness of which lay entirely in its simplicity.

Came John Dale one day to the cardinal and said: "Pat, I have a private tip that a big killing is coming off in Nipper stock. Buy me ten thousand at the market and hold on until I tell you to let go."

"All right," said the cardinal, and bought another ten thousand as well for his own account. Nipper advanced a point. He called in a few chosen friends who formed a pool and invested heavily. Nipper advanced two points, five points. Pat bought more; he would pull out when John Dale did and retire from active business with his profits.

John Dale himself had gone to New York on the day he gave his order to O'Brien. Within a day Nipper began to sag. Then it dropped below the buying point. The pool put up more margins. The stock still dropped, swiftly now, and the other members of the pool became alarmed. Pat reassured them. "They're shaking out the small blocks of stock," he said, "Then you'll see her sky-rocket."

Nipper continued to toboggan. Pat's friends were seriously concerned. They talked of selling and pocketing their losses, but he showed them his hand. "Look here," he said, "John Dale is in this thing up to his neck and we know where he gets his private tips. Here's what he has on my books alone. As long as he holds on and keeps up his margins, I'm satisfied." His friends knew the cardinal; they knew he, too, was "up to his neck;" they held on.

Suddenly Nipper went down like mercury in blizzard weather. The friends were wildly alarmed. They insisted that John Dale was giving Dick the "double cross." Though he did not believe it, he wired to New York for special and private investigation of John Dale's movements there. And after a little delay tidings came that made the pool-sharers very sick men. John Dale had gone to New York, had a short talk with his father, then gone straightway to his broker and sold short ten thousand Nipper at the market. The profits on the sale as the stock went down would pay his losses on the Lacedaemon purchase. Meanwhile Joe Dale would see to it that Nipper did go down until Pat O'Brien was utterly swamped.

Of course the pool made haste to sell out. John Dale's private tip had been a prophecy. A killing had been made and O'Brien and his friends were the slaughtered ones. When the debris was finally swept up the cardinal, who had plunged fiercely on his own private account, found himself poorer by some $750,000. It had cost him that much to disobey the mandate of a railroad king. But he still owns Lacedaemon.

Lure of the City Strong

Strange Fascination That Even Beauty of the Country Is Unable to Overcome.

The middle-aged woman was at the St. Regis, and there one of her friends found her, to her great surprise. "You don't mean to tell me," exclaimed the caller, "that you have given up your beautiful home in the country?"

"Yes, I have. My daughter simply took me out of it."

"Why?"

"Because she doesn't like the country. Whenever she visited me out there she complained so bitterly about things that we were both unhappy. She thought the cream was horrible—all full of thick lumps, instead of smooth and thin, like real city cream. The butter, she said, tasted like grass, and the broilers didn't taste 'high,' like the kind she was used to. There was so much light it made her eyes ache, and the scent of roses kept her awake at night, so she sold the place and brought me in here."

"Reminds me," said the caller, "of an old play, in which I once saw Mrs. Gilbert. In one scene she personated a woman who had just returned to New York after a long absence. She opened a window which was supposed to overlook Broadway, leaned out, took a long whiff, and then exclaimed rapturously: 'Oh, the dear, delightful, dirty New York!' "—New York Press.

Grand Patriotic Celebration.

More than forty pure and mixed races of mankind took part in the colossal international pageant in celebration of the centennial of the birth of Elihu Burritt, "Apostle of Brotherhood,' held recently in New Britain, Conn., the Hardware city. School exercises, choral singing, parades and floats, speeches and an illuminated town enjoying a half-holiday contributed to the patriotic celebration.

LIKE CRUDE SIGNS

Reason for Misspelled and Poorly Printed Ads.

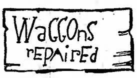
Indianapolis.—Most of the advertising signs in the foreign sections of the city present many humorous phases of business activities. They are inartistic, in bad taste, and seem to display a generous amount of ignorance or carelessness—but such is not the case.

Investigation has disclosed the fact that those signs, at least most of them, serve as business getters. They are the mediums which bring and hold the foreigners together, and they attract hundreds of up-to-date Americans, who think those signs stand for just what they want. The advertising in the foreign districts, however crude it may seem, is in many respects more up to date than what is used downtown. Many of the foreigners—and many in the foreign districts are matured Americans—could prepare or order as pretty signs as seen anywhere, but this would spoil the business in those districts, and the old signs are retained.

A man on West Washington street, blacksmith by trade, and one who looks every bit a foreigner, is well educated. He knows every word in the English language adapted to his trade and does not have to stutter when spelling most any word called for. He writes a good hand and can print the capital and small letters of the alphabet almost as well as a graduate sign painter. But his sign over the door to the shop reads:

Another, almost as good, on the front of the shop, says:



As soon as these are noticed the onlooker will comment on the poor spelling, first of all. Then he will take into consideration the art of sign making and wonder why on earth a man should jumble the letters in that fashion. With that he will pass on and forget the apparent ignorance or carelessness displayed publicly until he arrives at the next establishment, which may have a sign something like this:

BORDERS BY WEK OR DEY WANTED

This may not seem so crude. The letters are uniform and present a good appearance. Evidently somebody with real artistic instinct had been employed to advertise the wants of the house. Here the spelling is the chief fault.

A large artistic and in every way beautiful sign, such as can be seen in the business district, would not attract the foreigners. First of all, they think an establishment carrying a sign of bright colors and worked out to mathematical precision would show too much prosperity, too much Americanism.

About Beans.

The bean that we eat in some form nearly every day, that almost everybody likes, is comparatively new as an edible. Our common, everyday bean is a native of South America and was introduced into Europe, whence it came to this country, during the sixteenth century, and now is represented by more than 150 cultivated varieties. The big, broad bean is the bean of history and its origin is so remote that it is doubtful. It is probably a native of southwestern Asia and northeastern Europe.

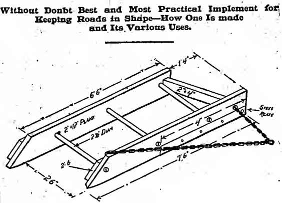
Without Doubt Best and Most Practical Implement for Keeping Roads in Shape—How One Is made and Its Various Uses.



King Road Drag.

(By L. W. CHASE, UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION.)

The split-log drag, or, as it is commonly called, the "king" drag, is without doubt the best implement for keeping roads in shape and in many instances is as efficient as any other implement in the construction of earth roads.

The king drag can be constructed of either a split log or a plank, but in this state the plank is much easier to obtain than the log, hence this brief description pertains to the construction from planks.

Select a good yellow pine, ash or oak plank two inches thick, twelve inches wide, and fourteen feet long. Cut this in two at an angle so that one edge of each piece is seven feet and six inches long and the other edge is six feet and six inches long. Spike to the back and along the center of each of these planks a two-inch by six-inch piece, which reinforces the plank. Bore the holes for the cross stakes about twenty-six inches apart and four inches from each end with a two and one half inch auger, using care to keep the auger perpendicular to the plank. The two-inch by four-inch brace at the front end should start from the middle of the rear plank and drop to the bottom part of the front plank. The blade, which is generally made of stock cutter steel, should be given the proper cutting slope by placing a wedge-shaped strip between it and the plank. One end of the chain is fastened to a cross stake and the other passes through a hole in the plank and is held in position by means of a pin.

The use of the drag is more satisfactory if the road has first been crowned with a blade grader, but whenever this is not convenient and the traffic is not too heavy the road may be gradually brought to a crown by means of the drag.

The surface of the average country road should be covered in one round with the drag. One horse should be driven on the inside of the wheel track and the other on the outside, the drag being set, by means of the chain, so that it is running at an angle of about 45 degrees with the wheel track and working the earth toward the center of the road. In the spring when the roads are more likely to be rutty and soft it is generally better to go over the road twice and in some places more times.

The drag should be floored with boards which are separated by open spaces of sufficient width so that the dirt which falls over will rattle through and yet they should be close enough so that the driver can move about upon the drag quite freely.

To insure the successful operation of the drag it is necessary for the driver to use careful judgment. Sometimes it is essential that the blade be held down so that the drag will cut roots and weeds, while at other times the front edge should not bear too heavily upon the surface as it will dig out a soft place which would be better if left undisturbed. This regulation of the cutting edge can be accomplished by the driver moving back and forth or to the right and left on the drag.

If the road is to be crowned with the drag it is often well to plow a light furrow along the sides and work this loosened dirt to the center.

On roads with heavy traffic the drag should be used much oftener and with more care than on roads with light traffic.

The distance from the drag at which the team is hitched affects the cutting. A long hitch permits the blade to cut deeper than a short hitch, likewise a heavy doubletree will cause the cutting edge to settle deeper than a light one.

Strange as it may seem, the heavier the traffic over a properly dragged road the better the road becomes.

There are very few periods of the year when the use of the drag does not benefit the road, but it does the best work when the soil is moist and yet not too sticky. This is frequently within a half-day's time after a rain. When the earth is in this state it works the best, and the affects of working it are fully as beneficial as at any other time. The Nebraska soils when mixed with water and thoroughly worked become remarkably tough and impervious to rain and if compacted in this condition they become extremely hard.

This action of the soil in becoming so hard and smooth not only helps to shed the water during a rain, but also greatly retards the formation of dust.

Successful Farming.

The middle-age city man on a salary faces a terrifying old age, but the middle-age farmer can always make the soil support him.

Why should any farmer in good health who has grown well off by active work move to town to go to seed?

Exercise Judgment and Care.

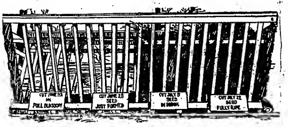
We have reports of three farmers in different states being literally chopped to pieces under disk harrows this spring. Doubtless there are scores of similar accidents that are not reported. It is criminal carelessness to stand in front of a harrow, mower or reaper while the team is attached. Only a moment is required to drop the traces and perfect safety is thereby insured.

Electricity on Farms.

On the great truck farms of Long Island electricity is used very largely in all farm operations. On one farm a plant costing $1,500 has been installed, but it does nearly all the work on the farm that was formerly done by horses. It costs about $600 a year to operate this plant, but the owner estimates that he saves three times this amount in labor.

The root is the foundation of the plant. It should be stimulated to early and continuous growth by the best care in the beginning.

SECURE BEST HAY QUALITY



CUT JUNE 22 IN FULL BLOSSOM
CUT JUNE 28 SEED JUST FORMED
CUT JULY 5 SEED IN DOUGH
CUT JULY 12 SEED FULLY RIPE

To get the best quality of hay the timothy plants require to be cut when in full bloom. In an experiment made by Prof. Waters of Missouri, racks were filled with hay cut in different stages of ripeness. As shown in the illustration all the early-cut hay was eaten before the late-cut was touched. The largest yield of dry matter was obtained by cutting at the dough stage.

LOW HEADED FRUIT TREES

Many Orchardists Believe That Nearer to Ground They Can Head Trees the Better—They Are Short-Lived and Unsightly.

(By E. R. CANFIELD.)

At the present time many orchardists believe that the nearer to the ground they can head their trees the better and thousands of trees have grown up like bushes without any training at all, each shoot from near the ground striving to become the body of the tree.

The trees grown in this way will come sooner into bearing and have a greater bearing surface, but are short lived and unsightly, are easily broken down by the wind and weight of the fruit. In certain parts of the country where the trees are exposed to droughts and hot winds, I would advise low-headed trees, but as a rule I am in favor of medium high training. The branches after the tree comes into bearing should protect the trunk of the tree from the sun during the summer.

The heading should be high enough to secure a growth of branches at nearly right angles with the trunk, otherwise they will form what is termed mal-formed crotches, owing to the natural tendency of the branches to an upright growth. Every tree should have a central shaft and the branches should be evenly distributed. Care must be exercised in pruning not to allow a side branch to get ahead of the center.

Hen Leaving Nest.

A hen may leave a nest of eggs for more than a day and the eggs still hatch, if they have not been subjected to freezing temperature. In very warm weather a hen may be away from her eggs for two days and the eggs still hatch. If you find a hen has left her nest and the eggs cold, give the eggs to another hen.

There are two main crops of cabbage, one for the early season and one for late fall maturity.

Mayor Haynes of Minneapolis has filed for re-election. And it is said there is no use trying to beat him.

About forty saloons at Moorehead will be closed in September by the recent order of the government. This will be a hard blow to Fargo.

The Minnesota crop is said to be above the average. The southern part of the state has a bumper crop, which will make up for the deficiency in other parts.

8,722 persons killed and 95,626 injured by the railways of the United States during the year ending June 30, 1909, is the latest offering in vital statistics as applied to railroads. Nearly five-eighths of the killed were trespassers on railroad trains or tracks, which goes to show that if life is worth much it is cheaper to pay your way than to beat the railroad company out of a fare.

The movement for uniformity in legislation is in the popular favor, says the Glencoe Enterprise. The desirability of such legislation is apparent when we note the various clashing laws, of the several states in the union. Governors and professional men in many states have organized to push legislation for uniform laws, in which effort Minnesota should join. This state took one step in that direction, during the administration of Gov. Johnson, with regard to insurance laws.

According to the Fairmont Sentinel the Socialists have adopted a novel plan for making a showing in Martin county. It is their intention to enter the campaign in earnest and to have candidates file for the leading county offices with the understanding that all of the salary in excess of $1,000 will be donated to a good roads fund. They consider a salary of $1,000 per year sufficient for any county officer and they would be nearly right except for the fact that every county officer is called upon about sixteen times daily for contributions to this fund or that. The Socialist plan would simply put the amount all in one fund and have chosen the good roads move as the one calculated to be the most popular. Now that the plan has been given publicity perhaps candidates in some of the other parties will take up with the scheme.

Under the terms of the postal savings bank law, a board of trustees is created, consisting of the postmaster general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney general, who shall declare what postoffices shall become postal savings banks. Deposits in these shall not be more than $100 a month or exceed a total of $500. An account may be opened with $1.00 but stamps of ten cents each will be issued for those desiring to accumulate money to be deposited. On deposits 2 per cent interest per annum is to be paid. Any depositor so desiring can change his deposits for government bonds to be issued in denominations of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100 and $500, to bear interest at 2½ per cent per annum. The money accumulating in the postal savings bank is to be deposited in both national and state banks in the vicinity of the postoffice in which the money is deposited by the people, such banks to pay 2½ per cent interest. Five per cent of the total to be retained by the secretary of the treasury as a cash reserve. Not more than 30 per cent of these deposits may be withdrawn by the government at any one time for investments in bonds of the United States, the remaining 65 per cent to remain on deposit with the banks.

AN EXPLANATION.

The Thief River News reprints from the American Press the following notice:

FOR SALE—ONLY NEWSPAPER and job office in live town of 1,300; eight pages all home print, independent Democratic; first class equipment, Babcock tapeless press, vast amount of type, all in excellent condition; big advertising and job business; third county printing; clears over $2000 per year; price $3,750, $2000 cash, balance long time. JOHN E. KING, State Librarian, St. Paul, Minn.

The News states that this notice means that the Red Lake Falls Gazette is for sale.

This is not true. A friend of mine, Mr. A. J. Schaffer, of the Adrian Democrat, recently informed me that because of ill health he found it necessary to sell his paper and retire from the newspaper business, and for obvious business reasons did not wish replies to his advertisement to be addressed to him. I told him to use my name for the purpose. Last week the Democrat was sold to Mr. M. E. Mohrten, of Pittsburg, Pa.

This, I believe, is sufficient answer to the intimation of the News. Further, let me say that I own only a half-interest in the Gazette, and under my contract with Mr. Baker, my associate who owns the other half, I could not sell even my interest in the paper without his consent. The Gazette is not on the market, and at present I have no desire or intention of disposing of my half-interest. In justice to the Gazette and to Mr. Baker and myself the editor of the News should make the amende honorable.

JOHN E. KING.

An exchange remarks that "It will not be very easy to win a libel suit against a Minnesota newspaper. The supreme court has decided that proof of falsity is not sufficient to warrant a verdict; there must be added proof of malice and bad faith. It is the bad faith of the defendent, coupled with the falsity of the article that constitutes the gist of the plaintiff's cause of action, and in order to entitle plaintiff to recover, he must farther prove, outside, and beyond the article itself, the actual malice and bad faith of the defendant."

STANTON ON COUNTY OPTION.

Judge C. W. Stanton, at one time considered a likely candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, created something of a furor in state politics by declaring in favor of county option. The Judge makes a splendid argument for the county option cause, and his address has excited so much interest that the Gazette takes pleasure in reprinting a portion of it:

"It is the proud boast of the American people that every citizen is a soverign and that the expressed will of the majority of the people constitutes the law. Then why, let me ask, shall we hesitate to submit to our sovereign power, the people, a question of such momentous importance as the traffic in intoxicating liquors?

"If I understand the county option movement, it is the advocacy of the granting of permission to the qualified electors of each county to determine for themselves whether the sale of intoxicants shall be licensed in the county. What request could be more Democratic or more closely in accord with the popular principles upon which our Republican form of government is founded? It must be conceded that a county is the proper governmental sub-division to determine this question, and this, for the reason among others, that the tax-payers of the county must stand the burden of the expense incident to the traffic, that the enforcement of the laws devolves upon the county officials and that the moral effect of the traffic in any city, village or community reaches and permeates the county.

"It comes down then to the question, not of prohibition, but of the control of ourselves. And in this connection it is pertinent to inquire what the interests are that are aligned against this movement and what methods are resorted to by those interests to control legislative enactment and prevent an expression of the will of the people.

"If I should attempt to discuss this phase of the question as conditions exist today in Minnesota, I fear I would approach too dangerously near an analysis of party politics in our fair state, and so I will leave the subject with only the suggestion that it may not be improbable that certain corporate interests are seeking to dominate the affairs of the state as well as of the nation."

Notice of Hearing on Petition In Ditch Proceedings.

State of Minnesota } ss District Court
County of Marshall } 14th Judicial District
In the Matter of Judicial Ditch No. 25.

Notice is hereby given, that a petition has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of Marshall county, State of Minnesota, and that the Judge of said District Court has fixed as the time and place for the preliminary hearing thereon, August 20th, 1910, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court rooms in the court house, in the city of Warren, in said county and state.

And notice is hereby given, that said preliminary hearing will be held before said Judge at said time and place, and that a copy of said petition follows this notice.

Dated at Warren, Minnesota, this 20th day of July, A. D. 1910.

A. C. SWANDBY,
Clerk of the District Court.
(SEAL) Marshall County, Minnesota.

PETITION FOR PUBLIC DITCH.

The undersigned, land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by or assessed for the expense of the construction of the drainage ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a drainage ditch along the following described route, in the towns of New Solum, Viking and Comstock, in the County of Marshall, State of Minnesota, the towns of Norden and Numedal in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota and the Towns of Helgeland, Bristet, Farley, Sandsville, Higdem, Grandt, Angus, Tabor, Northland and Esther in the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, and will also affect lands in the Town of Bray in said Red Lake county, and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility and is further necessary for the reasons that in seasons of high water, the surface water collecting upon the adjourning territory has no adequate means to be carried off and remains upon and adjoining the proposed route for said ditch hereinafter described for long periods, thus causing great damage to lands, public travel and health.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said drainage ditch and branches, is as follows:

Main Ditch—Commencing at a point at or near the center of Section 5, in Township 154, North of range 44 West, in Marshall county, Minnesota thence due south and along the quarter line through said section 5 and through section 8 to the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of section 17, in said township and range; thence due west along the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 17 and 18, in said township and Range; thence due west along the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 13, 14, 15 and 16, in Township 154 North, of range 45 west, in the County of Red Lake, Minnesota, to the north east corner of Section 17, in said Township and range; thence due south along the east side of the section line forming the west boundary line of Sections 16, 21 and 28 in said Township and Range; thence due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 32 and 31, in said Township and range; Thence due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary line of sections 36, 35, 34 and 33 in Township 154 North, of Range 46 west, in Polk county, Minnesota, to junction with the coulee at or near the north west corner of section 33 in said township and Range, thence along the center line of said coulee in a westerly and south westerly direction through sections 33, 32 and 31 in said township and Range; thence continuing along the center line of said coulee, in a westerly and south westerly direction through section 36 in Township 154 North, of Range 47 West, to a point at or near the south-west corner of section 36, in said Township 154 North, of Range 47 west, to a point at or near the south east corner of section 35 said township and range; thence due west and on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary line of sections 2, 3, 4 5, and 6 in township 153 North, of Range 47 West; thence continuing due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary line of sections 1 and 2 in Township 153 North, of Range 48 west, to a point at or near the center of the north line of said section 2 where said boundary line intersects with County Ditch No. 7 as an outlet.

Your petitioners further represent and show to the court that the said County Ditch No. 7 is at this time too shallow and narrow to carry off the surface water in the immediate territory thereof, and is wholly inadequate in its present condition to adequately carry the surface water thrown into the same, and that the said ditch will be wholly inadequate to carry off the additional water that will be delivered by the said proposed ditch hereinbefore described; and that your petitioners pray that the said ditch be widened, deepened and straightened sufficiently to adequately carry off the surface water coming into it from the immediate territory thereof, and also and in addition thereto the water furnished by the proposed ditch hereinbefore described.

Your petitioners further pray that said County Ditch No. 7 be deepened, widened and extended as follows: along and on the section line forming the south boundary line of sections 35, 34, 33, 32, and 31, in Township 154 North, of Range 48 West, in said County of Polk, thence continuing along the said ditch and the course thereof and along the section line forming the south boundary line of sections 36, 35, 34, 33, 32 and 31, in Township 154 North, of Range 49 West to the south-west corner of said last mentioned section; thence due west on the section line forming the south boundary line of sections 36, 35, 34, 33, and 32 in Township 154 North of Range 50 West, to a point where the same intersects with the Red River of the North, as the final outlet.

Your petitioners further pray that if in the judgment of the engineer it would be cheaper or more feasible or beneficial to all parties interested and concerned, that the said engineer be authorized and empowered to continue the said proposed ditch due north from the said south-west corner of said section thirty-one in township 154 North, of Range 49 West, and following the course of the said ditch to where the same intersects with Judicial Ditch No. 1, and thence due west to a point where the same may be found to be of sufficient size to form an adequate outlet, and if necessary to the Red River of the North as a final outlet in lieu of the course heretofore described due west from the said southwest corner of section 31, Township 154 North, of Range 49 West to the Red River of the North.

Branch A—Commencing at a point at or about the center of Section 25, in Township 153 North, of Range 46 West, in Polk county, Minnesota; thence due north through said Section 25 and on the quarter line thereof and continuing on the quarter line through sections 24, 13, 12 and 1 in said Township and range to a point on the south side of the north boundary line of said last mentioned section 1; thence due west and on the south side of the north boundary line of said section 1, and of sections 2 and 3, in said Township and Range to a point on the south side of the north boundary line of said last mentioned section where the said line intersects with a coulee at or near the quarter line of said section; thence in a northwesterly direction and along the course of said coulee through section 34 and part of section 33, in Township 154 North, of Range 46 west to a point at or near the northwest corner of said last mentioned section where the said last mentioned coulee joins with the course of a certain coulee the course of which runs in a westerly and southwesterly direction from said northwest corner of said section, and which coulee is more fully described as a part of the description of the course of the main ditch herein, as an outlet for the said "Branch A."

Branch B—Commencing in the north west corner of section 16, in Township 154 North, of Range 45 West, being on the south and east side of the North and West boundary lines of the said section, thence due north on the east side of the west boundary line of section 9, in said township and range to a point on the south and east sides of the section lines forming the north and west boundary lines of said last mentioned section; thence due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 8 and 7 in said last mentioned township and range, and continuing due west and on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 12, 11, 10, 9 and 8, in Township 154 North, of Range 46 West, to a point in the northwest corner of said last mentioned section, south and east of the north and west boundary lines of said last mentioned section; thence due north and on the east side of the section line forming the west boundary of section 5 in said township and range to a point where the same intersects with the coulee running in a westerly and north-westerly direction through said last mentioned section as an outlet. It is proposed that a greater portion of the said Branch B will empty into the last mentioned coulee, described as the outlet, and that a portion thereof will empty into the main ditch heretofore described at the point described at the commencement of said Branch B.

And your petitioners further petition and request that if better results can be obtained or greater benefit will accrue to the greater part of the area affected by such proposed ditch, by a different source, course or outlet for such proposed ditch, or any branch thereof, that the engineer appointed herein designate the same and that the court establish the same as designated by such engineer, and that the engineer designate and lay out such lateral ditches as is necessary and that the court establish the same.

And your petitioners further pray that in the order establishing the said ditch it be ordered that the bonds for the said ditch be twenty year bonds, and that the liens for benefits be ordered paid in fifteen annual payments commencing five years after the order establishing the said ditch.

Your petitioners further pray that you will proceed to establish such drainage ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter 230 of the General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1905, and amendatory acts.

S.S.S. CURES RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a specific blood fermentation, a souring of the circulation from an excess of uric acid accumulating in the blood stream. This uratic impurity comes usually as a result of constipation, weak kidneys, indigestion and stomach disturbances. These systemic irregularities may not be of marked severity or of long duration, but each has a direct effect on the eliminative members of the body, which prevents the proper removal of the waste products. This refuse remains in the stomach and bowels, and souring forms uric acid, which the blood quickly absorbs.

Rheumatism is usually manifested in the joints and muscles. It is here its sharpest twinges of pain are felt, and stiffening of ligaments and tendons first commence. The pain of Rheumatism is caused by the contact of the sensory nerves with the gritty, acrid formation which uric acid causes to accumulate in the corpuscles of the blood about the joints. The stiffening of muscles and joints is usually gradual. Constantly the blood deposits the uric acid into the joints, and slowly the natural fluids are dried up and destroyed. Then Rheumatism becomes chronic and serious. Rheumatism is sometimes inherited, for like all blood diseases it can be transmitted to offspring. This explains why some persons are afflicted with the disease, and suffer its pains, who have otherwise been perfectly healthy.

S.S.S. cures Rheumatism and cures it permanently. It goes into the circulation, and removes the uric acid, purifies the blood, and in this way destroys the cause. S. S. S. changes the blood from a sour, acid-steeped stream to a rich, healthy fluid, which quiets the excited nerves, eases the throbbing muscles and painful joints, and filters out of the circulation the irritating matter which causes every painful symptom of the disease. When the blood has been purified and enriched by S.S.S., it nourishes the different members that have been weakened and starved because of imperfect blood. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice free to all who write.

RHEUMATISM FORTY YEARS.

I suffered with lumbago for a long time, and speaking of it to a friend one day he told me to try S. S. S. I did so, and soon found it was helping me. I had rheumatism for more than forty years, having contracted it in the army, but S. S. S cured me sound and well, and have had no return of the trouble. I think S.S.S. has no equal for curing rheumatism.

ALL DRUGGISTS

Meeting called to order by the chairman at 10:00 o'clock a. m.

Members absent: none.

The petition of P. Lorence Wajnorowski and others for a ditch in said county was presented to the board and read, and the board being satisfied that all of the conditions of Chapter 230 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1905 and acts amendatory thereof had been complied with on motion made by Commissioner Pigeon, seconded by Commissioner Aubol and carried unanimously the following resolution appointing an engineer to survey the route of said proposed ditch was made:

In the matter of the petition of P. Lorence Wajnorowski and others for locating and constructing county ditch No. 55 in the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

Whereas, A petition bearing date the 4th day of June 1901 signed by P. Lorence Wajnorowski and others praying for the establishment of a certain ditch in said county designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 55 the route of which is more fully described in said petition and a proper bond accompanying the same, have been filed with the county auditor of said county as by law required:

And Whereas, It appears by satisfactory proof to the county board of Red Lake county that due notice of the pendency of said petition and the time and place at which the same would be heard, has been given as required by law;

Now therefore, We, the county board of said county, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint C. H. Martz, as a competent and experienced engineer to make an accurate survey of the line of said proposed ditch from its source to its outlet, as provided and specified in and by Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905, and acts amendatory thereof, and after completing his duties as such engineer to make and file his report with the County Auditor of said County, on or before the 15 day of September, 1910.

Dated July 18, 1910.

By the Board,
C. A. LINDQUIST,
Chairman of County Board of Red Lake county.
Attest: A. A. Latendresse,
County Auditor.
(County Auditor's seal.)

On motion made by Commissioner Johnson, duly seconded by Commissioner Demann and carried unanimously the following order appointing viewers on the ditch petitioned for by P. Lorence Wajnorowski and others designated by the county auditor as County Ditch No. 55 was made,

I the matter of the petition of P. Lorence Wajnorowski and others for County Ditch No. 55 in the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

Whereas a petition bearing date the 4th day of July, A.D. 1910 signed by P. Lorence, Wajnorowski and others praying for the establishment of a ditch in said county, designated and numbered by the county auditor as County Ditch No. 55 the route of which is fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same has been filed with the county auditor of said county: and said County auditor has given due notice of the pendancy of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said county board of said county have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer tow-it: C. H. Martz to make a survey of said ditch.

Now, therefore, we the County Board of said county, at a special session held this day do hereby appoint K. O. Gigstad and Alfred Lindquist and Gilbert Haavl, three resident freeholders of said county, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of the county auditor of said county designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified, in the order of the county auditor aforesaid and shall proceed to view each proposed work and the land damaged or benefitted thereby; and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with said county auditor of said county within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefitted or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the county tax duplicates of said county and the description to be given in legal form) and the total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged, as the case may be, the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandering lake, or the change of any water course and the location and value of each added land; the damage, if any, to riparian rights pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefitted or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains either in whole or in part any public or corporate road or railroad or benefits any such road so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and other particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefitted thereby, and amounts of benefits to each; they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch entire, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not, in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and if so, stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, pursuant to chapter seven (7), Revised Laws of Minnesota, 1905, a petition was filed with the Secretary of State on the 12th day of May, 1909, praying for the creation of a new county out of the territory now lying in Red Lake County, Minnesota, the same to be known as Pennington county, and described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the southwest corner of section nineteen (19) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, according to the United States Government survey thereof, running thence east along the south line of sections nineteen (19), twenty (20), twenty-one (21), twenty-two (22), twenty-three (23), and twenty-four (24) in townships one hundred fifty-two (152) north of each of ranges forty-five (45), forty-four (44), forty-three (43), forty-two (42), forty-one (41) and forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of section twenty-four (24) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges thirty-nine (39) and forty (40) west to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north on the east line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the northeast corner of said township one-hundred and fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west, thence running west along the north line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north along the east line of townships one-hundred fifty-three (153) and one-hundred fifty-four (154) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of Marshall county as the same now exists, thence running west along the southern boundary line of said Marshall county to a point where said boundary line intersects the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian, the said point being the northwest corner of said Red Lake County as the same now exists, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west to the northwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of section nineteen (19) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, the same being the place of beginning.

The said territory so bounded being all that part of Red Lake County as now constituted lying north of the south line of sections nineteen (19), twenty (20), twenty-one (21) twenty-two (22), twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in townships one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of each of ranges forty (40), forty-one (41), forty-two (42), forty-three (43), forty-four (44) and forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian and all of townships one-hundred fifty-two (152) and one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of Range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian and also all that part of township one-hundred and fifty-four (154) north of Range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian lying and being within said Red Lake county as said county now exists.

The proposed county seat of said proposed new county shall be the City of Thief River Falls located on sections twenty-seven (27), twenty-eight (28), thirty-three (33) and thirty-four (34) in township one hundred and fifty-four (154) north of range forty-three (43) west of the 5th principal meridian.

The names and places of residence of the persons who shall constitute the first county board of said proposed new county, are as follows:

Peter O. Wold, residing on lots one (1) and two (2) and the east half of northwest quarter of section nineteen (19), in township one hundred and fifty-three (153) north of range forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Peter Hedeen, residing on the north-west quarter of section thirty-four (34), in township one hundred fifty-three (153), north of range forty-one (41) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Ed A. Aubol, residing on lots three (3) and six (6) in section twenty-nine (29) in township one hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-three (43) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Daniel Shaw, residing in the City of Thief River Falls in said proposed new county.

Olaf Larson, residing on the south half of section eight (8) in Township one hundred fifty-four (154) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Whereas, the said petition represents and avers that the said hereinbefore territory comprises more than four hundred square miles, and contains more than two thousand inhabitants, and that the remaining area of Red Lake County after deducting the territory hereinbefore described will comprise more than four hundred square miles and contain more than two thousand inhabitants; and

Whereas, the said petition has been duly considered and found and certified to as conforming in all respects to the provisions of law;

Now, therefore, I, Adolph O. Eberhart, governor of the state of Minnesota, pursuant to the authority vested in me by law, do hereby direct and proclaim that the question of the creation of the proposed new county of Pennington be submitted to the voters of said Red Lake County at the next general election to be held in this state on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1910.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be hereto affixed, at the Capitol, in the City of St. Paul, this twelfth day of May, A. D. 1910.

ADOLPH O. EBERHART,

nominate? Is it not on the contrary true, that the best citizens are really ever candidates for public office. But the gentlemen I have named are Democrats and when they are called for public service, there is not one among them who would not make great sacrifices in order to respond to that call.

An Independent Candidate.

In view of the strength of the county option sentiment which is unquestionably growing and which is bound to cut a great figure in the campaign, and in the event of the Democrats putting up as unfriendly a front as the Republicans have done as is plain from the character of the Republican organization and especially the chairman of the state central committee, I learn that even as late as it is the Anti-Saloon League will consider the advisability of nominating a candidate for governor by petition. They may think there is nothing else left for them to do.

A Congressional Fight.

Henry O. Bjorge, of Lake Park, filed last week for member of congress from the ninth district. On his recent return from Washington Mr. Steenerson, the present member, undertook the defence of the Aldrich-Payne tariff law as much better than the Dingley law and the best to be had under the circumstances. Doubtless as the campaign progresses he will see the propriety of emulating the example of Mr. Stevens and Mr. Nye and find a new set of opinions better suited to this latitude. It does beat all how different things look in Minnesota from what they do in Washington.

The Trusts In Clover.

Incidentally Senator Bristow is letting in some light. With the Aldriches up to their eyes in the rubber trust and the Guggenheimers manipulating the lead trust and the Ryans in the copper trust and all combining to fix up a tariff for the dear people, it is small wonder one has to pay pretty dear for his whistle these days.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson told Miss Innes that she was hiding evidence from him. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped [illegible] developed that [illegible] was possibly a woman. Gertrude was suspected for the intruder [illegible] found Gertrude [illegible] with her right ankle sprained. A [illegible] found the other half [illegible] to Jack Bailey's cuff [illegible]. Halsey suddenly reappeared. He [illegible] and Bailey had left because [illegible] received a telegram. Gertrude [illegible] had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him Halsey's weapon.

They stared at each other across the big library table, with young eyes all at once hard, suspicious. And then Gertrude held out both hands to him appealingly.

"We must not," she said brokenly. "Just now, with so much at stake, it — is hateful. I know you are as ignorant as I am. Make me believe it, Halsey."

Halsey soothed her as best he could, and the breach seemed healed. But long after I went to bed he sat downstairs in the living room alone, and I knew he was going over the case as he had learned it. Some things were clear to him that were dark to me. He knew, and Gertrude, too, why Jack Bailey and he had gone away that night as they did. He knew where they had been for the last 48 hours, and why Jack Bailey had not returned with him. It seemed to me that without fuller confidence from both the children—they are always children to me—I should never be able to learn anything.

As I was finally getting ready for bed, Halsey came upstairs and knocked at my door. When I had got into a negligee—I used to say wrapper before Gertrude came back from school—I let him in. He stood in the doorway a moment, and then he went into agonies of silent mirth. I sat down on the side of the bed and waited in severe silence for him to stop, but he only seemed to grow worse. When he had recovered he took me by the elbow and pulled me in front of the mirror.

"'How to be beautiful,'" he quoted. "'Advice to maids and matrons, by Beatrice Fairfax!'" And then I saw myself. I had neglected to remove my wrinkle eradicators, and I presume my appearance was odd. I believe that it is a woman's duty to care for her looks, but it is much like telling a necessary falsehood—one must not be found out. By the time I got them off Halsey was serious again, and I listened to his story.

"Aunt Ray," he began, extinguishing his cigarette on the back of my ivory hair brush, "I would give a lot to tell you the whole thing. But—I can't, for a day or so, anyhow. But one thing I might have told you a long time ago. If you had known it, you would not have suspected me for a moment of—of having anything to do with the attack on Arnold Armstrong. Goodness knows what I might do to a fellow like that, if there was enough provocation, and I had a gun in my hand—under ordinary circumstances. But—I care a great deal about Louise Armstrong, Aunt Ray. I hope to marry her some day. Is it likely I would kill her brother?"

"But the whole thing is absurd," I argued. "And besides, Gertrude's sworn statement that you left before Arnold Armstrong came would clear you at once."

Halsey got up and began to pace the room, and the air of cheerfulness dropped like a mask.

"She can't swear it," he said finally. "Gertrude's story was true as far as it went, but she didn't tell everything. Arnold Armstrong came here at 2:30—came into the billiard room and left in five minutes. He came to bring—something."

"Halsey," I cried, "you must tell me the whole truth. Every time I see a way for you to escape you block it yourself with this wall of mystery. What did he bring?"

"A telegram—for Bailey," he said. "It came by special messenger from town, and was—most important. Bailey had started for here, and the messenger had gone back to the city. The steward gave it to Arnold, who had been drinking all day and couldn't sleep, and was going for a stroll in the direction of Sunnyside."

"And he brought it?"

"Yes."

"I can tell you—as soon as certain things are made public. It is only a matter of days now," gloomily.

"And Gertrude's story of a telephone?"

"Poor Trude!" he half whispered. "Poor loyal little girl! Aunt Ray, there was no such message. No doubt your detective already knows that and discredits all Gertrude told him."

"And when she went back, it was to get—the telegram?"

"Probably," Halsey said slowly. "When you get to thinking about it, Aunt Ray, it looks bad for all three of us, doesn't it? And yet—I will take my oath none of us even inadvertently killed that poor devil."

"The same horrible thought keeps recurring to me," I whispered. "Halsey, Gertrude probably had your revolver; she must have examined it, anyhow, that night. After you—and Jack had gone, what if—that ruffian came back, and she—and she—"

"She might have heard him fumbling at the door—he had no key, the police say—and thinking it was you, or Jack, she admitted him. When she saw her mistake she ran up the stairs, a step or two, and turning, like an animal at bay, she fired."

Halsey had his hand over my lips before I finished, and in that position we stared each at the other, our stricken glances crossing.

"The revolver—my revolver—thrown into the tulip bed!" he muttered to himself. "Thrown perhaps from an upper window; you say it was buried deep. Her prostration ever since, her—Aunt Ray, you don't think it was Gertrude who fell down the clothes chute?"

CHAPTER X.

The Traders' Bank.

The morning after Halsey's return was Tuesday. Arnold Armstrong had been found dead at the foot of the circular staircase at three o'clock on Sunday morning. The funeral services were to be held on Tuesday, and the interment of the body was to be deferred until the Armstrongs arrived from California. No one, I think, was very sorry that Arnold Armstrong was dead, but the manner of his death aroused some sympathy and an enormous amount of curiosity. Mrs. Ogden Fitzhugh, a cousin, took charge of the arrangements, and everything, I believe, was as quiet as possible. I gave Thomas Johnson and Mrs. Watson permission to go into town to pay their last respects to the dead man, but for some reason they did not care to go.

Sent Two Telegrams.

Halsey spent part of the day with Mr. Jamieson, but he said nothing of what happened. He looked grave and anxious, and he had a long conversation with Gertrude late in the afternoon.

Tuesday evening found us quiet, with the quiet that precedes an explosion. Gertrude and Halsey were both gloomy and distraught, and as Liddy had already discovered that some of the china was broken—it is impossible to have any secrets from an old servant—I was not in a pleasant humor myself. Warner brought up the afternoon mail and the evening papers at seven—I was curious to know what the papers said of the murder. We had turned away at least a dozen reporters. But I read over the headline that ran half-way across the top of the Gazette twice before I comprehended it. Halsey had opened the Chronicle and was staring at it fixedly.

"The Traders' bank closes its doors!" was what I read, and then I put down the paper and looked across the table.

"Did you know of this?" I asked Halsey.

"I—expected it. But not so soon," he replied.

"And you?" to Gertrude.

"Jack—told us—something," Gertrude said faintly. "Oh, Halsey, what can he do now?"

"Jack!" I said scornfully. "Your Jack's flight is easy enough to explain now. And you helped him, both of you, to get away! You get that from your mother; it isn't an Innes trait. Do you know that every dollar you have, both of you, is in that bank?"

Gertrude tried to speak, but Halsey stopped her.

"That isn't all, Gertrude," he said quietly; "Jack is—under arrest."

"Under arrest!" Gertrude screamed, and tore the paper out of his hand. She glanced at the heading, then she crumpled the newspaper into a ball and flung it to the floor. While Halsey, looking stricken and white, was trying to smooth it out and read it, Gertrude had dropped her head on the table and was sobbing stormily.

I have the clipping somewhere, but just now I can remember only the essentials.

On the afternoon before, Monday, while the Traders' bank was in the rush of closing hour, between two and three, Mr. Jacob Trautman, president of the Pearl Brewing Company, came into the bank to lift a loan. As security for the loan he had deposited some 300 International Steamship Company 5's, in total value $300,000. Mr. Trautman went to the loan clerk, and, after certain formalities had been gone through, the loan clerk went to the vault. Mr. Trautman, who was a large and genial German, waited for a time, whistling under his breath. The loan clerk did not come back. After an interval, Mr. Trautman saw the loan clerk emerge from the vault and go to the assistant cashier; the two went hurriedly to the vault. A lapse of another ten minutes, and the assistant cashier came out and approached Mr. Trautman. He was noticeably white and trembling. Mr. Trautman was told that through an oversight the bonds had been misplaced, and was asked to return the following morning, when everything would be made all right.

Mr. Trautman, however, was a shrewd business man, and he did not like the appearance of things. He left the bank apparently satisfied, and within 30 minutes he had called up three different members of the Traders' board of directors. At 3:30 there was a hastily convened board meeting, with some stormy scenes, and late in the afternoon a national bank examiner was in possession of the books. The bank had not opened for business Tuesday.

At 12:30 o'clock the Saturday before, as soon as the business of the day was closed, Mr. John Bailey, the cashier of the defunct bank, had taken his hat and departed. During the afternoon he had called up Mr. Aronson, a member of the board, and said he was ill, and might not be at the bank for a day or two. As Bailey was highly thought of, Mr. Aronson merely expressed a regret. From that time until Monday night, when Mr. Bailey had surrendered to the police, little was known of his movements. Some time after one on Saturday he had entered the Western Union office at Cherry and White streets and had sent two telegrams. He was at the Greenwood Country club on Saturday night, and appeared unlike himself. It was reported that he would be released under enormous bond some time that day, Tuesday.

The article closed by saying that while the officers of the bank refused to talk until the examiner had finished his work, it was known that securities aggregating a million and a quarter were missing. Then there was a diatribe on the possibility of such an occurrence; on the folly of a one-man bank, and of a board of directors that met only to lunch together and to listen to a brief report from the cashier, and on the poor policy of a government that arranges a three or four day examination twice a year. The mystery, it insinuated, had not been cleared by the arrest of the cashier. Before now minor officials had been used to cloak the misdeeds of men higher up. Inseparable as the words "speculation" and "peculation" have grown to be, John Bailey was not known to be in the stock market. His only words, after his surrender, had been: "Send for Mr. Armstrong at once." The telegraph message which had finally reached the president of the Traders' bank, in an interior town in California, had been responded to by a telegram from Dr. Walker, the young physician who was traveling with the Armstrong family, saying that Paul Armstrong was very ill and unable to travel.

That was how things stood that Tuesday evening. The Traders' bank had suspended payment, and John Bailey was under arrest, charged with wrecking it; Paul Armstrong lay very ill in California, and his only son had been murdered two days before. I sat dazed and bewildered. The children's money was gone; that was bad enough, though I had plenty, if they would let me share. But Gertrude's grief was beyond any power of mine to comfort; the man she had chosen stood accused of a colossal embezzlement—and even worse. For in the instant that I sat there I seemed to see the coils closing around John Bailey as the murderer of Arnold Armstrong.

"Why did he do it?" she wailed. "Couldn't you stop him, Halsey? It was suicidal to go back!"

Halsey was looking steadily through the windows of the breakfast room, but it was evident he saw nothing.

"It was the only thing to do, Trude," he said at last. "Aunt Ray, when I found Jack at the Greenwood club last Saturday night, he was frantic. I cannot talk until Jack tells me I may, but—he is absolutely innocent of all this, believe me. I thought, Trude and I thought, we were helping him, but it was the wrong way. He came back. Isn't that the act of an innocent man?"

"Then why did he leave at all?" I asked, unconvinced. "What innocent men would run away from here at three o'clock in the morning? Doesn't it look rather as though he thought it impossible to escape?"

Gertrude rose angrily. "You are not even just!" she flamed. "You don't know anything about it, and you condemn him!"

"I know that we have all lost a great deal of money," I said. "I shall believe Mr. Bailey innocent the moment he is shown to be. You profess to know the truth, but you cannot tell me! What am I to think?"

Halsey leaned over and patted my hand.

"You must take us on faith," he said. "Jack Bailey hasn't a penny that doesn't belong to him; the guilty man will be known in a day or so."

"I shall believe that when it is proved," I said grimly. "In the meantime, I take no one on faith. The Inneses never do."

Gertrude, who had been standing aloof at a window, turned suddenly. "But when the bonds are offered for sale, Halsey, won't the thief be detected at once?"

Halsey turned with a superior smile.

"It wouldn't be done that way," he said. "They would be taken out of the vault by some one who had access to it, and used as collateral for a loan in another bank. It would be possible to realize 80 per cent. of their face value."

SCENTING THE BLUEFISH

"Ah!" said the skipper out with a party bluefishing, turning his face to windward as he spoke and at the same time throwing the wheel over and bringing the boat up and putting her off on the other tack, "I smell them!"

"You smell them?" said a member of the party in the boat. "Do you mean to tell me you can smell the fish?"

"Why, certainly," said the skipper, as he got another little pull on the sheet, "or you can smell where they are, which amounts to the same thing.

"You see," the skipper continued, "the bluefish is a voracious feeder—very voracious; he will eat about a million of the little fishes that you find around so plentiful in the water, put there apparently for the bigger fish to feed on, and when he has gorged himself on about a million, more or less, of these little fishes the bluefish will settle down on the bottom and there disgorge them, and this disgorged food, oily, floats up to the surface, and that you can smell, and it means bluefish; and I can smell them now, sure." And so the skipper got an inch more of the sheet and peered ahead and kept her a-going with every inch drawing, just a-humming and a-boiling, keen on the scent.

And did the party come up with the bluefish and catch lots of them? A boatload of fish? Keep hauling them in till they all got tired of fishing? W—ell, that—as a once celebrated English writer has so aptly remarked—that is another story; scenting bluefish and catching them being two quite different things.

SELECTION AND CARE OF DAIRY CATTLE.

The most economical method of building up a fine herd of dairy cattle is by the use of the pure bred sire upon common stock. For those who have plenty of capital and some experience the breeding of pure bred stock may prove exceedingly profitable.

In order that success may be attained either through a grade or pure bred herd, great care must be given to the selection of the herd bull as he is at least half the herd. When looking for a bull to head the herd select one with dairy qualities. He should have a large deep barrel with reasonable spread of ribs. He should be very masculine in appearance, having a strong head and crest, which denotes prepotency. He should be very sharp over the shoulders with spine prominent, well cut up in the rear flank and twist, thighs nicely chiseled out, rudimentary teats placed well forward and milk veins prominent.

Look well to the breeding of the bull placed at the head of the herd. See that his dam and granddam as well as the dam of his sire have good records. If the animals appearing in the bull's pedigree have been kept for generations for dairy purposes, the bull of the proper conformation himself should transmit these qualities. There is a great difference between the prepotency and value of bulls of the same breed.

It is well for farmers and breeders in the same locality to select the same breed and practice community breeding, first because bulls can be rotated and thus kept in service up to a ripe old age; second, buyers will be attracted to a section where stock can be had in large quantities; third, if one breed is kept in common, all are interested in proclaiming the merits of the same line of stock.

When rearing calves it is important to give the dam from four to eight weeks rest before freshening again for these reasons: First, to give the unborn calf better nourishment in the foetal stage; second, that the cow may form colostrum milk which is needed in cleaning out the alimentary canal of the little calf; and third, because the cow will make a better record the following year if given this rest.

The calves at the Minnesota Experiment Station are raised on skim-milk and a grain mixture after the third week. They are taken from their dams at once after sucking the colostrum milk and are started on from three to four pounds of whole milk per feed. They are then gradually gotten on to skim-milk and grain.

Swill Barrel Cholera.

Dr. H. M. Reynolds, veterinarian at the Minnesota Experiment Station says that swill barrel cholera has often been mistaken for true hog cholera, and that it may kill hogs quite rapidly and cause just as severe losses for the farmer. It is a less serious disease than true hog cholera, for it does not spread by infection. The doctor says:

The symptoms frequently resemble rather closely the true hog cholera, but hogs die from this disease that are supposed to be immune to cholera. This disease does not spread to other hogs and involves only those which are receiving swill from a certain barrel or tank. The condition of the barrel or tank itself usually gives very good reason for suspecting that the disease is swill barrel cholera rather than true cholera.

Serious losses among garbage feeders using hotel slops frequently occur and are often due to the presence of washing powder or other material containing a high percentage of irritating alkalies. These appear to cause disease by direct inflammation of the bowels due to chemical irritation. Possibly these chemicals in the swill may simply irritate and reduce the vitality of the membrane lining the digestive organs for invasion by germs which otherwise could not produce disease.

A case of swill barrel cholera has recently come to the attention of the experiment station. Mr. B., a farmer living in Southwestern Minnesota, lost fifty-nine out of sixty hogs. The one hog which did not die was kept in a pen adjoining the yard where sick hogs were kept and with every opportunity for transferring the infection, if there had been infection, from the yard to the pen. The fifty-nine hogs were fed sour buttermilk from a local creamery. The buttermilk had been kept in a wooden tank, the sides of which were green with mold.

Near-by neighbors who did not use this buttermilk lost no hogs.

Moral: Clean out and scald your swill tank as often as necessary and give the interior of it a good sun bath once in a while.

Grasshoppers.

By F. L. Washburn, State Entomologist, University Farm, St. Paul.

A report was received shortly after the cold weather, occurring the middle of April, that grasshoppers had hatched in the unusually warm weather of early spring, and had been killed by the freeze in April. This would have been good news if it had been actually the case in all parts of the state. Unfortunately grasshoppers were found hatching in quite large numbers early in May, when all danger of cold weather had passed, and we will probably have in some locations more or less trouble this season.

Common red-legged locust or grasshopper.

We have found in here in the laboratory that young grasshoppers can live five days without food, under trying conditions, which is not particularly encouraging to the farmer.

This Division will send directions for treatment to any locality troubled with this insect, or, if necessary, will send a man to help an afflicted farmer. Use the telegraph in cases of emergency. Young hoppers just hatching can sometimes be taken care of by plowing them under, beginning on the outside of the field where they are hatching, and plowing toward the center. A poisonous bait, known as the Criddle Mixture, is also effective when grasshoppers are young. Since the above was dictated we have received a report from near Foxhome, Wilkin Co., under date of May 24th, that grasshoppers were hatching in large numbers on land owned by nonresidents, and that nearby crops were threatened. We have a law in Minnesota to prevent this evil, obliging land owners or tenants to plow infected land.

Pigeon Grass may be held in check by fall pasturing, early fall plowing, cultivating crops, growing of rape, grass and a rotation of crops. Above all—use clean seed.

Continue Sending Names to the Division of Extension, University Farm, St. Paul for the Farmers' Library. It is free to all who ask for it. Six numbers have already been published, and the July issue will soon be out of press.

Quack Grass Eradication.—Experiments at the Minnesota Station have proven that carefully hoeing and otherwise cultivating corn on land infested with quack grass is a good remedy. Following careful cultivation for a year or two will clean the land.

Germinating the Seeds of Annual Weeds like pigeon grass, pig weeds, wild oats, etc., in the fall, in time for the frost to kill the tender roots, is a good way of cleaning the land. Discing the stubble field as soon as the grain is removed, if removal is promptly done, is a help. Remember this in August, Mr. Farmer.

Animals in Ill Health Are Unfit For Human Food, and the Minnesota Experiment Station advises that flesh from animals that have recovered from disease before slaughter does not cure well and is difficult to keep after curing. Bruises, broken legs or similar accidents have the same effect on the meat as ill health. Unless an animal is bled and dressed immediately after an accident, before the temperature rises, do not use the meat for human food.

Manuring the Soil, the prime object of which is to increase the crop yielding capacity, may be done with stable manure, commercial fertilizer, or by plowing under green vegetation, such as clover, grasses, and weeds—before their seeds ripen. To justify the practice the increase in product from the soil must be more than enough to offset the cost of fertilizers and labor employed. Good profit almost invariably results from the application of barn yard manure and plowing under green crops.

Minnesota Insect Life is the name of a little booklet published for free distribution among those who ask for it by Prof. Washburn state Entomologist, at University Farm. The booklet will appear in April, May, June, July and August, and will tell of the insects in Minnesota and how to fight them. Send a request by postal card to Prof. Washburn and the name will be entered on his mailing list.

Frequently the question of a creamery comes up in different sections and the objection is soon raised that there are not enough cows. There never will be while the heifers are sold for beef, and at five and six cents a pound. Butter sold from the experiment farm at the grocery store averaged 31 cents per pound during 1909.

A. J. McGUIRE, Supt.,
N. E. Minnesota Experiment Station.

Improvement in the Dairy Herd lies in better breeding, in better housing and in better feed in greater quantities. Corn fodder, clover, and roots must succeed slough hay in winter, and old, weedy pastures must be broken up and sown to clover, blue grass and timothy for summer feeding. Systematic care, and feeding with only the substances which may be grown on every farm in Minnesota, is the practice at University Farm, St. Anthony Park, and is what gives the results reported from the Experiment station.

Weighing and Testing Milk.—This is the only sure way to determine the difference in value between the good and inferior cow. Weighing and testing daily is only a business proposition. It is the only safe way of determining what price to ask for a cow in selling her, or of what to pay for her when buying. No intelligent farmer will sell a cow for thirty dollars that will make him a net profit of $40 or $50 a year. Neither will he keep a cow that doesn't pay him a profit if he knows it.

A BAD THING TO NEGLECT.

Don't neglect the kidneys when you notice lack of control over the secretions. Passages become too frequent or scanty; urine is discolored and sediment appears. No medicine for such troubles like Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly remove kidney disorders.

A BURNING ERUPTION FROM HEAD TO FEET

"Four years ago I suffered severely with a terrible eczema, being a mass of sores from head to feet and for six weeks confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual torture from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor I was advised to try Cuticura Remedies. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for about three weeks. At the end of that time I was able to be about the house, entirely cured, and have felt no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedies, as I know what they did for me. Mrs. Edward Nenning, 1112 Salina St., Watertown, N. Y., Apr. 11, 1909."

Unflattering Truth.

A Chicago physician gleefully tells a child story at his own expense. The five children of some faithful patients had measles, and during their rather long stay in the improvised home hospital they never failed to greet his daily visit with pleased acclamation. The good doctor felt duly flattered, but rashly pressed the children, in the days of convalescence, for the reason of this sudden affection. At last the youngest and most indiscreet let slip the better truth.

"We felt so sick that we wanted awfully to do something naughty, but we were afraid to be bad for fear you and the nurse would give us more horrid medicine. So we were awfully glad to see you, always, 'cause you made us stick out our tongues. We stuck 'em out awful far!"

The Lost Chords.

The village concert was to be a great affair. They had the singers, they had the program sellers, they had the doorkeepers and they would doubtless have the audience. All they needed was the piano, but that they lacked. Nor could they procure one anywhere.

At last the village organist learned that one was possessed by Farmer Hayseed, who lived "at the top o' the 'ill." Forthwith he set out with two men and a van.

"Take it, an' welcome," said Hayseed cordially. "I've no objections where as ye put 'Pyanner by Hayseed' on the program."

They carted it away.

"An' I wish 'em joy of it," murmured Mr. Hayseed, as the van disappeared from sight.

"Wish 'em joy of it," repeated Hay[illegible] "What d'ye mean?"

"Well, I mean I only 'ope they'll get all the notes they want," replied the old man. "'Cos, ye see, when I wanted a bit o' wire I allus went to the old pianner for it."

It Is a Mistake

Many have the idea that anything will sell if advertised strong enough. This is a great mistake. True, a few sales might be made by advertising an absolutely worthless article but it is only the article that is bought again and again that pays. An example of the big success of a worthy article is the enormous sale that has grown up for Cascarets Candy Cathartic. This wonderful record is the result of great merit successfully made known through persistent advertising and the [illegible] recommendation given [illegible] by its friends and users.

Like all great successes, trade pirates prey on the unsuspecting public, by marketing fake tablets similar in appearance to Cascarets. Care should always be exercised in purchasing well advertised goods, especially an article that has a national sale like Cascarets. Do not allow a substitute to be palmed off on you.

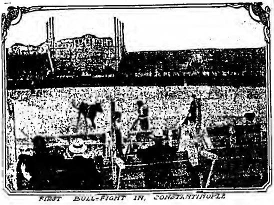
TURKS WITNESS SPANISH SPORT



FIRST BULL-FIGHT IN CONSTANTINOPLE

The great sport of the Spanish people, bull fighting, was introduced to the Turks in Constantinople the other day, but the subjects of the sultan did not take kindly to it, as is proved by the emptiness of the grand stand, shown by the accompanying photograph. LESSON IN FARMING

Thirty Tons of French Garden to Be Transported.

London.—Some thirty tons of French garden, heavy with plants as well as "golden soil," are being removed from Reading to Birmingham.

The garden, which stood in a corner of Messrs. Sutton's trial ground at Reading, is the best educational model yet seen. In its new site in Warley park, close to the bandstand, it will cover a strip 160 feet in length, and a good three days' work will be spent in setting it up and, so to speak, naturalizing it. The garden will be opened by the lord mayor and lady mayoress of Birmingham, who were originally interested in the scheme by Mr. Chance—like his cousin, Sir Joseph Chance, one of Birmingham's notable benefactors.

The model is described as "educational," designed to "demonstrate the continental system of intensive cultivation," and as a demonstration it is not less charming than it is educational.

Everything is to be transferred just as it is, and not one plant of the many thousands will be disturbed. The frames and cloches and open patches of ground are to demonstrate the growth and progress of French gardening as well as the results; and for this reason all the spectators will follow one path in one direction, so that they may pass with the explanatory lecturer, as it were, from February to November.

First, they will see a bed in the making, one part pit, one part heaped manure, one part completed with soil and frame. Next comes a row of frames in which three crops are growing cheek by jowl—lettuces, carrots and radishes. This is succeeded by a row in which four crops are growing together, the fourth being cauliflower.

From the frames you pass to the cloches under which the seed is first sown, making a close green mat. Next are the cloches where these seedlings are pricked out at even distances, showing how the cloches feed the frames. At this stage the first part of the year is completed. The succeeding beds and frames illustrate how the soil is used yet again for the later part of the year.

This is perhaps the most novel and interesting part of the demonstration. The variety is most striking. One of the late beds is filled with cabbages, between which again is a double crop of radish and endive. These cabbages, though they have only been in the ground six weeks are already as big as cabbages which were planted last November. Five months have been saved.

Other frames and cloches contain peas which are already in pod, strawberries which are just ripe, tomatoes in flower, and melons just beginning to set.

SNAKES CHANGE MAN'S VIEWS

Pennsylvania Farmer Puts His Hand Into Nest of Copperheads and Stops His Grumbling.

York, Pa.—Farmer William Tracey changed his notions about the weather when he reached into a nest of six copperhead snakes in removing an old stone fence, in Dover township, and promptly resigned from the Knockers' club.

Before the adventure of his hand Farmer Tracey's remarks at the Eastmount village store were those of a weather pessimist. He opined that it was unseasonably cool and that crops would suffer if a hot wave did not soon come along.

However, if that particular hot wave for which Tracey hankered had been there when he put his hand into the copperheads' nest, it is probable they would have been active enough to have made Tracey the hero of a different sort of reception. As it was, the six snakes were too sluggish from the chill to move with their summer alacrity.

LOVE MEASURED BY MACHINE

It Will Be Patented by Man Who Declares That It Records Psychological Attractiveness.

San Francisco.—A mechanical arrangement which he terms a "love machine," and which he declares will measure the strength of human affections between lovers, friends or relatives—which will correctly tabulate the amount of resistent will power of any individual, and which will also tell to an infinitesimal fraction the amount of psychological attractiveness exerted over a person by another—has been invented by Charles Trudow, a mechanic, who lives on Jones avenue, Elmhurst. Trudow has applied for letters patent upon his contrivance and is seeking capital with which to start a "love machine" factory.

The machine is termed a "phystymograph" by Trudow. Its powers are such that the human emotion termed love is drawn into it when two persons grip a pair of handles, not unlike those of an ordinary electric battery. A dial which connects a contrivance of springs and wires registers the amount of affection the two persons who grip the handles have for each other. If there is no love between them the dial hand remains motionless. According to tests by Trudow its only fault is that it cannot tell the full amount of love between some extra affectionate couples. The machine will not measure the affections of two men—the dial hand remaining motionless, as is the case when there is no love between men and women.

GAS PIPE ITS OWN PLUMBER

Kansas City, Mo.—Chance sometimes works overtime to produce very insignificant results, and, as an example, here's the story of a fire in the joint basement below the Economy Furniture company, 813 Main street, and a pawnshop owned by G. A. Stevens at 813½ Main street. A lead jacketed pipe runs through the floor of pawnshop to a steam radiator above. A space near the pipe was left when the plumbing was done. Directly below the hole is a gas pipe.

Now, at exactly two minutes of 11 o'clock in the morning, George A. Stevens, Jr., who clerks in the pawnshop, dropped a lighted cigarette through this hole; at the same second the gas discovered a small leak in the pipe and ventured out. The cigarette set fire to the gas and in a few moments a little blue flame was scorching the floor of the pawnshop. By the time several fire companies arrived the fire was extinguished and the gas pipe leaked no more.

Now, here's the explanation: The flame had melted the lead packet about the steam pipe, the lead had dripped down on the gas pipe and the leak was plugged.

City Owns Pigs and Pianos

Cleveland, O.—The task of preparing an inventory of every bit of property, movable and otherwise, owned by the city of Cleveland, is now drawing to a close. Twelve hundred typewritten pages in the office of Department Examiner Brown, at the city hall, show a complete list of everything that the city of Cleveland owns from office blotter to reservoirs, and from lead pencils to Minnie, the Brookside zoo elephant.

The work, so far as it has progressed, reveals the fact that Cleveland owns at least three pianos and two organs, six canary birds, 77 pigs, 239 chickens, 60 cows, several barber chairs and a number of razors, and only the general schedule for two departments out of a total of 200, has been completed. There are 139 rocking chairs at the City hospital and 118 at the infirmary.

Cleveland is the second city in the United States to adopt the plan of preparing an inventory of all goods and property owned. The first was Lynn, Mass.

"I believe that the municipal code should require every village in the state to adopt this plan," said City Examiner Brown. "An inventory should be made at least once every year. It is a valuable thing for a city to possess, and it is a businesslike procedure that should be generally followed by cities of the state."

OLD ALMANAC BRINGS $385

Boston.—The sale at an auction-room of one of the finest private libraries in the United States, that of the late Amor L. Hollingsworth of Milton, containing some of the very rarest of books ever printed and some of the choicest and most artistic bindings by the foremost binders of France, England and the United States has begun.

There are some very rare Americana in the library, and the few numbers of this class which were offered aroused strong bidding. A copy of Brankenbury's Almanac, which the average person wouldn't give ten cents for, was quickly run up from $100 to $385, the highest price ever paid for a copy of this almanac, which was printed at the Daye-Press, in Cambridge, the first press established in the colonies, by Samuel Green in 1667.

It belonged to Chief Justice Samuel Sewall of the Massachusetts Bay colony and contains an autograph note of Judge Sewall's concerning the incognito visit of Lord Culpepper, his majesty's lieutenant and governor general of Virginia, to Boston, August 24, 1680.

Will Buy American Cattle

Slaughter Houses Be Erected at Smithfield and Importation of Meat Discontinued.

London.—To encourage the importation of American cattle into England, the city of London corporation has a big scheme on hand. It is proposed to construct a huge slaughter house and cold storage plant in connection with the Metropolitan meat market at Smithfield.

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars will be spent on the scheme, and when they are completed the buildings will constitute one of the finest establishments of their kind in the world. They will be equipped with all the latest appliances and are expected to create a revolution in the importation of cattle into this country.

The scheme is viewed with consternation by the railroad companies here, who receive a large proportion of their income from the carriage of frozen meat from Liverpool and other ports to London. Under the new scheme cattle will be shipped direct to London.

This scheme will have a double advantage. The meat of foreign cattle killed in London will fetch as high a price in the market as if the cattle had been of English origin, while it will reduce enormously the necessity for consuming frozen meat.

There are already two great slaughter yards in this country—at Birkenhead and Deptford, near London—but their capacity is not equal to the demand which any considerable increase in the importation of live American cattle would make upon them.

Dead From Lack of Sleep

Russian Lives Six Years After Fracturing Skull in Railroad Accident.

St. Petersburg.—A puzzle to physicians was M. Petronovitch, a lawyer who died a few days ago at Nikolsk-Ussurisk. M. Petronovitch had hardly enjoyed a wink of sleep since he fractured his skull six years ago in a train collision.

For some weeks he was at the brink of death, but his strong constitution triumphed and he recovered and was discharged as cured from the hospital. A curious phenomenon then manifested itself. He found he could not sleep, but that did not worry him, as he did not feel the need of it.

After a while, however, he began to be uneasy under the strain of this unbroken wakefulness. The strongest soporifics had no effect on him. They made him ill but did not bring sleep. For weeks at a time he never closed his eyes. Then he would drop off into a light doze of two or three hours' duration and wake apparently refreshed.

This lasted some years and then he began to complain of intense fatigue, the only remedy for which, he discovered, was a vigorous massage of the head. As he was fairly well to do he could afford to consult several eminent specialists, but his case baffled them all. After his death his skull and brain were dissected, but the surgeons could find nothing to explain his persistent insomnia.

PRIZE COW TAKEN ON TOUR

Animal Will Be Exhibited and Lectured About to Enlighten Farmers on Breeding.

New York.—Zelma, the prize cow owned by the state of New York, will be one of the star performers on the "farming special" to be run by a certain railroad. She belongs to the state department of animal industry, and has one of the best milk producing records ever made. She is to be displayed along the route as an example of what can be accomplished by up-to-date breeding methods.

The train is to start from Ithaca and go to Auburn. Lectures and demonstrations are to be given at towns on the way—Freeville, Peruton, Groton, Locke, Moravia and Ensenore.

The train will be made up of two "laboratory" cars, a baggage car and a passenger coach. Besides the prize cow there will be chickens, spraying machines and other things which will help to illustrate the remarks of the experts.

Transportation.

A Texas evangelist says: "Persons who speculate on the stock market or bet on horse races are bound for hell in a racing automobile." But the experience of an observer is that those who speculate on horse races or bet on the stock market usually arrive there as pedestrians.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"Well, now, if that ain't surprising!" ejaculated Mrs. Ryetop, as she shaded her eyes with her hand. "There goes old Hiram Skinflint, and rather then step on a poor black ant he picked it up, and I bet he is going to drop it somewhere out of the reach of danger."

Her husband laughed knowingly.

"Not Hiram Skinflint, Mandy. He'll go down to Jed Weatherby's general store and order a pound of granulated sugar. Then while Jed is looking another way he'll drop the ant among the grains and tell Jed as long as his sugar has ants in it he ought to sell it at half price. The Mighty Traveler Goes Buoyantly Through a Long and Trying Reception-Parade, Showing Lively Interest in Everything American

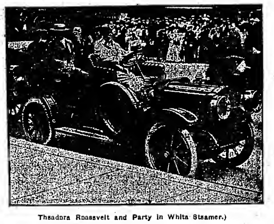
The White Company Receives Unique Compliment for the Sturdy Reliability of Its Steam Car From Mr. Roosevelt and Family



Theodore Roosevelt and Party in White Steamer.)

After fifteen months' absence, exactly as scheduled, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt disembarked from the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, Saturday morning, June 18, at 11 a. m. To the keen disappointment of a large group of newspaper correspondents, Mr. Roosevelt absolutely refused, as heretofore, to be interviewed or to talk on political subjects, but his rapid fire of questions showed the same virile interest in public affairs as before.

If the welcome tendered by the vast throng may be considered a criterion upon which to base a "return from Elba," surely there was no discordant note in the immense reception-parade, nor in the wildly clamorous crowd which cheered at every glimpse and hung on his very word.

The incidents of the day in New York were many, but perhaps none better illustrated the nervous energy and vitality of the man, the near-mania to be up-and-doing, which he has brought back to us, than the discarding of horses and carriages for the swifter and more reliable automobiles. The moment the Roosevelt family and immediate party landed, they were whisked away in White Steamers to the home of Mrs. Douglas Robinson at 433 Fifth avenue. A little later, when the procession reached the corner of Fifty-ninth street and Fifth avenue, Colonel Roosevelt again showed his preference for the motor car in general and the White cars in particular, when he, Cornelius Vanderbilt and Collector Loeb transferred from their carriage to White Steamers, which were in waiting for them.

After luncheon at Mr. Robinson's house, the entire party, including Colonel Roosevelt, again entered White cars and were driven to Long Island City, where they were to take a special train to the ex-President's home at Oyster Bay.

The supremacy of the White cars with the Roosevelt party was again demonstrated on Sunday, when the party was driven to church in the White Steamers, and a group of some forty prominent Rough Riders were taken in a White Gasoline Truck to a clambake at the Travers Island clubhouse of the New York Athletic Club.

Many Women who are Splendid Cooks

dread having to prepare an elaborate dinner because they are not sufficiently strong to stand over an intensely hot coal range. This is especially true in summer. Every woman takes pride in the table she sets, but often it is done at tremendous cost to her own vitality through the weakening effect of cooking on a coal range in a hot kitchen.

It is no longer necessary to wear yourself out preparing a fine dinner. Even in the heat of summer you can cook a large dinner without being worn out.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

Gives no outside heat, no smell, no smoke. It will cook the biggest dinner without heating the kitchen or the cook. It is immediately lighted and immediately extinguished. It can be changed from a slow to a quick fire by turning a handle. There's no drudgery connected with it, no coal to carry, no wood to chop. You don't have to wait fifteen or twenty minutes till its fire gets going. Apply a light and it's ready. By simply turning the wick up or down you get a slow or an intense heat on the bottom of the pot, pan, kettle or oven, and nowhere else. It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot, drop shelves for coffee, teapot or saucepan, and even a rack for towels. It saves time, worry, health and temper. It does all a woman needs and more than she expects. Made with 1, 2, and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner sizes can be had with or without Cabinet.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

NEW BANK PEOPLE SELL PART OF BUILDING

W. A. Schreiter Purchased the Room Occupied by the Sunshine Store.

An important real estate transfer this week was the sale by the directors of the recently organized Farmers National Bank to W. A. Schreiter of the part of the Lemieux block now occupied by the Sunshine store. In a few days Mr. Schreiter will move his drug stock to the new location.

The bank is to have the desirable location on the corner and the directors this week made arrangements for the remodeling of the front, some changes on the interior and for putting in bank fixtures. It is expected that the new bank will be ready for business about Sept. 1

POPULAR DEMAND NOMINATED LIND

Paul Pry's Comment on the Democratic State Convention.

St. Paul, August 2.—There was no possible way of preventing the nomination of John Lind as the Democratic candidate for governor of the state. It was not that the people did not believe he was sincere in saying he had made up his mind not to be candidate. They knew the position had no attraction for him. But they thought when he realized with what unanimity the call was made upon him he would make his own wishes subservient to the wishes of his friends and of the people of the state.

The People's Candidate.

It was not merely for party reasons that Mr. Lind's nomination was desired, nor was it merely the Democrats who wished him to run. Behind their action was the sentiment of the growing body of independent voters of the state. Because of Mr. Lind's very reluctance these were all the more anxious that he would consent to serve them. To tell the truth the people are something weary of the professional candidate whose every word and action is measured for its political effect, and who is ready either to adopt or to suppress any opinion if doing so would advance his political prospects. The wishes of the independent voters to have a man of high character and great talents occupy the most important office in the gift of the state naturally had weight with the Democrats. That is why the sentiment for Lind from the delegates from the country swept everything before it in the convention and demonstrated the futility of the efforts of a few practical politicians to side-track the movement at the instigation of interests who supposed that Mr. Lind's administration would prove detrimental to them.

They Trusted the Man.

That was on account of his attitude on county option, and a campaign was organized against him here in the fear that were he in the field his candidacy would have an effect adverse to their interests on the legislative campaign. That fear, however, only had weight with the agents of the liquor interests and those who sought their support. The voters themselves thought no less of a man who held opinions and expressed them fearlessly even if they did not agree with him. They were willing to let Mr. Lind hold any views he wished. It did not alter theirs. Thus it was that men opposed to county option and who would not stand for a party declaration joined with the extreme county option men in demanding the

A FINE WHEAT CROP

Much of it Will be in the Shock by Saturday Night.

A magnificent crop of wheat is now being harvested in southern Red Lake county. By the end of the week the greater part of it will have been cut.

The grain is of excellent quality and clean, the best wheat that has been raised in Red Lake county for years, and the yield is going to be good.

The oats, rye and barley crops will be rather light, but corn looks fine and more hay is being put up than for many years. There are comparatively few farmers who have reason to be dissatisfied with their crops this year.

Wasn't Worth While.

The Thief River News complains because the Gazette did not say anything about county division in the last two issues. Well, you see, it was this way: After wading through several columns of dope in recent issues of the News in an effort to find a single reason advanced why people ought to vote for county division, the search was given up. You see, John had shot his little wad and he's back on the old job of roasting county officials without saying anything.

If every one of Red Lake county's officials were incompetent or for any other reason ought not to be holding public office, any fool knows, John does, that that's no reason for dividing the county. If a condition of that kind existed the people would remedy it in another way.

SOME FIGURES ON COUNTY TAXES

The Thief River News' Campaign of Misrepresentation.

The cause of the high taxes in Red Lake county, the highest average in the state, may be easily understood from the amounts levied for the support of the county government in recent years. In 1909, $62,924.39 was levied for county purposes only. In 1908, $49,212.83; in 1906, $37,614.88; in 1901, $22,627.33; and in 1897, the year the county was organized, only $11,523.37 was levied. It cannot be argued that the growth of the county requires this increased expenditure, for the tax is increasing twice as fast as population. These official figures show that three times as much tax is needed to run the county now as in 1901, only nine years ago. Today the county has exactly three times the assessed valuation as it had in 1897, but the board of county commissioners levy six times the tax. Why this great discrepancy between property and taxes occur is accounted for only on the grounds of extravagance and waste of public money and utter disregard for the pocket books of the taxpayers. Unless a halt is called, either by the organization of Pennington county or by other more drastic means, Red Lake county will soon reach that condition known as bankruptcy. Other adjoining counties have gotten into this deplorable state and so may others which spend more than they raise in taxes.—Thief River News.

The figures as published in the above article taken from the Thief River News are correct, but as it has previously done the News is making figures that are correct in themselves lie. The Gazette has secured from the county auditor's office a statement showing for what purposes the levies have been made. The News makes a comparison between 1897, the year the county was organized, and 1909. Here are the figures:

Levy for 1897.

County Revenue	$ 6,365.62
County Bond and Interest	1,042.68
County Poor	2,058.16
Other Purposes	2,056.91
Total	$11,523.37

Levy for 1909.

County Revenue	$18,723.62
County Road and Bridge	7,489.38
County Bond and Interest	5,242.35
Building Fund	14,979.03
Ditch Assessments, etc.	16,490.01
Total	$62,924.39

Any fool knows that a county can't be run for $11,523.37. John Eastman knows that.

But let's compare the figures.

Not a cent was spent for roads and bridges in 1897. You see the county had just been organized and they weren't spending any money for anything. They raised a little money to take care of the poor and to pay the interest on some old Polk county obligations and that was about all. Item No. 2 in the levy for 1909 is for roads and bridges and amounts to $7,489.38.

The bond and interest fund has increased about four thousand dollars since the county was organized. There was no occasion for any bonded indebtedness when the county was organized—for as previously stated the county wasn't spending any money the year it was born. That's item No. 3 of the levy of 1909 amounting to $5,241.35.

For several years after the county was organized not one cent was spent for county buildings. A building for court house purposes was furnished by Red Lake Falls without expense to the county. In 1909 a tax levy for court house purposes was made because some of the people of Thief River Falls objected to a bond issue to pay for the building. That is item No. 4 of the tax levy for 1909 and amounts to $14,979.03.

The last item in the levy is for ditch assessments. But ditch assessments do not increase taxes at all. Those people who desire to have ditches constructed ask for a loan for that purpose and they pay the money back in installments. The ditch assessments are taxed up against their land and no one whose land is not benefitted pays one cent of ditch taxes. But the ditch assessments make the tax levy for 1909 appear $16,490.01 larger than it otherwise would appear. In making a comparison to show extravagance ditch assessments are not to be considered at all. The construction of a county ditch is practically a private undertaking, the county acting simply as an agent in negotiating the loan and collecting the interest and payments, the whole expense of the transaction being charged against the lands benefitted by the construction of the ditch.

Can any one see extravagance in the last four items of the tax levy for 1909? That much of the levy is for improvements that are needed.

Red Lake county is building roads and bridges and a courthouse and some of its farmers are digging ditches which accounts for practically the complete tax levy with the exception of the first item in the statement above, the levy for the expenses of county government.

All of the other items speak for themselves. Let's compare the amounts levied for county revenue. In fact that is what will show extravagance if there is extravagance.

In 1897, the year the county was organized, they levied $6,365.62 to pay the officers' salaries, for purchasing supplies, heating and all other expenses of county government.

The News says that our assessed valuation is now only three times what it was in 1897.

Well, last year the tax levy for the expenses of county government was not quite three times as great—$18,723.62.

Let's begin by asking how they did it in 1897. How did they pay the expenses of county government on that tax levy? What salaries did the officers receive?

Yes, that's why you smile.

Could any one have said that the business of the county was not conducted economically if the levy had been twice $6,365.92?

And who is there who says that $18,723.62 is too much for paying the officers' salaries and the other expenses of county government?

You know, Brother John, that the county wasn't spending money for anything the first year of its existence—and the officers worked for their board and went home nights and Sundays.

Why don't the News compare the levy for 1909 with a time after the county had been doing business for a few years. But if that is done the Gazette challenges the News to print the items of the tax levy as the Gazette has done.

Before making the comparison to show the extravagance two items should be cut out—Ditches and Buildings. Ditches can't be any extravagance because they are never constructed until people need them, demand them and are ready to pay for them.

And there was no building fund and no occasion for such a fund in the early history of the county so it isn't "on the square" to make the building fund a part of the grand total for purposes of comparison of the levies to show extravagance.

But you say building a courthouse is an extravagance. Allright. Lets agree to disagree on that point and fight it out on that issue. That's about all there is to it anyhow.

Do the tax payers want to pay for two courthouses instead of one? Are they ready to pay all the other expenses of the maintenance of two county governments with nothing to show for the expense except to know that they have gratified the selfish desire of certain Thief River people?

The only possibility of success that the Thief River Falls people have is that they may be able to deceive enough people by the campaign of misrepresentation to carry the election next fall. That is the kind of campaign they are now carrying on. If they were to tell what they know would be the effect of county division they would be making votes against division.

Every person reading this is requested to take a careful comparison of the statements made by the News and the Gazette.

THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION

THE TICKET.

For Governor—John Lind, Minneapolis.

Lieutenant Governor—M. C. Tifft, Long Prairie.

State Treasurer—Charles F. Ladner, St. Cloud.

State Auditor—T. J. Meighen, Fillmore county.

Attorney General—J. M. Fresman, Olivia.

Justices of the Supreme Court—T. D. O'Brien, St. Paul, and Arthur H. Snow, Winona.

Minneapolis, July 29.—The Democratic state convention assembled in the Minneapolis auditorium nominated John Lind of Minneapolis for governor amid a wild scene, which was characterized by intense enthusiasm and remarkable parliamentary confusion. There was practically no opposition to the nomination of Mr. Lind as the party standard bearer, but a number of his friends tried their utmost to head off the nomination under the belief that the former governor would decline to accept it.

Headed by the St. Louis county delegation the country delegates maintained the most determined stand for the nomination of their choice and the combined efforts of the Ramsey and Hennepin county delegations to effect the selection of some other standard bearer were futile. Mr. Lind was chosen first by a yea and nay vote. Then a proposition to make the selection unanimous caused some expert parliamentary maneuvering which consumed over an hour. The nomination finally was made unanimous.

It was half an hour before noon when Frank A. Day, chairman of the state central committee, called the convention to order in these words:

"Boys, here we are again in a good old fashioned, fighting Democratic convention that is not controlled by bosses and is unacquainted with the machinery which propels a steam roller. You have all paid 2 cents a mile to get here and you would be paying 3 cents had it not been for the efforts

DEATH OF A PIONEER.

Peter Raymond of Louisville Died Tuesday Morning.

Peter Raymond, one of the pioneers of Red Lake county, died at his home in Louisville at 2 o'clock Tuesday morning after a very brief illness. Mr. Raymond was a veteran of the Civil War and one of the earliest settlers of the county, having come here over thirty years ago. He has always lived on his homestead in Louisville.

Death was probably due to the infirmities of old age. Mr. Raymond was in town Saturday and stated that he was feeling as well as usual and it was not until the evening before his death that he complained of feeling unwell and even then he was able to sit up.

Deceased was eighty-five years old and is survived by a family of grown children. Funeral services were held today in the Catholic church at Louisville of which deceased was a member.

BEAT THE BRANDOWS

Local Ball Team Took an Easy Game From Crookston Aggregation.

In a base ball game on the local grounds Sunday afternoon the locals took an easy victory from the Brandows of Crookston. In the absence of Garceau, Vera Healy was on the mound for the locals and performed in excellent style. He was given excellent support, Red Lake playing almost an errorless game. Crookston was not so strong in the field or with the stick as the locals. The score by innings:

R. L. Falls	1	0	2	0	6	0	0	0	x	—9

Mose Ducharme entertained a number of his friends last Sunday. The time was spent playing cards and refreshments were served. Among the guests was Mrs. T. Robillard from town who paid her last visit here before leaving for her new home in North Yakima, Wash.

Mrs. W. H. Krueger and children returned Saturday from Crookston where they had been visiting with the family of Herman Krueger.

BIG DAY FOR ST. MARY'S CHURCH

Bishop Corbett Here for Confirmation of a Large Class.

Sunday was a big day for the members of the St. Mary's church. The Right Reverend Bishop Timothy Corbett of Crookston was here for the confirmation of a class of seventy-five young people.

The bishop delivered a sermon in the forenoon and also spoke in the evening. He spoke in English on all occasions. This was the new bishop's first official visit to Red Lake Falls and his eloquent addresses and pleasing personality delighted those who attended the services.

Following the bishop's morning address the sacrament of confirmation was administered.

Visiting clergymen who were Rev. Fr. Ambrose's guests for the occasion were Fr. Conrad of St. Thomas, Fr. Veilleux of Terrebonne and Fr. Fayolle of this city.

In the afternoon and evening the ladies of the church served ice cream and cake on the church grounds and in the evening the Red Lake Falls band rendered a program of excellent numbers. Several people from Terrebonne, Crookston, Grand Forks and other places were here for the occasion. The ladies realized $65 from the sale of ice cream and cake.

WARNING TO OFFICERS.

Should Watch Out for School Supply Agents.

People traveling through the country offering for sale maps and other school supplies and claiming to have recommendations from Supt. H. F. Anderson are making such claims without authority from Mr. Anderson who does not recommend any agent's supplies. School officers should govern themselves accordingly. Turn down the agents. Consult with the teachers and the superintendent about the purchase of school supplies.

Summer School Closes.

The Red Lake county summer school held at Thief River Falls closed last week after a four weeks session. The school was a successful one. The total enrollment was 128; the average daily attendance 88. Supt. Anderson says that the difference between the total enrollment and average attendance is accounted for by the fact that a number took the special work in sewing etc., that continued for one week only.

DEEP WATERW'YS

NEXT MEETING AT ALTON

Main Officers Re-elected by Upper Mississippi Association.—South's Need of Flour Said to Insure Aid in Waterways Work.

St. Paul, Minn.—Congress expects every state and every municipality along the Mississippi river to show its appreciation of the recent appropriations made for river improvement by providing proper terminals and maintaining proper freight handling facilities so that the river can be utilized for transportation. This is the statement of Congressman Tawney of Winona, chairman of the committee on appropriations. Mr. Tawney gave a short address before the convention of the Upper Mississippi Improvement association at its closing session.

"Congress was glad of the opportunity to appropriate money for this purpose of improving the rivers, but it expects that the states and cities will now do their part," said Mr. Tawney.

Thomas Wilkinson of Burlington, Iowa, was re-elected president of the association; Lewis B. Boswell of Quincy, Illinois, secretary, and J. P. Eckbarl, treasurer, were both re-elected. The following were named as vice-presidents of the association: J. G. Arneson, Stillwater, Minn.; Wendell A. Anderson, La Crosse, Wis.; W. A. Meese, Moline, Ill.; L. A. Hamell, Keokuk, Iowa, and J. J. Martin, St. Louis Mo.

Alton, Ill., was selected as the place of meeting for next year. There was no opposition to the selection.

Resolutions thanking Congressman Tawney for his work in getting increased appropriations were passed.

The reservoir system of the upper Mississippi was indorsed and the convention asked not only that it be maintained but that it be enlarged.

Now that congress has appropriated the money for a six-foot channel and other extensive improvements in the river, the convention went on record as believing that it was incumbent on municipalities and business organizations to see that proper terminals and landings were constructed and that freight handling facilities were provided. It also recommended that the building of modern steel craft be encouraged.

The Upper Mississippi River Improvement association will continue its membership in the National Rivers and Harbors congress and will also co-operate with all other kindred organizations in securing improvements for the river. This intention was included in the text of the resolution.

Minneapolis flour is the product most demanded by the states of the lower Mississippi valley, and for that reason these states are willing to co-operate in securing improvements in waterways in the upper Mississippi. This is the opinion of Thomas H. Lovelace, secretary of the Lakes to the Gulf Deep Waterways association, who addressed the convention in the morning.

South Demands Flour.

"Iron ore lies in abundance at the headwaters of the Mississippi and should be brought down for smelting. Paper pulp and all manner of forest products come also," said Mr. Lovelace, "but most of all the lower Mississippi demands the flour from the Minneapolis mills for domestic and export trade, in return for which it will send up in great quantities cotton for the Oriental trade, sugar, coffee, rice, hardwood and all the imports from the world at large that enter the gates of New Orleans."

Appropriations for Work.

"The generous appropriations of this year, grudgingly permitted to pass by the opponents in the legislative and executive departments of the government, bear strong testimony to the power of public opinion which has been aroused by the river improvement association."

Governor Eberhart delivered an address before the association, in which he dwelt particularly on the relations between water transportation and transportation by rail.

"Many of the best railroad men today realize that water transportation and railroad transportation must work together," said the governor. "It is as much advantage to the railroad to have the waterways deepened as it is to anyone else. The railroad cannot handle all of the business. However, with a six-foot canal, bulky material can be shipped by water. This will be a great blessing to the railroads themselves and I am sure that they will co-operate. Minnesota is perhaps more intensely interested in the development of interior waterways than any other state in the Union."

BLINDPIGGERS CAUGHT.

White Earth.—The agency under the direction of J. R. Howard, United States Indian agent, succeeded in rounding up two blind piggers who have been doing a lucrative business among the Indians at Ebro and along the northern boundary of the reservation during the past summer.

The prisoners are in the agency jail and will be turned over to the charge of deputy United States marshal, who is expected here soon.

COW, HIT BY TRAIN, HURTS BOY.

Fergus Falls Youth Knocked Into River, His Leg Broken.

Fergus Falls. — The fast Great Northern limited struck a cow on the track just before reaching the river east of this city. The cow was hurled from the track and instantly killed and as her body went through the air it struck the hired boy named Krietzer and he went down the bank with the cow into the river. He was gotten out alive, but his leg is broken.

HAYNES MAY RUN FOR GOV.

Would Enter Arena if Choice of All Democrats.

Minneapolis, Minn. — It can be stated with authority that should Mayor Haynes be offered unanimously the Democratic nomination for governor he would accept.

"Should the Democratic state convention pick you as the party leader and tender you the nomination for governor unanimously would you accept?" was asked the mayor.

"The possibility is so remote that I have not even given it serious consideration," was the reply.

That the proposition has been put directly up to the mayor by the Democratic leaders and that he is being seriously considered as the most available candidate in the party is indicated by a remark made by the chief executive of the city later on in the conversation.

"I suppose," he said in a thoughtful way, "that I will have to make up my mind one way or the other before the state convention."

This is taken to indicate that at the St. Paul conference of Democratic leaders which he was invited to attend Tuesday some definite offer was made to him. It is pointed out that Mayor Haynes could carry Hennepin county by a tremendous vote and would do much better here than John Lind. The Democrats also say he would make a brilliant fight throughout the state and that his anti-corporation attitude would bring him many votes. The declaration is also made that aside from John Lind he is more widely known than any one else who has been mentioned by the Democrats and that in the cities especially he would run much stronger than Congressman Hammond.

Mr. Haynes is of the opinion that John Lind will be the nominee and says he has no doubt as to the outcome of the convention. He believes Mr. Lind will accept.

SHERIFF CLOSES HAMEL BAR.

Minneapolis. — Sheriff Otto Langu, of Hennepin county, locked the doors of both of the saloons in Hamel, the town 16 miles west of Minneapolis where the district schoolhouse was dynamited and set afire last Tuesday morning. The dynamiting of the school had been attributed to the saloon war which has raged in the little hamlet for several years and kept the people in a state of terror with its several fires and threats.

When he was informed that James Sheridan, whose license expired Thursday night, and who had been warned to cease selling liquor, was operating his saloon in defiance of the edicts of the county attorney and the sheriff, Sheriff Langum hurried to the town and closed not only Sheridan's place, but that of his rival, John Scott.

May Deny Both Licenses.

After the dynamite outrage of Tuesday morning it was discovered that both saloons are within 1,500 feet of the schoolhouse, contrary to the provisions of the state law. Sheridan's application for a renewal of his license was held up, and it is declared that his appeal will be denied next Monday, when the county commissioners meet. On good authority it is declared that the license granted May 25 to Scott also will be revoked. This will leave the little town dry.

NO LIQUOR NEAR RESERVATION.

Will Abolish all the Saloons on Ceded Indian Lands.

Washington, D. C. — Prohibition will be extended by the national government on ceded Indian lands in Minnesota. The bureau of Indian affairs has decided to enforce its anti-liquor regulations on a larger area of these lands than previously has been attempted.

All the lands within and adjacent to the White Earth and Leech Lake reservations will be embraced within the prohibited territory. Some places within this area previously have been permitted to maintain saloons, but these will now be abolished and the ban on the introduction of intoxicating liquors will be applied to the following counties: Becker, Cass, Clay, Hubbard, Mahnomen and Norman; southwestern portion of Beltrami, Itasca and Polk; southern portions of Clearwater and Red Lake; those parts of Crow Wing and Wadena lying north of the Mississippi and the northern portion of Otter Tail.

This action was taken by the Indian bureau in order to protect the red men adequately against whisky and also to enforce, so far as its appropriation will permit, the provisions of the treaties by which the lands were ceded. These conventions prohibit the introduction of intoxicating liquors in the whole northern part of the state, except by consent of congress or the president, and if carried out strictly according to their letter, it is said, would embrace even Minneapolis and Duluth. There is no present likelihood, however, of the Indian bureau invading these two cities with its temperance crusade.

AUTO MOTOR BOAT BURNED UP.

Red Wing, Minnesota.—The Forest Products Company's auto motor boat No. 29 blew up in midstream and was burned to the water's edge.

A 30-gallon tank of gasoline surrendered to the heat but there was no explosion. The oil burned as it poured out of the tank.

William Farrel, operating the boat, fought the flames for three hours and was painfully burned about the hands and lower limbs.

DEAN GREEN LAID TO REST.

Boston, Mass. — Funeral service for Samuel Bowdleer Green, a leading forester and horticulturist and dean of the school of forestry at the University of Minnesota, were held in Mount Auburn, Chelsea. Among those in attendance were scientists of this neighborhood and friends of Professor Green living in Chelsea and Wellesley. Prof. Green was born at Chelsea in 1859, the son of Thomas and Anna Green.

FIRES STILL BURN

FOREST CONFLAGRATIONS IN WISCONSIN AND KOOTENAY DISTRICTS.

ESCAPE IS IMPOSSIBLE

Merrill, Wis., July 21.—Several hundred persons of Bloomville and Heineman are hemmed in by forest fires at the former town with seemingly no means of escape. The fires have destroyed the railroad tracks for some distance between Bloomville and Merrill, making it impossible for the inhabitants of the doomed village to seek refuge in that direction.

Wausau, Wis., July 21.—Forest fires in the southwestern portion of this county are probably the worst fires ever seen in Marathon county, and unless the wind dies down will lay waste the entire county and about 10,000,000 feet of standing timber will be destroyed. The fire covered an area fully ten miles in length, extending west and east.

The chief loser is the Hatton Lumber Co., of New London, which lost 4,000,000 feet of logs, and the Moore & Galloway Lumber Co., 1,500,000 feet of hardwood and pine logs.

Winnipeg, July 21.—Latest reports from Sandon in the Kootenay district state that town is in imminent danger. A train crowded with refugees is ready to leave. Three Forks, reported burned is still in existence but surrounded by fire. The total destruction of White Water and McGuigan is confirmed. The fire is now closing in on the Rossland Center big mines.

At Kenora, Ont., a hundred miles east of here brush fires are within a mile of the town. Farm houses on the outskirts were destroyed and the town is filled with smoke. A fire brigade has been out thirty-six hours continuously fighting off the fire. The residents are packing valuables and preparing for a hasty departure.

Spokane, Wash., July 21.—The town of Marble on the Columbia river, about ten miles south of the Canadian boundary, is reported to be burning. The town's destruction is expected. Fire in the Flatcreek country, near Bossburg, Wash., is steadily spreading and threatens to wipe out a majority of the homes. In the Chona Creek basin the citizens have been fighting the flames almost continuously since Sunday afternoon. Indians bring the news to Bossburg that all the buildings at the Napoleon mine, five miles west of town, have been burned.

Artilleryman Killed by Explosion.

Fort Monroe, Va., July 21.—Eleven artillerymen are dead and a number of others seriously injured, including two officers, as the result of the blowing out of the breech block in a 12-inch shore gun at Derussey battery, during coast artillery practice here today. The accident occurred while the student officers were endeavoring to sink a fleet of towed targets, representing an imaginary hostile fleet proceeding toward Washington. The battery was under the immediate command of Sergeant Harry Haas of the Sixty-ninth Co., United States coast artillery.

Freight Is the Problem.

Montreal, July 21.—"Freight" continued to be the problem in the Grand Trunk railway strike today. Five thousand striking conductors and trainmen continued to be conspicuous by their absence not only from their posts which they left Monday night, but from public view anywhere.

Their leaders, speaking for them, reaffirmed that all are quietly awaiting an expected time when the railroad will find the resumption of its freight business impossible and will make such wage overtures to the strikers as will induce them to return.

Kidnaped and Ate Children.

Puerto Plata, Santo Domingo, July 21—The disappearance of Dominican children near the Haytien frontier has been explained by the confession of a Haytian woman that she murdered them, eating four.

This African cult is prevalent in Hayti. Christianity appears to be a failure there. The Dominican press demands severe measures to prevent Haytian immigration and thus protect the civilization of the Hayti public.

Father Francis Drowned.

Devils Lake, N. D., July 21.—Rev. Father Francis, recently from Richardton, N. D., was drowned last night while bathing in the lake near the monastery south of the city. The alarm was given and searching parties were out all night. The remains have not yet been recovered.

First Harvest Is On.

Edgeley, N. D., July 19.—The first harvest started here today. The farmers estimate a yield of seven to eight bushels but later wheat will go around ten to twelve. Te recent rains in this vicinity have helped late crops and made a better prospect for forage.

Preparing Exhibits for State Fair.

Bismarck, N. D., July 21.—Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor Gilbreath is busy at present getting the exhibits that will be taken to the state fair at Fargo, in shape. Most of the exhibit that was used at Omaha at the corn show last year will be shipped to Fargo and from there to other fairs in other states this fall. There will, of course, be fresh exhibits along the line of grains and grasses, but the ground work will be the same as at the big show last fall. The exhibit made a big hit at Omaha and will probably be one of the big attractions at the local fair.

Minot Clerks Get Raise.

Washington, July 20.—The postmaster at Minot, N. D., has been authorized to promote the clerks in his office, effective July 1, as follows: One clerk from $800 to $900, one from $900 to $1,000, one from $1,000 to $1,000, and one from $1,100 to $1,200.

Insurrection in Honduras.

New Orleans, La., July 20.—Insurrections today at Cerba and other points on the coast of Honduras are declared by members of the Central American colony here to be the signal for a general uprising throughout the country of the sympathizers of Manuel Bonlella.

AVIATOR WAS CLEVER

Had Machine Under Perfect Control and Remained in Air for Sixteen Minutes—Large Crowds.

Grand Forks, N. D. July 20.—Arch Hoxsey, the aeroplane man, was easily the feature of the opening day at the Grand Forks fair when for sixteen minutes he kept the great crowd gaping with astonishment while he cut all kinds of capers in the air. He has his machine under perfect control every second of the time.

Yesterday's attendance is estimated at 10,000. The grandstand and bleachers were filled and hundreds grouped themselves along the fences or sat in carriages and automobiles around the race track during the afternoon events. The avenues and the merry midway were thronged with people from morning until the gates closed last night. It was a good crowd and an enthusiastic and well behaved one and everybody seemed to be thoroughly satisfied.

The afternoon's race programme and the vaudeville acts between the heats were highly interesting.

Freight Service Is Tied Up.

Montreal, July 20.—With its more important passenger schedule fairly maintained, the pressing problem confronting the Grand Trunk railway today lies in the continued and apparently complete paralysis of its freight traffic. This condition, the striking conductors and trainmen declare to have been precisely the objective when to a number of 5,000 or more, they left their various positions on the company's system from Portland, Me., to Detroit, and in New England, Monday night.

Carloads of perishable freight are standing on siding far and near and unless it is possible to begin to turn wheels soon the property loss will be large. Food supplies and crop transportation are vitally involved it is said.

The generally expressed opinion at many important points on the Grand Trunk is that the strikers will be able to continue the freight train holdup two or three days longer at least. Conductors and yardmen in the employ of the Wabash, which road leases from the Grand Trunk between Niagara Falls, Ont., and Windsor, Ont., opposite Detroit have gone out and as a result the Wabash is having considerable trouble in moving passenger trains over that division. No attempt is being made to touch freight.

Monon R. R. President Murdered.

Chicago, July 20.—Ira G. Rawn, president of the Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville railway (Monon route) was shot through the heart and instantly killed at 1:30 this morning by a burglar who entered his summer home in Winnetka, a suburb fifteen miles north of Chicago.

The burglar forced open the basement door and was heard prowling about the first floor by Rawn, who went down stairs to investigate.

Members of his family heard him say, "What do you want here," and the shot was fired immediately afterwards.

When they hurried to the first floor Mr. Rawn was lying dead at the foot of the stairs with a bullet through his heart. The murderer or murderess escaped.

Lightning Strikes Aeroplane.

Barcelona, July 20.—In a cross country flight today Aviator Ehrmann's aeroplane was struck by lightning and fell blazing to the ground. The aviator escaped injury.

There never has a more startling aeroplane exhibition than that which Ehrmann unwilling afforded, and those who witnessed it could hardly believe their eyes when the air man emerged from the singed framework none the worse for his experience.

He was sailing along as a moderate height when he got in the path of the sky bolt. Instantly the aeroplane was enveloped in the flames, its canvas wings shriveled up, and clinging to the skeleton of his craft, Ehrmann came down with a thud.

Wickersham to Determine.

Washington, July 20.—Until the officials of the department of justice have communicated with Attorney General Wickersham, now en route to Alaska, no announcement will be made here concerning the procedure which may be had in the pending prosecutions of the officials of the American Federation of Labor growing out of the trouble with the Buck Stove & Range Co. of St. Louis.

Governor Names Commissioners.

Bismarck, N. D., July 20.—Governor Burke appointed the followink commissioners for the new county of Renville today:

I. D. Johnson, Tolley.
Ben. Harvey, Sherwood.
Donald Gillespie, Glenburn.

It is said that the apointment of these men means that Mohall will get the temporary county seat.

Want Control of Alaskan Roads.

Washington, July 21.—A proceeding was instituted before the District of Columbia supreme court today to compel the interstate commerce commission to assume jurisdiction over Alaskan railways and transportation companies and to compel them to file tariffs with the commission.

Cannon Does Strenuous Work.

Kansas City, Mo., July 20.—Speaker Joseph G. Cannon arrived in Kansas City this morning from Marion, Kan., where last night he closed his Kansas stumping tour in behalf of the "standpat" republican congressmen who are seeking renomination. Speaker Cannon left for St. Louis this morning. He will go from St. Louis to his home in Danville, Ill., either tonight or tomorrow. When he reached Kansas City he said he was feeling well. Despite his 74 years and his temporary collapse at Winfield last Saturday, the speaker is determined to get into the fall campaign. Cannon before the end of the State Gets General Rain.

Bismarck, N. D., July 19.—There was a general rain over this section of the state last night. Reports from Dickinson, New Salem and Mandon are to the effect that there was a heavy downpour of rain during the afternoon for about an hour. The same rain hit Bismarck and Burleigh county, later in the evening.

Along the Soo line to the north Ruso, Dogden, Washburn, Wilton, Ryder and Flasher report refreshing rains and while they have come too late to do any good, to wheat, will brace up the corn and flax and do a great deal of good to the pastures and hay fields.

CANADIAN STRIKE

FREIGHT TRAFFIC IS TIED UP ON THE GRAND TRUNK RAILROAD.

GOVERNMENT OFFERS AID

Will Appoint Board of Arbitration at Its Own Expense if Desired by Both Parties—Three Thousand Men Out.

Montreal, July 19.—Before noon today the Grand Trunk officials claimed that the strike of conductors and trainmen inaugurated on its line last night had not tied up its service. The company officials admitted some local trains had been cancelled and that the freight traffic practically had been compelled to come to a standstill, but claimed that all important passenger and mail trains were moving as usual.

The International Limited from Montreal to Chicago, the company's most important day train, left Bonaventure station here as usual at 9 o'clock this morning in charge of a non-union crew. The company expects to replace many of the men who are on strike by recruits from their shops.

Montreal, July 19.—A new turn was given to the situation in the strike of the Grand Trunk railroad conductors and trainmen here shortly after noon by the receipt of a dispatch from the minister of labor at Ottawa offering on behalf of the government to appoint a board of arbitration on the trouble between the company and its employee, the finding to be binding on both and the government to bear all expenses in connection therewith. The offer was submitted in the form of letter to President Hayes of the Grand Trunk and to head officials of the unions involved and is now under consideration by them.

Fire at Lakota.

Lakota, N. D., July 19.—Fire which started in the Tony LaBiere bakery at 9:30 this forenoon from a gasoline explosion caused $35,000 damage in the business district.

The following buildings were totally destroyed:

Tony LaBiere, restaurant and bakery, loss $4,000.

People's Drug Store, owned by Ivetz & Jennings, loss $5,000.

Vacant building, owned by J. W. Murphy, $2,500.

Ferris & Son, general store, loss $10,000.

Hartin Elevator, loss with contents, $15,000.

After burning the Ferris & Son store the fire was stopped on the north by the brick building owned by the Lakota Mercantile Co. It jumped the street, however, and consumed the Hardin elevator.

Taft Also Breaks Record.

Eastport, Me., July 19.—When the presidential yacht Mayflower pointed her way up the Lubec Narrows this morning, a president of the United States for the first time in the history of the United States reached the northeast corner of the country. Eastport, the home of the American sardine industry, was appropriately excited over the occasion. Flags and bunting were displayed from all the low lying buildings along the water front and the entire population was early astir getting the little town in readiness for the coming of the noted guest. Mayor Garnett, who was to have the honor of entertaining the president, personally superintended most of the preparations.

Disaster Pursues Zeppelin.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, July 19.—The gas works of the Zeppelin Airship Co., were demolished by an explosion today. Seven persons were injured.

The cause of the accident has not been ascertained. Shortly before noon the gas meter burst and the surrounding walls were blown to a great distance. Several colleges in the vicinity fell in heaps of ruins while other near by buildings which held to their foundations lost their windows and doors. The detonation was heard for many miles around, causing a panic in the district and even among those residing on the opposite side of Lake Constance.

Still Driving Out Jews.

Kiev, Russia, July 19.—The expulsion of the Jews from Kiev continues at the rate of forty-five individuals a day. From July 4 to July 15, 497 were expelled by what is known as the second method: that is, they were forced actually to leave town.

During the same period 1,121 persons were expelled by the first method, which in effect is a warning from their department, but permits them a time for the settlement of private affairs. In a majority of cases the latter method proves ineffective, as the Jews in that category are prone to return to Kiev after a temporary absence.

Will Visit Alaska.

Seattle, Wash., July 19.— United States Attorney General George W. Wickersham and secretary of the department of commerce and labor, Charles Nagel, will start on their Alaskan tour next Saturday from Vancouver, B. C. on government fisheries steamer Albatross.

Bush Fires Burning.

Winnipeg, July 19.—Bush fires again blazing in the Kootenay district of the Rockies with terrific ferocity caused five deaths and enormous damage to property yesterday.

The most serious loss is in Kaslo district. The town of Whitewater is blotted off the map. All the buildings at McGuigan are destroyed and the Lucky Jump, Rambler and other mines lost buildings.

Three hundred miners with their families lost all their possessions. The Powers Lumber Co. was completely destroyed with timber and cord wood. Several valuable teams were roasted.

Strike Will Likely Fail.

New Castle, Eng., July 21.—The Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants today refused to recognize and finance the strike against the North-eastern Railway Co. This attitude on the part of the society, which embraces the whole country, probably will prove to the success of the strike.

The strike of employes on the North-Eastern Railway is fast demoralizing the industries dependent upon the line. The disorganization of traffic threatens ruin to many shippers. The loss on perishable goods, fish, milk and the like is enormous.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of [illegible]

"[illegible]"

"[illegible]"

"[illegible] the man who did it—he would be known."

"Yes. I tell you both, as sure as I stand here: I believe that Paul Armstrong looted his own bank. I believe he took a million at least, as the result, and that he will never come back. I'm worse than a pauper now. I can't ask Louise to share nothing a year with me, and when I think of this disgrace for her, I'm crazy."

The most ordinary events of life seemed pregnant with possibilities that day, and when Halsey was called to the telephone, I ceased all pretense at eating. When he came back from the telephone his face showed that something had occurred. He waited, however, until Thomas left the dining room; then he told us.

"Paul Armstrong is dead," he announced gravely. "He died this morning in California. Whatever he did, he is beyond the law now."

Gertrude turned pale.

"And the only man who could have cleared Jack can never do it!" she said despairingly.

"Also," I replied coldly, "Mr. Armstrong is for ever beyond the power of defending himself. When your Jack comes to me, with some $200,000 in his hands, which is about what you have lost, I shall believe him innocent."

CHAPTER XI.

Halsey Makes a Capture.

It was about half-past eight when we left the dining room, and still engrossed with one subject, the failure of the bank and its attendant evils, Halsey and I went out into the grounds for a stroll. Gertrude followed us shortly. "The light was thickening," to appropriate Shakespeare's description of twilight, and once again the tree toads and the crickets were making night throb with their tiny life. It was almost oppressively lonely, in spite of its beauty, and I felt a sickening pang of homesickness for my city at night—for the clatter of horses' feet on cemented paving, for the lights, the voices, the sound of children playing. The country after dark oppresses me. The stars, quite eclipsed in the city by the electric lights, here become insistent, assertive. Whether I want to or not, I find myself looking for the few I know by name, and feeling ridiculously new and small by contrast—always an unpleasant sensation.

After Gertrude joined us we avoided any further mention of the murder. To Halsey, as to me, there was ever present, I am sure, the thought of our conversation of the night before. As we strolled back and forth along the drive, Mr. Jamieson emerged from the shadow of the trees.

"Good evening," he said, managing to include Gertrude in his bow. Gertrude had never been even ordinarily courteous to him, and she nodded coldly. Halsey, however, was more cordial, although we were all constrained enough. He and Gertrude went on together, leaving the detective to walk with me. As soon as they were out of earshot, he turned to me.

"Do you know, Miss Innes," he said, "the deeper I go into this thing, the more strange it seems to me. I am very sorry for Miss Gertrude. It looks as if Bailey, whom she has tried so hard to save, is worse than a rascal, and after her plucky fight for him, it seems hard."

I looked through the dusk to where Gertrude's light dinner dress gleamed among the trees. She had made a plucky fight, poor child. Whatever she might have been driven to do, I could find nothing but a deep sympathy for her. If she had only come to me with the whole truth then!

"Miss Innes," Mr. Jamieson was saying, "in the last three days, have you seen any suspicious figures around the grounds? Any—woman?"

"No," I replied. "I have a houseful of maids that will bear watching, one and all. But there has been no strange woman near the house or Liddy would have seen her, you may be sure. She has a telescopic eye."

Mr. Jamieson looked thoughtful.

"It may not amount to anything," he said slowly. "It is difficult to get any perspective on things around here, because every one down in the village is sure he saw the murderer, either before or since the crime. And half of them will stretch a point or two as to facts, to be obliging. But the man who drives the hack down there tells a story that may possibly prove to be important."

"I have heard it, I think. Was it the one the parlor maid brought up yesterday, about a ghost wringing its hands on the roof? Oh perhaps it's the one the milk-boy heard; a tramp washing a dirty shirt, presumably bloody, in the creek below the bridge?"

I could see the gleam of Mr. Jamieson's teeth as he smiled.

"Neither," he said. "But Matthew Geist, which is our friend's name, claims that on Saturday night, at 9:30, a veiled lady—"

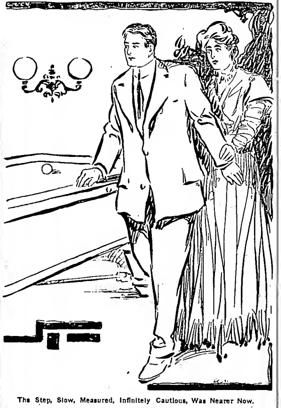
"I knew it would be a veiled lady," I broke in.

"A veiled lady," he persisted, "who was apparently young and beautiful, engaged his hack and asked to be driven to Sunnyside. Near the gate, however, she made him stop, in spite of his remonstrances, saying she preferred to walk to the house. She paid him, and he left her there. Now, Miss Innes, you had no such visitor, I believe?"

"None," I said decidedly.

"Geist thought it might be a maid, as you had got a supply that day. But he said her getting out near the gate puzzled him. Anyhow, we have now one veiled lady, who, with the ghostly intruder of Friday night, makes two assets that I hardly know what to do with."

"It is mystifying," I admitted, "although I can think of one possible explanation. The path from the Greenwood club to the village enters the road near the lodge gate. A woman who wished to reach the Country club, unperceived, might choose such a method. There are plenty of women there."



The Step, Slow, Measured, Infinitely Cautious, Was Nearer Now.

I think this gave him something to ponder, for in a short time he said good night and left. But I myself was far from satisfied. I was determined, however, on one thing. If my suspicions—for I had suspicions—were true, I would make my own investigations, and Mr. Jamieson should learn only what was good for him to know.

We went back to the house, and Gertrude, who was more like herself since her talk with Halsey, sat down at the mahogany desk in the living room to write a letter. Halsey prowled up and down the entire east wing, now in the cardroom, now in the billiard room, and now and then blowing his clouds of tobacco smoke among the pink and gold hangings of the drawing room. After a little I joined him in the billiard room, and together we went over the details of the discovery of the body.

The cardroom was quite dark. Where we sat, in the billiard room, only one of the side brackets was lighted, and we spoke in subdued tones, as the hour and the subject seemed to demand. When I spoke of the figure Liddy and I had seen on the porch through the cardroom window Friday night, Halsey sauntered into the darkened room, and together we stood there, much as Liddy and I had done that other night.

The window was the same grayish rectangle in the blackness as before. A few feet away in the hall was the spot where the body of Arnold Armstrong had been found. I was a bit nervous, and I put my hand on Halsey's sleeve. Suddenly, from the top of the staircase above us came the sound of a cautious footstep. At first I was not sure, but Halsey's attitude told me he had heard and was listening. The step, slow, measured, infinitely cautious, was nearer now. Halsey tried to loosen my fingers, but I was in a paralysis of fright.

The swish of a body against the curving rail, as if for guidance, was plain enough, and now whoever it was had reached the foot of the staircase and had caught a glimpse of our rigid silhouettes against the billiard room doorway. Halsey threw me off then and strode forward.

"Who is it?" he called imperiously, and took a half dozen rapid strides toward the foot of the staircase. Then I heard him mutter something; there was the crash of a falling body, the slam of the outer door, and, for an instant, quiet. I screamed, I think. Then I remember turning on the lights and finding Halsey, white with fury, trying to untangle himself from something warm and fleecy. He had cut his forehead a little on the lowest step of the stairs, and he was rather a ghastly sight. He flung the white object at me, and, jerking open the outer door, raced into the darkness.

Gertrude had come on hearing the noise, and now we stood, staring at each other over—of all things on earth—a white silk and wool blanket, exquisitely fine! It was the most unghostly thing in the world, with its lavender border and its faint scent. Gertrude was the first to speak.

"Somebody—had it?" she asked.

"Yes. Halsey tried to stop whoever it was and fell. Gertrude, that blanket is not mine. I have never seen it before."

She held it up and looked at it; then she went to the door on to the veranda and threw it open. Perhaps 100 feet from the house were two figures, that moved slowly toward us as we looked. When they came within range of the light, I recognized Halsey, and with him Mrs. Watson, the housekeeper.

CHAPTER XII.

One Mystery for Another.

The most commonplace incident takes on a new appearance if the attendant circumstances are unusual. There was no reason on earth why Mrs. Watson should not have carried a blanket down the east wing staircase, if she so desired. But to take a blanket down at 11 o'clock at night, with every precaution as to noise, and, when discovered, to fling it at Halsey and bolt—Halsey's word, and a good one—into the grounds—this made the incident more than significant.

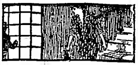
They moved slowly across the lawn and up the steps. Halsey was talking quietly, and Mrs. Watson was looking down and listening. She was a woman of a certain amount of dignity, most efficient, so far as I could see, although Liddy would have found fault if she dared. But just now Mrs. Watson's face was an enigma. She was defiant, I think, under her mask of submission, and she still showed the effect of nervous shock.

"Mrs. Watson," I said severely, "will you be so good as to explain this rather unusual occurrence?"

"I don't think it so unusual, Miss Innes." Her voice was deep and very clear; but it was somewhat tremulous. "I was taking a blanket down to Thomas, who is—not well to-night, and I used this staircase, as being nearer the path to the lodge. When vested, and through an ugly story—Mr. Innes called and then rushed at me, I—I was alarmed, and flung the blanket at him."

Halsey was examining the cut on his forehead in a small mirror on the wall. It was not much of an injury, but it had bled freely, and his appearance was rather terrifying.

"Thomas ill?" he said, over his shoulder. "Why, I thought I saw Thomas out there as you made that cyclonic break out of the door and over the porch."



I could see that under pretense of examining his injury he was watching her through the mirror.

"Everything else is locked away," she replied. Which was true enough, no doubt. I had rented the house without bed furnishings.

"If Thomas is ill," Halsey said, "some member of the family ought to go down to see him. You needn't bother, Mrs. Watson. I will take the blanket."

She drew herself up quickly, as if in protest, but she found nothing to say. She stood smoothing the folds of her dead black dress, her face as white as chalk above it. Then she seemed to make up her mind.

"Very well, Mr. Innes," she said. "Perhaps you would better go. I have done all I could."

And then she turned and went up the circular staircase, moving slowly and with a certain dignity. Below, the three of us stared at one another across the intervening white blanket.

"Upon my word," Halsey broke out, "this place is a walking nightmare. I have the feeling that we three outsiders who have paid our money for the privilege of staying in this spook-factory, are living on the very top of things. We're on the lid, so to speak. Now and then we get a sight of the things inside, but we are not a part of them."

"Do you suppose," Gertrude asked doubtfully, "that she really meant that blanket for Thomas?"

"Thomas was standing beside that magnolia tree," Halsey replied, "when I ran after Mrs. Watson. It's down to this, Aunt Ray. Rosie's basket and Mrs. Watson's blanket can only mean one thing: There is somebody hiding or being hidden in the lodge. It wouldn't surprise me if we hold the key to the whole situation now. Anyhow, I'm going to the lodge to investigate."

Gertrude wanted to go, too, but she looked so shaken that I insisted she should not. I sent for Liddy to help her to bed, and then Halsey and I started for the lodge. The grass was heavy with dew, and, man-like, Halsey chose the shortest way across the lawn. Half way, however, he stopped.

"We'd better go by the drive," he said. "This isn't a lawn; it's a field. Where's the gardener these days?"

"There isn't any," I said meekly. "We have been thankful enough, so far, to have our meals prepared and served and the beds aired. The gardener who belongs here is working at the club."

"Remind me to-morrow to send out a man from town," he said. "I know the very fellow."

I record this scrap of conversation, just as I have tried to put down anything and everything that had a bearing on what followed, because the gardener Halsey sent the next day played so important part in the events of the next few weeks—events that culminated as you know, by stirring the country profoundly. At that time, however, I was busy trying to keep my skirts dry, and paid little or no attention to what seemed then a most trivial remark.

At the lodge everything was quiet. There was a light in the sitting room downstairs, and a faint gleam, as if from a shaded lamp, in one of the upper rooms. Halsey stopped and examined the lodge with calculating eyes.

"I don't know, Aunt Ray," he said dubiously; "this is hardly a woman's affair. If there's a scrap of any kind, you hike for the timber." Which was Halsey's solicitous care for me, put into vernacular.

"I'll stay right here," I said, and crossing the small veranda, now shaded and fragrant with honeysuckle, I hammered the knocker on the door.

Thomas opened the door himself—Thomas, fully dressed and in his customary health. I had the blanket over my arm.

"I brought the blanket, Thomas," I said; "I am sorry you are so ill."

The old man stood staring at me and then at the blanket. His confusion under other circumstances would have been ludicrous.

Thomas seemed to have been debating something with himself. Now he stepped out on the porch and closed the door gently behind him.

DETROIT'S GOOSE MARKET

Far up Hastings street, where long rows of poplar trees mark the approach to the Polish settlement, says the Detroit Free Press, is a market the like of which is not to be found elsewhere in the city.

On a vacant corner, surrounded by a high fence, an enterprising east sider has established a goose and duck market that attracts patrons from far and near. The women of the neighborhood are a trifle particular as to how they buy their poultry. The guaranty of freshness furnished by the fact that a goose or duck is alive is not of so much consequence as the knowledge that feathers, which might otherwise be wasted, can be transferred to the ticks so much in vogue in this quarter. Thus it comes that on market day, which is almost any morning of the week, the housewife with a longing for poultry journeys here, enters the inclosure, selects the fowl that strikes her fancy or appeals to her mature judgment, and stands by, while the proprietor, with a long pole on the end of which a wire hook is fastened, proceeds to separate the bird in question from the rest of the flock and deftly slip the hook about its neck, making it a captive.

There is much dickering. Often the first choice does not prove satisfactory and a second and third bird is snared and inspected carefully to see that the feathers are thick enough and that it is sufficiently plump. When all the preliminaries have been attended to the purchaser pays over the price, grabs the bird firmly by the legs, with its head hanging down, or tucks it snugly under her arm and waddles off home, the envy of her neighbors who may not be able to indulge in such a luxury.

WILKERSON DREW RAIL LAW

Chicago.—It remained for Chicago to furnish the legal talent to put the finishing touches on President Taft's railroad rate and interstate commerce bill passed at the recent session of congress giving the interstate commerce commission great additional power.

Special Assistant District Attorney James H. Wilkerson was called to Washington by Attorney General Wickersham to work on the bill, then known as the "conference bill." He worked more than a month and whipped the document into such shape that it was passed without further amendments.

After the house and senate had passed amendment after amendment to President Taft's bill, a conference committee was appointed to draw up practically a new bill. At this time Attorney General Wickersham cast about for a man competent enough to handle the bill from a legal viewpoint. The result was a message to Mr. Wilkerson to go to Washington.

Mr. Wilkerson has been connected with all the big prosecutions of the government since he became a special assistant under District Attorney Sims. At present he is working with Assistant Attorney General Kenyon, the government's official "trust buster," on the last grand jury investigation of the beef trust.

TROUBLE FOR CLARA MORRIS

Famous Actress, Blind and Ill, Loses Her Old Home by Foreclosure.

White Plains, N. Y.—Under an order filed here in the county clerk's office the old homestead of Clara Morris at Yonkers is to be sold under foreclosure. Although Miss Morris, the well-known actress, is blind and near death in the old mansion, the referee announced that the sale would take place after notice by publication.

Clara Morris and Her Home.

Miss Morris, who in private life is Mrs. Frederick M. Harriott, does not know that her home is in danger and probably never will know. Her physicians say she will probably not live much longer.

Real Politeness.

Little Barbara's mother is careful about her manners and teaches her to answer everybody politely. But Barbara has a faculty of mixing up her polite speeches. The other day she came running into the house with some letters, and cried: "Mamma, I met the postman at the gate and I took the letters, and he said, 'Thank you!'" "And what did you say to him, then?" asked her mother. "Oh, I said, 'Pleasant dreams!'" answered Barbara.

Counterfeiting of Gems.

While the demand for precious stones increases, despite counterfeits, there is shown these days an amazing ingenuity in the manufacture of the imitations, both in this country and abroad. The counterfeiting of gems has always existed, but in recent years the work has been brought to a state of perfection not dreamed of by the workers of ancient times.

The Irrepressible Aspirate.

"Englishmen know comparatively little about America, after all." "That's true," replied the harmlessly mendacious parson. "Many of them haven't decided whether it ought to be spelled with a capital H."

Tobacco in the Orient.

Use of tobacco is universal in the orient, and the word cheroot and its use come from Madras. The first cigars seen by Columbus were wrapped with corn shucks.

The KITCHEN CABINET

IT NEVER pays to wreck
the health,
In drudging after gain;
And he is sold who thinks that gold
The cheapest bought with pain."

Some Old New England Dishes.

For raised doughnuts which are excellent take two cupfuls of milk, one-half cup of yeast and flour to make a batter, set at noon in a warm place and let rise until night. Add a tablespoonful of butter, a little salt, one egg, a cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg and half a teaspoonful of soda; let rise until morning.

Mould, roll and cut in strips and twist. They may be filled with jelly or jam by rolling out and cutting with a biscuit cutter, putting the jam in the center and pinching up the edges. Fry in deep fat, roll in powdered sugar and serve.

Baked Pears.

One of the most delicious desserts of old New England is baked pears. They also may be used as a compote or preserve. Wash a half dozen pears and put them to bake with two cupfuls of sugar, the juice of a lemon and a cupful of water; baste often during the baking and remove when the syrup is a golden brown. Serve cold. As a dessert serve with whipped cream.

There is no delicacy which more delights the heart of a child than the old-fashioned tartlets filled with the jewel-like jelly which none makes so well as the New England housewife. Cut the two crusts from the pastry with a biscuit cutter, for the top one use a large thimble or the top of a salt shaker and make three holes, put the jelly on the crust and press down the top one so that the jelly stands in ruby-like spots on the top.

Pippin Pie.

Take twelve fine ripe pippins, pared and grated, one pound of sugar, half a pound of butter, six eggs, one lemon (juice and peel), with a little nutmeg. Cream the butter, add the sugar, stir in the beaten yolks, then the lemon, nutmeg and apples, adding the whites well beaten at the last. Bake in a crust with cross bars of paste over the top.

A Hint.

A pretty custom in Dresden is one which should find favor in the eyes of many American mothers, not to mention the children. The cornucopia is placed at the plate of every one to take home into which may be slipped the bon bon or favor which will so delight the little ones at home. Another point in its favor, it lowers the rate of indigestion.

ART LITTLE? Do thy little well, and for thy
Great men can do their greatest work
no better than just so."—Goethe.

Linoleum.

As a floor covering linoleum is one of the most satisfactory.

Do not use soap suds for scrubbing a floor as it injures the varnish, making the colors dim. On a farm where there is plenty of milk there is nothing better for cleaning and brightening linoleum than skimmed milk.

If milk cannot be used entirely add a cupful to a few quarts of warm water or a little kerosene oil. Wring out cloth and go over the linoleum after giving it a good dusting. It will look quite new and fresh and the finish will be uninjured.

Linoleum will last much longer if it is given a good coat of varnish every year. Keep off of it until well dried and hard.

In buying linoleum it pays to get a good piece. A color that doesn't show the dust is most desirable, and have it carefully laid. Often after using it a few weeks it will be necessary to tighten it as wrinkles form and if not removed will crack and ruin the looks of the floor.

Cracker Pudding.

Take nine common crackers, one cup of raisins, half cup of sugar, half cup of molasses and a quart of milk, let stand over night and in the morning add one teaspoonful of cinnamon and half a teaspoonful of cloves, put into a mold and steam four hours. Reheat and serve with whipped cream or egg sauce.

Peach Tapioca.

Soak half a pint of tapioca in a cupful of cold water over night. Fill a baking dish half full of nice canned peaches, leaving out the syrup. Sprinkle sugar to taste over the peaches. Cook the tapioca in the peach syrup until clear, pour over the peaches and bake slowly for half an hour. When cold serve with sugar and rich cream.

Hot Ham Toast.

Mix with one tablespoonful of finely chopped ham the beaten yolk of an egg and a little cream and pepper and salt. Heat over the fire and then spread the mixture either on hot buttered toast or on slices of bread fried in butter. Serve very hot.

IF EVERY one would be only half as good as he expects, his neighbor to be, what a heaven this world would become.

Chocolate.

Chocolate is such a wholesome food and drink and so universally liked that one never tires of it. For a drink, cut the chocolate in fine bits, using four squares to one quart of milk and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Add three tablespoonfuls of hot water to the chocolate, scald the milk, add the chocolate and boil for a few moments. Beat with a whisk and serve hot. A marshmallow added to the cup makes a pleasant change.

Chocolate Cookies.

Cream half a cupful of butter and one tablespoonful of lard. Gradually beat into this one cupful of sugar, add a little salt, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and two ounces of chocolate melted. Now add one well beaten egg and half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of milk. Stir in about two cupfuls of flour. Roll thin, cut in round cakes and bake in a hot oven. Use as little flour as possible in rolling out.

Chocolate Ice Cream.

Make a custard for the ice cream, adding two squares of chocolate melted and added to the cream.

A sauce to use on an ice cream which is served hot: Put a tablespoonful each of butter and flour into a saucepan and cook together, add one square of melted chocolate and one cupful of boiling water, cook until smooth and serve hot as a sauce. Add a half teaspoonful of vanilla just before serving.

A cream pie flavored with chocolate is very nice. Cornstarch pudding may be agreeably changed by the addition of a square of chocolate. As a filling for cake, boiled frosting with a little grated chocolate or a fudge filling are both great favorites.

Household Hints.

Moisten the blacking with kerosene instead of water when blacking the stove as the blacking stays on longer and gives it a better gloss.

Clean paint that is much stained, especially on doors, by rubbing with a wet cloth on which put a little turpentine.

LABOR WITH what zeal we will,
Something left undone,
Something uncompleted still,
Waits the rising of the sun."
—Longfellow.

Beauty Hints.

Lemon juice and glycerine is good to soften and whiten the hands.

After a long drive or day on the water, do not wash the face in cold water, but rub it well with cold cream or if that is not at hand, sweet cream from milk is every bit as good. It will soothe and cool the skin.

The girl who has been struggling vainly with the dingy brown line on the neck, the result of high and tight collars, should use pumice stone. If rubbing the stone and soapy water on the neck is too hard for the skin, try mixing powdered pumice with cold cream. Finish the process by washing with a lather of white soap.

Nellie Maxwell.

For Beautiful Eyes.

The first point to understand is the importance of good general health.

To cleanse the eyes, open them while the face is half submerged in a basin of cold water. Cold water is an excellent tonic for both eyes and lashes.

For exercise, move the eyes upward and downward and from side to side with the head held well up and perfectly still.

This strengthens the muscles, which raise and lower the eyeballs and brings to the eyes a healthy supply of blood.

Large-type books, good light and a good position when reading are all cases of that prevention which is the best cure.

Fried Tomatoes on Toast.

Dip slices of ripe tomato in pancake batter, fry until tender and brown; place each fritter on a slice of warm buttered toast and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Norfolk Jackets.

Are unusually good for young girls. Who is young and who isn't? It would be a trifle difficult to decide, and a little dangerous to state in black and white; but all age limits to the one side, the erect, alert-looking woman is always youthful enough in actual seeming to wear the Norfolk jacket.

Its variations are many, and it is no longer narrowed down to the four box plaits which were its original stamp. They turn sidewise, with two plain plaits on each side, or they simmer down into one on each side. The belt may hold in the plaits or the plaits hold on the belt.

The Norfolk is shorter or longer, according to its purpose as a very useful garment or a little ornamental jacket. And in the same way is its material varied. The rough Scotch and English and Canadian stuffs have given way before those of less rough American weaves, and these, in turn, have let in linen for summer wear. But the Norfolk jacket stands fast.

Are Doctors Any Good?

Foolish question! Yet some people act as if a medicine could take the place of a doctor! The best medicine in the world cannot do this. Have a family doctor, consult him frequently, trust him fully. If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs and colds, we would not offer it to you. Ask your doctor. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Pills for constipation, biliousness, sick-headache, we would not offer them to you. Ask your own doctor about this.

It turns out, as usual, that Eastman was the liar.

Senator Clapp and the Republican state platform do not agree as to the merits of the Payne-Aldrich bill. Senator Clapp says: "The new tariff law has cost and is costing the American people millions of dollars in the increased cost of living. And if the Payne-Aldrich bill had been defeated these millions would have been saved the people."

Sam Gordon's Browns Valley Tribune says: "Judge Stanton's declaration in favor of county option law, while it seems to have been a surprise to the rank and file of his party, was not so to the writer. We heard Judge Stanton privately make a county option declaration six months ago, so it is not a matter of very recent convesion on his case."

The inevitable happened at Minneapolis last Thursday. John Lind was nominated for governor, and whether or not he accepts it, the plain people of the state registered their desire to see Minnesota's first citizen in the governor's chair. The demand for Lind came from no party or faction, but from the people. And this is a call that should be heeded.

The latest government report is additionally favorable to a big wheat crop. The returns as interpreted by the skilled statistician of the New York produce exchange, indicate a total harvest of 702,400,000 bushels, against an indication for the same time last year of 652,351,000 bushels. The estimate for 1909 fell below the actual result for the total yield last year was 737,159,000 bushels. Should there be a similar excess this year there will be a good chance for a record breaking output.

Thomas Edison predicts that we shall need to do but very little work within two hundred years. It is safe to say that in two hundred years men and women will work as they do today, only in a more rational and more sanitary manner. But it is safe to predict that in much less than two hundred years very few of us will have to be sick, except as in the course of time the machine wears out and some part gives away. But the most of the diseases with which the race is now afflicted will have been banished ere the close of this century.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Brainerd Tribune: There is room in northern Minnesota for many thousands of settlers.

Pine River Sentinel: Farm land in Iowa is worth on an average $75 per acre. In Minnesota the average value per acre in the central and northern parts of the state is not over one-third this amount. Last year Minnesota raised more crop per acre than Iowa in everything they raised, including corn and apples. Now, Mr. Farmer, if you cannot figure where you belong your scope of vision is very limited.

Big Falls Compass: The withdrawal of $6,100,000 by the state board of investment from foreign state loans bearing 3½ per cent to be invested in home municipal bonds at 4 per cent is another of the achievements of the Northern Minnesota Development association.

Greenbush Tribune: One of the things we want in northern Minnesota is reapportionment and all candidates for the legislature should tell exactly where they stand on this proposition. The people of northern Minnesota want reapportionment, and want only men to represent them who will work to that end.

Appleton Press: Bert Farnham, editor of the Madison Press, does not agree with anything in the Republican platform, does not approve of the record made by the Republican party in congress, has no confidence in Republican pledges and hasn't a single good word for Taft, Cannon, Roosevelt or any of the Republican leaders, and yet he calls himself a Republican. Bert needs a little more independence. He's Democratic in everything but his vote.

Rush City Post: If elected, it is no wise certain that the lieutenant governor will have the power to appoint the senate committee. The power was taken from Governor G. S. Ives and it may be again in view of the fact that Candidate Gordon has already announced his intention in that direction. Youngdahl and Rachie are doing too much slating around and knocking the ticket to expect any generous favors.

nomination of Mr. Lind, the man. They knew they could trust him to do what was right, and that he would not take any unfair advantage of their confidence.

His Name Sufficient.

Of course it is still a question whether Mr. Lind will permit the use of his name. He will no doubt take time to consider the matter. For it is not necessary that Mr. Lind should campaign the state in order to insure his election. Possibly it might be better for others to advance his claims to public confidence. There are plenty men in the party able and willing to do that. Indeed it is a question whether much of a campaign is necessary. The people have pretty well sized up the situation in the state. A political party which selects Ed. Smith as its manager pretty thoroughly advertises its character.

Great Rejaicing at the Capital.

It is natural that Mr. Lind's reluctance to make a campaign should put new breath in the administration politicians. Their hope was in his standing by his decision not to be the candidate of his party. Naturally they welcome the refusal to accept he is alleged to have made, and have much to say of his firmness and about his being a man of his word. That, however, is today's talk. It wasn't yesterday's. Then it was said that he was only waiting to have the nomination forced on him; that it was a smooth game; that he not only wanted to be governor but that he was plotting to beat out Clapp in the senate, and much more of the same tenor. Also that he was a corporation attorney and that the steel trust was grooming him. Notwithstanding their present words of appreciation it has been made plain within the week the kind of campaign the men behind Ed. Smith and Governor Eberhart were going to make against John Lind. They may yet conclude to dig out the broadsides attacking him they had prepared.

No Warse aff.

However, if the worst comes to the worst and the duty of selecting a candidate for governor devolves upon the state central committee, the party has done nothing to be ashamed of or nothing that under like circumstances it would not do again. It need make no apology for honoring the man the people trust. Nor is its position weakened. The administration managers just now are congratulating themselves that from now on it will be plain sailing. Things may happen likely to cause them to change their mind.

A Gaad All-Raund Ticket.

At all events the Democrats may well invite a comparison of the men they have nominated with the men the Republicans have nominated for the same positions. From the judges of the supreme bench to the clerk of the court the candidates are men not only deserving of public confidence but who enjoy it. In parallel columns the nominations for state office made by both parties are:

PROCEEDINGS

Official Proceedings Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County.

Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.
July 29th, 1910.

On the call of the county auditor persuant to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1905 and acts amendatory thereof, the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, met in special session at the office of the county auditor in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, at 10:00 o'clock a. m., July 29th 1910, for the purpose of hearing and considering the reports of the engineer and viewers on the ditches petitioned for by Bohmil Hruby and others and by John J. Sorum and others, designated by the county auditor as county ditches Nos. 49 and 50, respectively.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at 10:00 o'clock a. m., July 29th, 1910.

Members absent: None.

The matter of the petit'on of Bohmil Hruby and others for county ditch No. 49 came duly before the board. The said petition was read and the arguments of all parties for or against the construction of the said proposed ditch were heard. On motion duly carried the report of the viewers was referred back to them for correction of assessments against certain tracts of land. Gilbert K. Haavi, Joseph Belair and Dan Latendresse, viewers, were present at the hearing and proceeded to make the corrections as agreed upon, after which on motion made by Commissioner Demann, duly seconded by Commissioner Johnson and carried unanimously the report of the engineer and the viewers as amended was accepted and that said ditch be in all things established as provided by law according to the engineer's report and the report of the viewers as amended on file in the office of the county auditor of Red Lake county, Minnesota, whereupon the following order establishing county ditch No. 49 was made:

In the matter of the petition of Bohmil Hruby and others, for a public ditch in the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, designated and numbered as county ditch No. 49.

The above entitled matter came on duly to be heard by and before the county board of the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, at a special meeting of said board duly called for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition for said ditch in the above entitled matter on the 29th day of July, A. D. 1910, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., of said day, and it appearing by proper evidence that due notice had been given of the pendency of said petition and of said time of hearing thereon, and that C. H. Martz, the civil engineer appointed by this board to survey the route of said ditch, has completed his work and duly filed his report thereon in the office of the county auditor of said county, and that the viewers appointed by said board to view and report upon said work have completed their labors and made and filed their report in due form of law in the office of said county auditor, the said county board did at the time above specified, proceed to hear said petition and said viewers' report thereon and said board having duly considered said petition and heard all the parties interested for or against the construction of said ditch and all other matters pertaining thereto, find as follows to-wit:

FIRST: That the said civil engineer has completed his work and made and filed his report thereon in all respects according to law.

SECOND: That the viewers appointed herein have duly completed their labors and have made and filed their report thereon according to law.

THIRD: That the estimated benefits to be derived from the construction of said work are greater than its total cost, including damages awarded.

FOURTH: That the damages and benefits arising from the construction of said ditch have been duly awarded and assessed, and that said work will be of public utility and promote the public health and that said reports of said engineer and viewers are complete and correct.

FIFTH: That notice of this hearing of said petition and of said viewers' report and said engineer's report has been duly given, published and posted and mailed as by law required, and that proofs of said service of said notice have been duly made and filed in the office of the county auditor of said county, and that all other proceedings in the matter have been made and taken in accordance with the provisions of law.

Now, Therefore, As conclusions from the foregoing findings, we, the county board of the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, at a special session of said board held at the time above specified, being satisfied that the proposed ditch will be of public utility and conductive to public health and convenience, do hereby locate and establish the said ditch according to the report and the specifications of said civil engineer made and filed herein; and do hereby establish and confirm the report of the viewers made and filed herein.

It is Further Ordered, That the damages awarded to the persons and corporations named in the viewers' report herein, in excess of benefits, to be paid out of the county treasury of said county on warrants to be drawn and attested by the auditor of said county and signed by the chairman of this board, and delivered to the persons entitled thereto as provided by law.

Given under our hands this 29th day of July, A. D. 1910.

By the Board,
C. A. LINDQUIST,
Chairman of County Board of Red Lake County, Minnesota.
Attest: A. A. LATENDRESSE,
County Auditor and Ex-Officio
Clerk of the Board.
(County Auditor's Seal)

The matter of the petition of John J. Sorum and others for county ditch No. 50 came duly before the board. The said petition was read, after which on motion made by Commissioner Johnson, duly seconded by Commissioner Pigeon and carried unanimously the matter of the final hearing on said ditch is postponed and is to be held at the same time as the final hearing on county ditches Nos. 54 and 56.

On motion duly carried the Board adjourned sine die.

C. A. LINDQUIST, Chairman,
Board of County Commissioners,
Red Lake County, Minn.,
Attest: A. A. Latendresse,
County Auditor and Ex-Officio Clerk of the Board.
(County Auditor's Seal.)

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

For State Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effectively on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.—ALBERT BERG, Spooner, Minnesota.

PROCEEDINGS

Official Proceedings, Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County.

Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.
July 29th, 1910.

j28-a5 Clerk.

Bids Wanted.

Bids will be received until 7 o'clock p. m. Saturday, August 13, for the work of remodeling the school house in District No. 3[illegible], on section 15, in Lake Pleasant township, Red Lake county. The work to be done is the construction of a chimney for a furnace, new floor and painting throughout. Members of the board of education will be at the school house at 7 o'clock p. m. of the date named to consider the bids and let the contract. The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

j21a4 Clerk.

"Look here," said one of the jurymen after they had retired, "if I understand aright, the plaintiff doesn't ask damages for blighted affections or anything of that sort, but only wants to get back what he's spent on presents, pleasure trips, etc."

"That is so," agreed the foreman.

"Well, then, I vote we don't give him a penny," said the other hastily. "If all the fun he had with that girl didn't cover the amount he expended it must be his own fault. Gentlemen, I courted that girl once myself."—Housekeeper.

Notice of Hearing on Petition In Ditch Proceedings.

State of Minnesota } ss. District Court
County of Marshall } 14th Judicial District

Notice is hereby given, that a petition has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of Marshall county, State of Minnesota, and that the Judge of said District Court has fixed as the time and place for the preliminary hearing thereon, August 20th, 1910, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court rooms in the court house, in the city of Warren, in said county and state.

And notice is hereby given, that said preliminary hearing will be held before said Judge at said time and place, and that a copy of said petition follows this notice.

Dated at Warren, Minnesota, this 20th day of July, A. D. 1910.

PETITION FOR PUBLIC DITCH.

The undersigned, land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by or assessed for the expense of the construction of the drainage ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a drainage ditch along the following described route, in the towns of New Solum, Viking and Comstock, in the County of Marshall, State of Minnesota, the towns of Norden and Numedal in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota and the Towns of Helgeland, Brislet, Farley, Sandsville, Higdam, Brandt, Angus, Tabor, Northland and Esther in the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, and will also affect lands in the Town of Bray in said Red Lake county, and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility and is further necessary for the reasons that in seasons of high water, the surface water collecting upon the adjoining territory has no adequate means to be carried off and remains upon and adjoining the proposed route for said ditch hereinafter described for long periods, thus causing great damage to lands, public travel and health.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said drainage ditch and branches, is as follows:

Main Ditch—Commencing at a point at or near the center of Section 5, in Township 154, North of range 44 West, in Marshall county, Minnesota thence due south and along the quarter line through said section 5 and through section 8 to the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of section 17, in said township and range; thence due west along the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 17 and 18, in said township and Range; thence due west along the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 13, 14, 15 and 16, in Township 154 North, of range 45 west, in the County of Red Lake, Minnesota, to the north east corner of Section 17, in said Township and range; thence due south along the east side of the section line forming the west boundary line of Sections 16, 21 and 28 in said Township and Range; thence due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 32 and 31, in said Township and range; Thence due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary line of sections 36, 35, 34 and 33 in Township 154 North, of Range 46 west, in Polk county, Minnesota, to junction with the coulee at or near the north west corner of section 33 in said township and Range, thence along the center line of said coulee in a westerly and south westerly direction through sections 33, 32 and 31 in said township and Range; thence continuing along the center line of said coulee, in a westerly and south westerly direction through section 36 in Township 154 North, of Range 47 West, to a point at or near the south-west corner of section 36, in said Township 154 North, of Range 47 west, to a point at or near the south east corner of section 35 said township and range; thence due west and on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary line of sections 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 in township 153 North, of Range 47 West; thence continuing due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary line of sections 1 and 2 in Township 153 North, of Range 48 west, to a point at or near the center of the north line of said section 2 where said boundary line intersects with County Ditch No. 7 as an outlet.

Your petitioners further represent and show to the court that the said County Ditch No. 7 is at this time too shallow and narrow to carry off the surface water in the immediate territory thereof, and is wholly inadequate in its present condition to adequately carry the surface water thrown into the same, and that the said ditch will be wholly inadequate to carry off the additional water that will be delivered by the said proposed ditch hereinbefore described; and that your petitioners pray that the said ditch be widened, deepened and straightened sufficiently to adequately carry off the surface water coming into it from the immediate territory thereof, and also and in addition thereto the water furnished by the proposed ditch hereinbefore described.

Your petitioners further pray that said County Ditch No. 7 be deepened, widened and extended as follows: along and on the section line forming the south boundary line of sections 35, 34, 33, 32, and 31, in Township 154 North of Range 48 West, in said County of Polk, thence continuing along the said ditch and the course thereof and along the section line forming the south boundary line of sections 36, 35, 34, 33, 32 and 31, in Township 154 North, of Range 49 West to the south-west corner of said last mentioned section; thence due west on the section line forming the south boundary line of sections 36, 35, 34, 33, and 32 in Township 154 North of Range 50 West, to a point where the same intersects with the Red River of the North, as the final outlet.

Your petitioners further pray that if in the judgment of the engineer it would be cheaper or more feasable or beneficial to all parties interested and concerned, that the said engineer be authorized and empowered to continue the said proposed ditch due north from the said southwest corner of said section thirty-one in township 154 North, of Range 49 West, and following the course of the said ditch to where the same intersects with Judicial Ditch No. 1, and thence due west to a point where the same may be found to be of sufficient size to form an adequate outlet, and if necessary to the Red River of the North as a final outlet in lieu of the course heretofore described due west from the said southwest corner of section 31, Township 154 North, of Range 49 West to the Red River of the North.

Branch A—Commencing at a point at or about the center of Section 25, in Township 153 North, of Range 46 West, in Polk county, Minnesota; thence due north through said Section 25 and on the quarter line thereof and continuing on the quarter line through sections 24, 13, 12 and 1 in said Township and range to a point on the south side of the north boundary line of said last mentioned section 1; thence due west and on the south side of the north boundary line of said section 1, and of sections 2 and 3, in said Township and Range to a point on the south side of the north boundary line of said last mentioned section where the said line intersects with a coulee at or near the quarter line of said section; thence in a northwesterly direction and along the course of said coulee through section 34 and part of section 33, in Township 154 North, of Range 46 west to a point at or near the northwest corner of said last mentioned section where the said last mentioned coulee joins with the course of a certain coulee the course of which runs in a westerly and southwesterly direction from said northwest corner of said section, and which coulee is more fully described as a part of the description of the course of the main ditch herein, as an outlet for the said "Branch A."

Branch B—Commencing in the north west corner of section 16, in Township 154 North, of Range 45 West, being on the south and east side of the North and West boundary lines of the said section, thence due north on the east side of the west boundary line of section 9, in said township and range to a point on the south and east sides of the section lines forming the north and west boundary lines of said last mentioned section; thence due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 8 and 7 in said last mentioned township and range, and continuing due west and on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 12, 11, 10, 9 and 8, in Township 154 North, of Range 46 West, to a point in the northwest corner of said last mentioned section, south and east of the north and west boundary lines of said last mentioned section; thence due north and on the east side of the section line forming the west boundary of section 5 in said township and range to a point where the same intersects with the coulee running in a westerly and north westerly direction through said last mentioned section as an outlet. It is proposed that a greater portion of the said Branch B will empty into the last mentioned coulee, described as the outlet, and that a portion thereof will empty into the main ditch heretofore described at the point described at the commencement of said Branch B.

And your petitioners further petition and request that if better results can be obtained or greater benefit will accrue to the greater part of the area affected by such proposed ditch, by a different source, course or outlet for such proposed ditch, or any branch thereof, that the engineer appointed herein designate the same and that the court establish the same as designated by such engineer, and that the engineer designate and lay out such lateral ditches as is necessary and that the court establish the same.

And your petitioners further pray that in the order establishing the said ditch it be ordered that the bonds for the said ditch be twenty year bonds, and that the liens for benefits be ordered paid in fifteen annual payments commencing five years after the order establishing the said ditch.

Your petitioners further pray that you will proceed to establish such drainage ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter 230 of the General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1905, and amendatory acts.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIA

Malaria is a species of blood poverty known as anaemia. It is a condition in which the circulation is so weak and impure that it is unable to supply the system with sufficient nourishment and strength to preserve ordinary health.

The medical profession is divided in opinion as to the manner in which malarial poison gets into the blood. Some take the position that it is an atmospheric poison, the specific germs of which are breathed into the lungs and thus transmitted to the circulation. Others advance the opinion that persons become inoculated with the poison through the bites of mosquitos. All however agree that MALARIA is a blood affection, and any treatment to successfully overcome it must not only purify this vital fluid, but at the same time add the necessary qualities of richness and strength to the circulation.

The malarial poison destroys large numbers of the rich, red corpuscles of the circulation, and the peculiar paleness of anaemic persons is due to this fact. In the first stages of Malaria there is a bilious condition of the system, constant bodily weakness, poor appetite, and a "no account," tired feeling.

S. S. S. searches out and destroys every particle of malarial infection and builds the blood up to a healthy, nourishing condition. Then the system receives its required nutriment, the bright red corpuscles begin to multiply in the circulation, sallow complexions grow ruddy and flushed with health, the liver and digestion are righted, the appetite improved, and the system vitalized and refreshed in every way. S.S.S. is a safe and pleasant remedy as well as an efficient one. If you have Malaria we will be glad to have you write us describing the case. We will send free our book on the blood and at the same time our physicians will give you some medical advice that will be of great service to you in curing yourself with S. S. S. No charge for the book or advice.

A PHYSICAL WRECK.

During 1900 I was running a farm on the Mississippi River, and became so impregnated with malaria that for a year afterwards I was a physical wreck. I took a number of medicines recommended as blood purifiers, chill cures and malaria eradicators, but nothing did me any good until I began to use S.S.S., which I did about a year ago. The result was that after taking several bottles of the large size I was as well and strong as I ever was, and have never had a chill since. I expect to take S.S.S. every year as a preventive, and would advise everybody else to follow my example.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, pursuant to chapter seven (7), Revised Laws of Minnesota, 1905, a petition was filed with the Secretary of State on the 13th day of May, 1909, praying for the creation of a new county out of the territory now lying in Red Lake County, Minnesota, the same to be known as Pennington county, and described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the southwest corner of section nineteen (19) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, according to the United States Government survey thereof, running thence east along the south line of sections nineteen (19), twenty (20), twenty-one (21), twenty-two (22), twenty-three (23), and twenty-four (24) in townships one hundred fifty-two (152) north of each of ranges forty-five (45), forty-four (44), forty-three (43), forty-two (42), forty-one (41) and forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of section twenty-four (24) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges thirty-nine (39) and forty (40) west to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north on the east line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the northeast corner of said township one-hundred and fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west, thence running west along the north line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north along the east line of townships one-hundred fifty-three (153) and one-hundred fifty-four (154) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of Marshall county as the same now exists, thence running west along the southern boundary line of said Marshall county to a point where said boundary line intersects the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian, the said point being the northwest corner of said Red Lake County as the same now exists, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west to the northwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of section nineteen (19) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, the same being the place of beginning.

The said territory so bounded being all that part of Red Lake County as now constituted lying north of the south line of sections nineteen (19), twenty (20), twenty-one (21) twenty-two (22), twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in townships one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of each of ranges forty (40), forty-one (41), forty-two (42), forty-three (43), forty-four (44) and forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian and all of townships one-hundred fifty-two (152) and one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of Range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian and also all that part of township one-hundred and fifty-four (154) north of Range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian lying and being within said Red Lake county as said county now exists.

The proposed county seat of said proposed new county shall be the City of Thief River Falls located on sections twenty-seven (27), twenty-eight (28), thirty-three (33) and thirty-four (34) in township one hundred and fifty-four (154) north of range forty-three (43) west of the 5th principal meridian.

The names and places of residence of the persons who shall constitute the first county board of said proposed new county, are as follows:

Peter C. Wold, residing on lots one (1) and two (2) and the east half of northwest quarter of section nineteen (19), in township one hundred and fifty-three (153) north of range forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Peter Hedeen, residing on the northwest quarter of section thirty-four (34), in township one hundred fifty-three (153), north of range forty-one (41) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Ed A. Aubol, residing on lots three (3) and six (6) in section twenty-nine (29) in township one hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-three (43) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Daniel Shaw, residing in the City of Thief River Falls in said proposed new county.

Olaf Larson, residing on the south half of section eight (8) in Township one hundred fifty-four (154) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, in said proposed new county.

Whereas, the said petition represents and avers that the said hereinbefore territory comprises more than four hundred square miles, and contains more than two thousand inhabitants, and that the remaining area of Red Lake County after deducting the territory hereinbefore described, will comprise more than four hundred square miles and contain more than two thousand inhabitants; and

Whereas, the said petition has been duly considered and found and certified to as conforming in all respects to the provisions of law;

Now, therefore, I, Adolph O. Eberhart, governor of the state of Minnesota, pursuant to the authority vested in me by law, do hereby direct and proclaim that the question of the creation of the proposed new county of Pennington be submitted to the voters of said Red Lake County at the next general election to be held in this state on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1910.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be hereto affixed, at the Capitol, in the City of St. Paul, this twelfth day of May, A. D. 1910.

ADOLPH O. EBERHART,
(Seal) Governor
Attest: JULIUS A. SCHMAHL,
Secretary of State.

Chairman Day then referred to the candidacy of Governor Eberhart and said that official wants to be elected governor so bad that he is willing to accept the honor and let somebody else run the office.

Hammond Temporary Chairman.

Mr. Day then nominated Congressman W. S. Hammond as the temporary chairman of the convention, and he was chosen with a vigorous demonstration of approval. In sounding the real keynote of the Democratic party in Minnesota the Second district congressman paid a touching tribute to the life and achievements of the late Governor Johnson. Then he reverted to the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill and detailed a number of schedules in that bill which he declared placed excessive burdens on the masses of the people. Mr. Hammond referred to the statements of the Republican candidates during the last presidential campaign that the existing tariff rate would be substantially reduced in accordance with the promises contained in the national platform. Concluding his remarks on the tariff, he said:

"After months of hard work the Republican party, in control of the national houses of congress, passed the most undesirable and vicious piece of legislation that has been placed on the statute books during the last half a century. It is true that the tariff bill was so rank that many progressive Republicans refused to vote for it, but that fact does not make the bill any the less a Republican measure. It is now up to the Democrats and the progressive Republicans to insist on a revision of the tariff downwards in accordance with the mandate of the people."

Mr. Hammond said that from his own experience in congress he should say that if the same Republican methods of legislation are maintained in the lower house in Washington, the people might just as well have Joe Cannon for speaker as anybody else. The chairman closed his speech by urging the convention to name as candidates such men as will stand up for equal rights for all and special privileges for none.

Secretaries Are Named.

Senator F. L. Glotzbach of Faribault, Richard Tattersfield of Hennepin county and Frank Battley of St. Paul were named as temporary secretaries and later made permanent.

Congressman Hammond then announced that the committee on resolutions would be composed of two members to be selected by the delegates from each congressional district and three at large to be named by the chair, making twenty-one in all. The committees on credentials and permanent organization were selected in a similar manner. Before taking a recess for lunch at 1:30 p. m. a motion was passed declaring it the sense of the convention that no nominations should be made until the committee on resolutions had reported.

When the convention reassembled at 2:30 o'clock the committee on resolutions was hammering away on the different planks of the platform in a room in the Radisson hotel. Senator Works of Mankato was elected chairman and Martin O'Brien of Crookston was made secretary. The friends of county option on the committee made a vigorous fight for their favorite plank, but without avail. It was defeated for a substitute calling for the initiative and referendum and recall, proposed by Senator Stockwell of Minneapolis.

In the meantime the convention was having the hottest kind of a time. The credentials committee had reported that as there were no contests there was nothing for them to do. The committee on permanent organization recommended that M. J. Daly of Perham, a prospective candidate for congress in the Ninth district, be made permanent chairman, and that the temporary secretaries be made permanent.

Then the excitement started in earnest. Z. H. Austin of Minneapolis offered a resolution that, notwithstanding John Lind's eminent fitness for governor, the convention did not deem it wise to insist upon his nomination for governor. Amid the wildest excitement Chairman Daly ruled the resolution out of order. S. L. Comstock almost caused a riot with a motion to have the convention proceed with the nominations. There was an avalanche of amendments to wait for the report of the committee on resolutions in accordance with a motion adopted at the morning session.

Points of order galore were raised and the chair was powerless to maintain order. It looked like bedlam had broken loose. Finally the appearance of former Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri diverted the minds of the excited delegates. Mr. Folk was escorted to the platform and his appearance there was the signal for a prolonged outburst of cheering.

Upon being introduced by Chairman Daly, Mr. Folk thanked the delegates for inviting him to address them and said:

Opportunity for Democrats.

"There has never been such an opportunity for the success of Democratic principles as right now. By these principles I mean equal rights to all and special privileges to none. The Democratic party, if true to its high ideals, must stand for men above money. It is not right or just for 80,000,000 people to be taxed in order to make a few men rich. It is better to have the wealth of the country in the hands of all the people than in the hands of a few."

Mr. Folk urged unity of action in enforcing the laws and the most vigorous opposition to any efforts to attempt to defy them. He said he was in favor of building up public virtue and private integrity in order to produce a religion that has for its ten tenets the golden rule in politics and not the rule of gold. In closing, Mr. Folk said that he expected to be in Minnesota during the fall campaign, when he would help to elect the candidates that would be nominated by the convention.

The nomination of candidates was declared to be the next business before the convention. A demand for a roll call of the counties was made and Aitkin gave way to St. Louis. John Jenswold of Duluth, who had been frequently mentioned as the possible nominee for governor, took the platform and was greeted with tremendous cheering. Mr. Jenswold said that with such a man as he intended to place before the convention the rights of the people were sure to be protected and the special privilege evil certain to be extirpated. Then he presented the name of John Lind.

Inspiring Scene Followed.

An inspiring scene of cheering and shouting followed, especially participated in by the country delegates. The men from Ramsey and Hennepin kept quiet, otherwise there would have been an inevitable stampede to Lind. Anoka county next seconded the nomination. This was followed by Becker, Beltrami and Benton, whose delegates were so anxious to have Lind declared the nominee that they tried to vote right then and there. J. M. Freeman of Olivia at this juncture almost took the Twin City delegates off their feet by moving to have the nominations closed. St. Louis was prompt to take advantage of the opportunity and that delegation seconded the motion. On a yea and nay vote the chair decided that Mr. Lind was the nominee for governor, although the Twin City delegations vociferously yelled "no." After a motion to make the nomination unanimous had been seconded Senator Stockwell of Minneapolis attempted to make a speech from the platform in order to convince the convention that Mr. Lind would not accept the nomination. A point of order by E. A. Stevens, that Mr. Lind had already been declared the nominee of the convention, was declared to be well taken. Mr. Winston of Minneapolis next endeavored to persuade the convention that Mr. Lind would not accept the nomination and he urged the delegates to not act hastily until they could get in communication with the ex-governor and ascertain whether or not he would consent to be the party's standard bearer. Daniel W. Lawler, former mayor of St. Paul, next took the platform and said:

"There is not a man here who is not in favor of the nomination and election of John Lind. However, in view of his repeated assertion that he would not accept the nomination we would not be true to ourselves unless we received from Mr. Lind his unqualified acceptance of the nomination before this convention adjourns."

Mr. Lawler then moved that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to telegraph Mr. Lind at Portland, Ore., and learn if he would accept the nomination, the convention to take a recess until 8 p. m. to await a reply.

This course was strenuously opposed by J. M. Freeman of Olivia, who insisted that Mr. Lind was already the nominee of the convention and it would be useless to waste any more time on the matter. Mr. Lawler's motion was defeated and the original motion to declare Mr. Lind the unanimous choice of the convention was carried with only a few dissenting votes.

Other Candidates Nominated.

The nomination of candidates for all the other state offices was then taken up. Only one name was presented for each office, with the exception of Judges O'Brien and Snow for the supreme court. All were nominated by acclamation. Judges C. L. and Philip E. Brown, two of the candidates for the supreme bench on the Republican ticket, were endorsed for election by the convention.

Although the last business of the day was the naming of the state central committee, it caused another uproar. Chairman Daly announced that he would appoint the members of the committee at large, but ex-Judge J. R. Larson of Minneapolis offered a motion providing for calling together the convention to fill a vacancy in case John Lind declined the nomination. He said it was not right to leave the selection of the state committee in the hands of one man when it might be called upon to act in such an emergency. This was seconded by James Manahan of Minneapolis, who amended it so that the state central committee be named by the candidates on the ticket. The original motion to call the convention together in case of a vacancy was declared out of order as the statutes provide that the state central committee should fill all vacancies. The amendment offered by Mr. Manahan was carried and the candidates will have the selection of the committee. The convention then adjourned.

Explaining the Cause.

There were introductions all around. The big man stared in a puzzled way at the club guest.

"You look like a man I've seen somewhere, Mr. Binkler," he said. "Your face seems very familiar. I fancy you have a double. And a funny thing about it is that I remember I formed a strong prejudice against the man who looks like you—although I'm quite sure we never met."

The little guest softly laughed.

"I'm the man," he answered, "and I know why you formed the prejudice. I passed the contribution plate for two years in the church you attended."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SYNOPSIS OF PLATFORM

Calls upon the people to rebuke the Republican party for its deception in enacting the Payne-Aldrich tariff law.

Deplores the timidity of President Taft for failing to use the tremendous forces at his command to compel the Republican majority in congress to do its solemn duty of tariff reform.

Condemns the appointment and retention of Secretary Ballinger as a national scandal and the discharge of Gifford Pinchot as a national crime.

Feels contempt for the national administration for its insincere efforts to appear to support conservation after public disapproval of its course was manifested.

Declares that the members of the delegation who so faithfully supported Cannon and Cannonism knowingly misrepresented their constituents and should be retired from congress.

Applauds the wise and statesmanlike course of Hon. W. S. Hammond in congress and declares that he has generously earned re-election.

Demands of the next state legislature, regardless of political affiliations, that it submit to the voters of the state at the next general election a constitutional amendment providing for the initiative, the referendum and the recall.

Favors the levying of a tax on state lands for the purpose of local improvements.

Favors a federal income tax law.

Favors the direct election of United States senators by the people.

Favors a reapportionment of representation in the state legislature.

Favors conservation of natural resources.

Favors the granting of state aid to encourage the consolidation of rural schools, placing them upon a broader basis.

Favors an educational standard for the office of county school superintendents and a more liberal appropriation for their services.

Commends the three state administrations of Governor Johnson and regrets both his death and that of Hon. L. A. Rosing of the state board of control.

Tit For Tat.

The lady of the house was a handsome woman of a mature order of beauty, and when she had completed her toilet she gazed fondly at herself in the glass and remarked to the new maid, "You'd give a good deal to be as handsome as I am, wouldn't you, now?"

"Yes'm," was the maid's answer, "almost as much as you'd give to be my age."

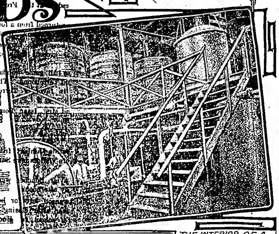
HARDEST OF ALL WOODS



THE INTERIOR OF A QUEBRACHO EXTRACT FACTORY

A QUEBRACHO TREE IN "THE CHACO"

A SAWMILL BETWEEN "THE CHACO" AND CIVILIZATION

THE BARK OF THE QUEBRACHO TREE

TWO of the greatest industries in the world are railway building and the preparation of hides and skins into leather. For the former the sleepers on which the rails are laid are essential and costly items; for the latter nothing can quite take the place of some vegetable extract which is the tanning substance of the trade. Sleepers can be made of glass and metal, but they do not give the satisfaction of [illegible] wood. The oak and the hemlock have for ages supplied [illegible] by which leather is cured. In fact, the very word tan implies by its derivation its relation to the oak, by which name the tree was called in old British language. Railway sleepers have been made from the oak, but the expense grows higher year by year. No wonder, therefore, that the earth is scoured for trees to [illegible] the one or the other of [illegible], and no wonder also that [illegible] hailed with delight the [illegible] of the availability for both purposes of the South American tree called "Quebracho."

Quebracho is a contraction of the colloquial Spanish [illegible] term quiebra-hacha, originally [illegible] to many trees in Latin America. It means [illegible] and the character is implied in this [illegible]. The wood is hard, fine grained, and tough [illegible] by the natives for ages in their [illegible] work. Of recent years, however, quebracho is restricted in the arts and industries to a particular tree found only in South America, and even here only within broad limits of the [illegible] of the River Parana. In Cuba there [illegible] so called locally, which is a member of the [illegible] family. In Chile a quebracho is [illegible] locally, and probably in other [illegible] America the name is indiscriminately [illegible] hard wood that has tested the metal of [illegible]. No such indefinite use of the word [illegible] today, because the tree of the South American Chaco has become so commercially important that it must be understood to signify only that one tree and nothing else.

The genuine quebracho tree is found in Brazil, Paraguay, and the Argentine Republic. There are two important varieties and a third has been distinguished, although it has no great significance botanically or value commercially. Locally and in the trade the names given are Quebracho colorado (red), and Quebracho blanco (white). Quebracho colorado has the scientific designation of Loxopterygium lorentzii, and belongs to the order of Anacardiaceae. This is the particular tree from which both the sleepers and the better quality of tanning extract are derived. The other, Quebracho blanco, is neither so straight nor so serviceable as the red variety, but is nevertheless of definite commercial value, as it furnishes some tanning extract and the logs can be used for fence posts and axles. From it is taken also a drug extensively used for bronchial diseases; in fact, as a plant it was studied for this purpose long before its other advantages were exploited. The scientific name is Aspidosperma quebracho.

Railways must have sleepers on which to lay their rails. In some instances wooden ones are imported at great expense, or substitutes therefor are used if climatic conditions are favorable. As a rule, however, it is preferred to take supplies from native timber whenever procurable. This was the case in the Argentine Republic when railway building away from the coast had begun, and no more fitting wood could be discovered than that recommended by the natives, both by the name and by the experience of those who had used it. The quebracho wood proved by far the most serviceable for sleepers on South American railways, and its reputation grew so steadily that today many miles of European rails are supported by sleepers brought from the River Plate.

In one respect quebracho resembles rather mahogany than oak or pine. The trees do not grow in clumps or groves, but are dispersed through the forests and the less dense woods, singly or in groups seldom more than four or five to the acre. The tree itself is tall, about two or three feet in diameter, and is crowned by a rather thin, oval, or V-shaped, mass of branches and leaves. The white quebracho is somewhat smaller than the red, and begins to branch lower to the ground, so that it is not hard to distinguish them from each other. The leaves are oval, or lance shaped, smooth, somewhat shining and leathery; they do not fall completely in the winter, but cling to the branches in company with the fruit. The tree seems to thrive best on a sandy soil, where the atmospheric moisture is not very great, but where abundant water is provided for the roots, either by dews or sufficient rain. It is neither a mountain nor a river growth, but lives best in the subtropical stretches between water courses. Although the age of the tree has been given as measured by hundreds of years, it is well enough established that at ten years from planting the best small shrubs are big enough to use for posts. The future promises, therefore, an opportunity for the actual cultivation of quebracho, because, although savage inroads have been made into the supposedly inexhaustible forests of the Chaco, it is not too late to restrict the cutting of the tree, or even to adopt modern forestry methods of planting and conservation for the supply of coming generations. In fact, the Argentine Republic has already passed suitable laws in this direction, and it is more than probable that under the wise administration of that government there will be developed an arboricultural industry to proceed hand in hand with the preparation of quebracho posts for fences and construction work, sleepers for railways, and of tanning extract, the three industries for which this unique tree is at present utilized.

"Rollizos" is the Spanish word commonly employed in the trade for the rough and untrimmed logs (which the word means), from which only the bark has been removed. They are still supplied by smaller camps from dwarfed undergrowth not great enough for other purposes than posts, beams, cabin pillars, or cart axles. When the forest was first invaded these logs were the only product brought out of it, and the stories told of the primitive methods adopted by the natives for transport carry one back before the days of steam and machinery. A popular way of loading the logs was to lay them on the ground on ropes; then the animals were unharnessed and the cart was tilted bodily upside down over the logs; these were then made fast to the body of the cart, after which maneuver it was brought back to its normal position. Of course only two-wheeled carts were used. As soon as modern methods were introduced, and better carts or wagons became known, these primitive and cumbersome habits disappeared, although in the far interior even today rollizos are still brought to market in this manner. "Durmientes," according to the Spanish, or sleepers, in the English idiom, are probably the most important product of the quebracho of the Argentine Republic.

The industry of making sleepers has assumed huge proportions. The difficulties of former days have been largely overcome by the introduction of modern machinery, especially saws, and some of the mills many miles distant from any main railway are equipped and organized in a manner which would reflect credit on any similar plant in the United States. Special saws are needed to penetrate the wood, but they are furnished from the factories of England, France, and America. This mill business is carried on by many companies, although the tendency is to concentrate the management into fewer but larger organizations. One company owns a tract of land of about 4,000,000 acres, and is prepared to cut timber, fashion it into logs and sleepers, prepare tanning extract, and utilize every other resource which the land provides. Another company can turn out 20,000 to 30,000 sleepers a week. This number, however, can by no means meet the steady demand for railway building which is characteristic of this portion of South America. Sleepers are laid at about an interval of two feet from center to center. Assuming, therefore, only 2,000 sleepers for every mile, it will be seen that 30,000 are enough for only 15 miles. A year's supply at fullest capacity will consequently build only 750 miles of railway. But the Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Chile and Bolivia, all contiguous to the Chaco, are constructing more than this mileage, so that it is easy to see that every sleeper turned out from modern mills can at once find a local market. These sleepers are now finished at the mill, and the mill is situated at the spot in the forest itself most convenient for carrying on the process.

Quebracho extract prepared for tanning skins and hides into leather is, however, the most serviceable product of the tree. All the timber companies are adjusting their plants so as to utilize the wood, either in its entire output, or in that portion not reserved for posts and sleepers, for this extract. In Paraguay and areas in the Chaco remote from good roads, so that the cost of supplying timber is excessive, every particle of the wood is turned into extract, because the demand is usually in advance of the supply, and it is therefore more profitable to manufacture the more concentrated article, which can be easier and more economically carried to market.

One feature of quebracho, in which it is superior to other sources of supply, is that the bark, the sapwood, and the whole of the central part of the tree produce the extract in considerable quantities. The bark contains 6 to 8 per cent. of tannin, the sap 3 to 5 per cent., and the heart 20 to 25 per cent. As the heart represents two-thirds and often three-fourths of the total quantity of wood, the amount of tannin in the Quebracho colorado is seen to be considerable. It is merely a chemical question whether this tanning material is equal or inferior to that from the oak, but later methods of preparation point to a full justification of the claim that the leather from quebracho extract grades up to that resulting from any other tanning substance. So serviceable is it, however, that since its discovery, the tanning industry of the Argentine Republic has made noticeable advance, because, with both hides and extract as great natural products of the country, the government is making every effort to foster the leather industry within its own border.

"Quebracho extract," as it is called in the trade is easily manufactured when the machinery is once installed. All the wood is passed through a machine that cuts it into shavings or the smallest possible chips. It is then collected into immense kettles, in which it is treated by chemical processes until all the tannin is removed; after this the fluid preparation is reduced by evaporation to a thick, jelly-like mass, which is poured into sacks, where it is finally dried into the substance sold in commerce.

The difficulty of gathering the raw material far outweighs the preparation of the finished article, especially as the extract is no longer to be considered a by-product, but is coming to have more importance and value than posts and sleepers. In Paraguay particularly, where all the wood is utilized for extract, the hardest part of the business lies in gathering wood for the factory. The trees are cut in the heart of the virgin forest and hauled by ox teams to the nearest clearing. Only native Indians have proven themselves suitable for the work, as they are thoroughly acclimated, understand the wilderness, and can withstand the plague of insects which make life at night miserable for the foreigner; and exposure for nights as well as days is unavoidable, because the cutting stations are usually remote from any settlement.

In 1895 the first real exportation of quebracho extract from the River Plate was recorded. The increase has been rapid—from 400 tons in the first year to 9,000 tons in 1902, 120,594 tons in the next five years, and 28,195 tons in 1907. Of this quantity the United States received 17,733 tons, or almost 65 per cent.

MATERIAL FOR A BOOMERANG

Celluloid Is Excellent Because of Lightness, Hard to Break and Can Be Properly Curved.

The material of which the boomerang is made is a feature which must be considered. It can be fashioned of ash or hickory, but can also be cut or stamped out of celluloid and hard rubber. Boomerangs are now being sold in two or three American cities, writes Day Allen Willey, in St. Nicholas. Several expert throwers in this country, however, have fashioned their own boomerangs not only of celluloid but of heavy cardboard. If the cardboard does not get wet, it makes a serviceable missile. Strange to say, celluloid is excellent for the purpose, because it is light, very hard to break and can be worked into the peculiar curve and twist which are so necessary to give the boomerang its force and direction.

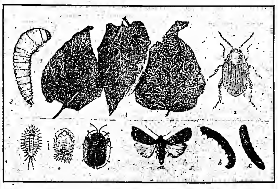
When the party reached an aboriginal village (the Puma tribe) half-way up the mountain, they employed 21 aborigines to accompany them and continued the ascent. This mountain is believed by the aborigines to be a mountain of death, and nobody has dared to ascend it before. The aborigines, being in great fear, warned the party not to break branches of trees nor make loud noises nor throw stones, and finally they refused to proceed further. In spite of this the party proceeded and reached the summit at last. Seeing this, the aborigines were quite surprised at the bravery of the Japanese. The mountain is reported to abound in valuable trees.

DESTRUCTIVE LITTLE SWEET POTATO BEETLE

In Size, General Appearance and Methods of Motion, It Resembles Flea-Beetle of Common or White Potato.

The sweet potato flea-beetle is a small, bronzed or brassy-brown shining beetle, about one-sixteenth of an inch in length, very active, somewhat chunky, with deeply ridged or striped wing-covers, all these characters, except the general shape and bronzed color, require a magnifying glass to make out clearly. The hind legs of this beetle have the thighs very much thickened or enlarged, so that it leaps as readily as it flies, especially in the sunny part of the day. In the early morning and evening and in wet or cold cloudy weather, it is less active and may be readily taken on the leaves. In size, general appearance and methods of motion, it resembles the flea-beetle of the common or white potato, and it is supposed by some growers to be the same. It has totally different breeding and feeding habits, however, and the bronze color of the sweet potato species contrasts strongly with the dead black of the other.



Destructive Flea Beetle.

Fig. 1, work of flea-beetle on sweet potato leaves; Fig. 2, sweet potato flea-beetle; Fig. 4, larva, enlarged; Fig. 5, the mottled tortise beetle, with larva and pupa; Fig. 6. Euxoa messoria, a, its cut-worm larva, b and c, natural size.

These beetles live through the winter in rubbish, under logs, stones or among masses of leaves and other vegetation, and specimens may be found at almost any time during that season by sifting such rubbish along the edge of woods, under fence rails, along roadsides and in similar places.

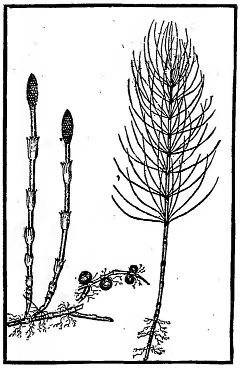
As soon as the plants are set in the field the beetles attack them and begin feeding. Their eating is peculiar in character and easily recognized. On either upper or under side they chew out narrow grooves or channels, at first close to and parallel with some of the principal veins; later, when the leaf has been pretty well eaten into, the channels may run any way. This attack, made as soon as the plants are set out, and while they are suffering from the shock of transplanting causes the leaf to lose vitality, turn brown, and die. If the weather happens to be dry and hot the entire plant dies, or if it does not, takes hold so slowly that the hill never catches up and is a poor one at harvest. If the plant is vigorous and weather conditions are right, it takes hold before the leaves have died, and after it has once made a start, soon gets beyond reach of the insects. Early in June the beetles begin to increase in number, and, as the bindweeds are by this time growing vigorously, the tendency on their part is to forsake the cultivated for the wild plants.

By the middle of June the beetles have practically disappeared and nothing more is seen of them until August, and then they are again found abundantly, not, as a rule upon sweet potatoes, but upon the hedge and other bindweeds and wild morning glories, where their characteristic feeding can be seen until October, although the beetles themselves disappear into winter quarters by mid-September. Practically, the insects disappear from the sweet potato fields about June 15.

POISONOUS HORSETAIL WEED



In summer there may be seen on low, marshy ground plants, showing first upright stalks, as shown at the left, and a few weeks later the bushy stems with fine needle-like leaves shown at the right. Horses often acquire a taste for this plant and eat it with injury to themselves. The effects are a gradual loss of control of the hind legs.

Profit in the orchard largely depends upon the perfection of the fruits raised and the quantity. And the trees cannot produce their full capacity unless well cared for.

Spraying for Blight.

Spraying for early blight on late varieties of the Rural New Yorker type of potatoes has proved profitable the past two years at the Minnesota experiment station. Spraying late varieties of the Rural New Yorker type may be delayed until the earliest planting of early varieties in the locality shows signs of the presence of the disease, when spraying should be immediately applied at the rate of 60 to 75 gallons of Bordeaux mixture per acre, followed with spraying of an equal amount every ten days in good weather. In rainy weather spray more frequently.

Good Exercise.

There is no harm in pigs rooting if they are in a field where rooting will do no harm. Pigs can secure much feed by rooting and the exercise will do them good. Where troublesome roots infest the soil they will often eradicate them if allowed to do so. The fattening hog should not be allowed to root, as the exercise consumes too much feed and energy.

Sunshine in Homes.

Few homes are able to scatter more sunshine in other homes than that of the farmer. The occasional basket of apples that are literally "going to waste," the overflow from the garden, even a bouquet of wild flowers, may do a world of good in homes which know them not.

Ducks Free From Disease.

Ducks never have cholera, roup or gapes. They lay more eggs which hatch better than hen's eggs. And they can be made to attain a weight of five pounds in ten weeks. But to secure the most profitable results one of the better breeds should be kept.

To Secure Plump Tomatoes.

If you want big, plump tomatoes, pinch off the vines just below the third set of blossoms, and then keep pinching off the side shoots which will start where the leaves start from the vines. This gives the fruit the benefit of the whole energy of the roots and makes large fruit.

HARDEST OF ALL WOODS

TWO of the greatest industries in the world are railway building and the preparation of hides and skins into leather. For the former the sleepers on which the rails are laid are essential and costly factors; for the latter nothing can take the place of some vegetable extract which is the tanning substance of the trade. Sleepers can be made of glass and metal, but they do not give the satisfaction of [illegible] wood. The oak and the hemlock have for ages supplied [illegible] by which [illegible] is cured; in fact, the very word tan implies in its derivation its relation to the oak, for which once the tree was called in old Breton language. [illegible] sleepers have been made from the oak, but [illegible] grows higher year by year. No wonder, [illegible] that the earth is scoured for [illegible] either the one or the other of [illegible] substances, and no wonder also that [illegible] hailed with delight the [illegible] of the availability for both purposes of the South American tree called "Quebracho."

Quebracho is a contraction of the colloquial Spanish [illegible] term quebrahacha, originally [illegible] many trees in Latin America. It means [illegible] and the character is implied in this [illegible]. The wood is hard, fine grained, and tough [illegible] by the natives for ages in their [illegible] work. Of recent years, however, [illegible] quebracho is restricted in the arts and industries [illegible] tree found only in South America [illegible] only within broad limits of the [illegible] of the River Parana. In Cuba there [illegible] so called locally, which is a member [illegible] family. In Chile a quebracho is [illegible] family, and probably in other [illegible] America the name is indiscriminately [illegible] hard wood that has tested the metal of [illegible] such indefinite use of the word, [illegible] today, because the tree of the South American Chaco has become so commercially important that it must be understood to signify only that one tree and nothing else.

A QUEBRACHO TREE IN "THE CHACO"

A SAWMILL BETWEEN "THE CHACO" AND CIVILIZATION

THE BARK OF THE QUEBRACHO TREE

The genuine quebracho tree is found in Brazil, Paraguay, and the Argentine Republic. There are two important varieties and a third has been distinguished, although it has no great significance botanically or value commercially. Locally and in the trade the names given are Quebracho colorado (red) and Quebracho blanco (white). Quebracho colorado has the scientific designation of Loxopterygium lorentzii, and belongs to the order of Anacardiaceae. This is the particular tree from which both the sleepers and the better quality of tanning extract are derived. The other, Quebracho blanco, is neither so straight nor so serviceable as the red variety, but is nevertheless of definite commercial value, as it furnishes some tanning extract and the logs can be used for fence posts and axles. From it is taken also a drug extensively used for bronchial diseases; in fact, as a plant it was studied for this purpose long before its other advantages were exploited. The scientific name is Aspidosperma quebracho.

Railways must have sleepers on which to lay their rails. In some instances wooden ones are imported at great expense, or substitutes therefor are used if climatic conditions are favorable. As a rule, however, it is preferred to take supplies from native timber whenever procurable. This was the case in the Argentine Republic when railway building away from the coast had begun, and no more fitting wood could be discovered than that recommended by the natives, both by the name and by the experience of those who had used it. The quebracho wood proved by far the most serviceable for sleepers on South American railways, and its reputation grew so steadily that today many miles of European rails are supported by sleepers brought from the River Plate.

In one respect quebracho resembles rather mahogany than oak or pine. The trees do not grow in clumps or groves, but are dispersed through the forests and the less dense woods, singly or in groups seldom more than four or five to the acre. The tree itself is tall, about two or three feet in diameter, and is crowned by a rather thin, oval, or V-shaped, mass of branches and leaves. The white quebracho is somewhat smaller than the red, and begins to branch lower to the ground, so that it is not hard to distinguish them from each other. The leaves are oval, or lance shaped, smooth, somewhat shining and leathery; they do not fall completely in the winter, but cling to the branches in company with the fruit. The tree seems to thrive best on a sandy soil, where the atmospheric moisture is not very great, but where abundant water is provided for the roots, either by dews or sufficient rain. It is neither a mountain nor a river growth, but lives best in the subtropical stretches between water courses. Although the age of the tree has been given as measured by hundreds of years, it is well enough established that at ten years from planting the first small shrubs are big enough to use for posts. The future promises, therefore, an opportunity for the actual cultivation of quebracho, because, although savage inroads have been made into the supposedly inexhaustible forests of the Chaco, it is not too late to restrict the cutting of the tree, or even to adopt modern forestry methods of planting and conservation for the supply of coming generations. In fact, the Argentine Republic has already passed suitable laws in this direction, and it is more than probable that under the wise administration of that government there will be developed an arboricultural industry to proceed hand in hand with the preparation of quebracho posts for fences and construction work, sleepers for railways, and of tanning extract, the three industries for which this unique tree is at present utilized.

"Rollizos" is the Spanish word commonly employed in the trade for the rough and untrimmed logs (which the word means), from which only the bark has been removed. They are still supplied by smaller camps from dwarfed undergrowth not great enough for other purposes than posts, beams, cabin pillars, or cart axles. When the forest was first invaded these logs were the only product brought out of it, and the stories told of the primitive methods adopted by the natives for transport carry one back before the days of steam and machinery. Of course only two-wheeled carts were used. As soon as modern methods were introduced, and better carts or wagons became known, these primitive and cumbersome habits disappeared, although in the far interior even today rollizos are still brought to market in this manner. "Durmientes," according to the Spanish, or sleepers, in the English idiom, are probably the most important product of the quebracho of the Argentine Republic.

The industry of making sleepers has assumed huge proportions. The difficulties of former days have been largely overcome by the introduction of modern machinery, especially saws, and some of the mills many miles distant from any main railway are equipped and organized in a manner which would reflect credit on any similar plant in the United States. Special saws are needed to penetrate the wood, but they are furnished from the factories of England, France, and America. This mill business is carried on by many companies, although the tendency is to concentrate the management into fewer but larger organizations. One company owns a tract of land of about 4,000,000 acres, and is prepared to cut timber, fashion it into logs and sleepers, prepare tanning extract, and utilize every other resource which the land provides. Another company can turn out 20,000 to 30,000 sleepers a week. This number, however, can by no means meet the steady demand for railway building which is characteristic of this portion of South America. Sleepers are laid at about an interval of two feet from center to center. Assuming, therefore, only 2,000 sleepers for every mile, it will be seen that 30,000 are enough for only 15 miles. A year's supply at fullest capacity will consequently build only 750 miles of railway. But the Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Chile and Bolivia, all contiguous to the Chaco, are constructing more than this mileage, so that it is easy to see that every sleeper turned out from modern mills can at once find a local market. These sleepers are now finished at the mill, and the mill is situated at the spot in the forest itself most convenient for carrying on the process.

Quebracho extract prepared for tanning skins and hides into leather is, however, the most serviceable product of the tree. All the timber companies are adjusting their plants so as to utilize the wood, either in its entire output, or in that portion not reserved for posts and sleepers, for this extract. In Paraguay and areas in the Chaco remote from good roads, so that the cost of supplying timber is excessive, every particle of the wood is turned into extract, because the demand is usually in advance of the supply, and it is therefore more profitable to manufacture the more concentrated article, which can be easier and more economically carried to market.

One feature of quebracho, in which it is superior to other sources of supply, is that the bark, the sapwood, and the whole of the central part of the tree produce the extract in considerable quantities. The bark contains 6 to 8 per cent. of tannin, the sap 3 to 5 per cent., and the heart 20 to 25 per cent. As the heart represents two-thirds and often three-fourths of the total quantity of wood, the amount of tannin in the Quebracho colorado is seen to be considerable. It is merely a chemical question whether this tanning material is equal or inferior to that from the oak, but later methods of preparation point to a full justification of the claim that the leather from quebracho extract grades up to that resulting from any other tanning substance. So serviceable is it, however, that since its discovery, the tanning industry of the Argentine Republic has made noticeable advance, because, with both hides and extract as great natural products of the country, the government is making every effort to foster the leather industry within its own border.

"Quebracho extract," as it is called in the trade is easily manufactured when the machinery is once installed. These beetles live through the winter in rubbish, under logs, stones or among masses of leaves and other vegetation, and specimens may be found at almost any time during that season by sifting such rubbish along the edge of woods, under fence rails, along roadsides and in similar places.

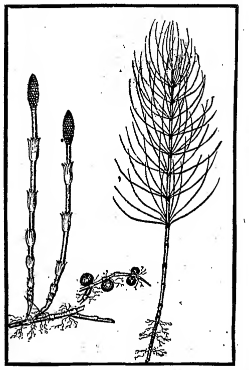
As soon as the plants are set in the field the beetles attack them and begin feeding. Their eating is peculiar in character and easily recognized. On either upper or under side they chew out narrow grooves or channels, at first close to and parallel with some of the principal veins; later, when the leaf has been pretty well eaten into, the channels may run any way. This attack, made as soon as the plants are set out, and while they are suffering from the shock of transplanting, causes the leaf to lose vitality, turn brown, and die. If the weather happens to be dry and hot the entire plant dies, or if it does not, takes hold so slowly that the hill never catches up and is a poor one at harvest. If the plant is vigorous and weather conditions are right, it takes hold before the leaves have died, and after it has once made a start, soon gets beyond reach of the insects. Early in June the beetles begin to increase in number, and, as the bindweeds are by this time growing vigorously, the tendency on their part is to forsake the cultivated for the wild plants.

By the middle of June the beetles have practically disappeared and nothing more is seen of them until August, and then they are again found abundantly, not, as a rule upon sweet potatoes, but upon the hedge and other bindweeds and wild morning glories, where their characteristic feeding can be seen until October, although the beetles themselves disappear into winter quarters by mid-September. Practically, the insects disappear from the sweet potato fields about June 15.

POISONOUS HORSETAIL WEED



In summer there may be seen on low, marshy ground plants, showing first upright stalks, as shown at the left, and a few weeks later the bushy stems with fine needle-like leaves shown at the right. Horses often acquire a taste for this plant and eat it with injury to themselves. The effects are a gradual loss of control of the hind legs.

Profit in the orchard largely depends upon the perfection of the fruits raised and the quantity. And the trees cannot produce their full capacity unless well cared for.

Spraying for Blight.

Spraying for early blight on late varieties of the Rural New Yorker type of potatoes has proved profitable the past two years at the Minnesota experiment station. Spraying late varieties of the Rural New Yorker type may be delayed until the earliest planting of early varieties in the locality shows signs of the presence of the disease, when spraying should be immediately applied at the rate of 60 to 75 gallons of Bordeaux mixture per acre, followed with spraying of an equal amount every ten days in good weather. In rainy weather spray more frequently.

Good Exercise.

There is no harm in pigs rooting if they are in a field where rooting will do no harm. Pigs can secure much feed by rooting and the exercise will do them good. Where troublesome roots infest the soil they will often eradicate them if allowed to do so. The fattening hog should not be allowed to root, as the exercise consumes too much feed and energy.

Sunshine in Homes.

Few homes are able to scatter more sunshine in other homes than that of the farmer. The occasional basket of apples that are literally "going to waste," the overflow from the garden, even a bouquet of wild flowers, may do a world of good in homes which know them not.

Ducks Free From Disease.

Ducks never have cholera, roup or gapes. They lay more eggs which hatch better than hen's eggs. And they can be made to attain a weight of five pounds in ten weeks. But to secure the most profitable results one of the better breeds should be kept.

To Secure Plump Tomatoes.

If you want big, plump tomatoes, pinch off the vines just below the third set of blossoms, and then keep pinching off the side shoots which will start where the leaves start from the vines. This gives the fruit the benefit of the whole energy of the roots and makes large fruit.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronogo, Mo.—"I was simply a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my heart fluttering and I could not even receive a letter. Every month I had such a bearing down sensation, as if the lower parts would fall out. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done my nerves a great deal of good and has also relieved the bearing down. I recommended it to some friends and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs. Mae McKnight, Oronogo, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing down pains and pains in lower parts. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanative Wash and now I have no more troubles that way."—Mrs. Al. Henzoo, 5722 Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

HARD TO PLEASE
Regarding the Morning Cup.

"Oh how hard it was to part with coffee, but the continued trouble with constipation and belching was such that I finally brought myself to leave it off.

"Then the question was, what should we use for the morning drink? Tea was worse for us than coffee; chocolate and cocoa were soon tired of; milk was not liked very well, and hot water we could not endure.

"About two years ago we struck upon Postum and have never been without it since.

"We have seven children. Our baby now eighteen months old would not take milk, so we tried Postum and found she liked it and it agreed with her perfectly. She is today, and has been, one of the healthiest babies in the State.

"I use about two-thirds Postum and one-third milk and a teaspoon of sugar, and put it into her bottle. If you could have seen her eyes sparkle and hear her say 'good' today when I gave it to her, you would believe me that she likes it.

"If I was matron of an infants' home, every child would be raised on Postum. Many of my friends say, 'You are looking so well!' I reply, 'I am well: I drink Postum. I have no more trouble with constipation, and know that I owe my good health to God and Postum.'

"I am writing this letter because I want to tell you how much good Postum has done us, but if you know how I shrink from publicity, you would not publish this letter, at least not over my name."

HOWLS ARE TERRIFIC

Seal With Awful Voice Keeps Zoo Attendants Awake at Night.

Mediterranean Monk Brought From Madeira Gives Keepers Little Chance for Rest by Dread Noise He Makes.

London.—The worst thing, according to their own estimate, that ever happened to the keepers at the Zoo is Bodger's voice.

Bodger—he is called Baleful Bodger now—is the Mediterranean monk seal brought from Madeira a month ago to the Zoological gardens.

On the voyage over he kept the whole ship awake every night by the dreadful noise he made. This forced the passengers and crew to conclude that he was excessively seasick.

Now the keepers of the zoo know to their cost that those sounds are Bodger's natural tones. As he has begun to feed and is in excellent health, they realize that they may have to live many years with his voice, and they describe the prospect as vile.

"It may not seem a serious matter to others," his keeper said, "but it is very serious to me.

"I have grown used to the howling of wolves, and when I slept near the jackals they did not keep me awake. After a time the lions' roars were a lullaby, the eagle and the screech owl ceased to worry me.

"But Bodger's voice is the limit of my endurance. It gets on my nerves more and more. It is spoiling my appetite."

Lying on the cement was Bodger, and every ten seconds or so he opened his mouth wide. From its dark depths he sent forth a dreadful sound.

As a lieutenant put it, it was exactly like the noise one would expect from an ass trying to bray whilst tortured by seasickness.

"You watch," said the keeper. "The people laugh at first, but it always drives them away in the end."

The keeper was right. The spectators' faces lost their hilarity after about three of Bodger's shouts, and they went away.

"At night," the keeper continued, "that fearful noise can be heard distinctly from one end of the gardens to the other. The attendants who live in the lodge near by complain that they cannot sleep.

One of the girls at the refreshment stall on the top of the terrace above Bodger has petitioned her employers to move her to the farthest part of the grounds. She says she cannot eat now that she has to listen to the brute's voice.

"Is he doing well? Yes, he is. We are trying now to get him to eat dead fish. So far he has only condescended to partake of live eels, and he eats $2 worth a day.

This much tried keeper has also the pleasanter task of caring for Roosevelt, the Teddy bear, and he was enthusiastic in his praise.

Roosevelt, through his trusting nature, has met with a minor disaster. Impelled by love and curiosity, he put his tongue into the striped hyena's den. The hyena immediately bit it and made the blood come.

Now Roosevelt, who has been moved to next door but one, spends his time standing against the wall nearest his enemy's cage, apparently longing to encounter him.

CANADA'S NEW GOVERNOR GENERAL

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT

OTTAWA, CAN.—The appointment of the duke of Connaught to be governor general of Canada is very popular in the Dominion for its people fully appreciate his high abilities and devotion to public work. Moreover, the duchess will be warmly welcomed as the leader of Canadian society. The duke of Connaught is an uncle of King George and is sixty years old. The duchess, to whom he was married in 1879, was a daughter of Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia.

REPLACES BELL BOY

Automatic Enunciator Imperils Messengers' Jobs.

Inventors of Sound Magnifier Claim It Is Possible to Talk to Millions of People Thousands of Miles Away—How Worked.

Chicago.—An automatic enunciator, by which a man talking in New York can be heard in every part of a large room in Chicago, that may throw most of the bell boys in the hotels and clubs out of a job, and that may make it possible for a public speaker to address a million or more people at one time, was given its first public demonstration in Chicago the other day.

A man whose wife is somewhere in the shopping crowd of a big store can be located instantly by the new device, it is promised, and as a word spoken into the transmitter can be heard in every room with which the instrument is connected, it may be used to call trains in railway stations and to spread a fire alarm throughout a large building.

From the fifth floor of one building to the third of another was the distance in the test, but a distance of 900 miles from Pittsburg to Columbus, Ohio, and back to Pittsburg, has been successfully negotiated, according to Joseph Harris, president of the Automatic Electric company, who had charge of the test. Ordinary telephone wires are used by the new instrument, the receiver and transmitter being on new lines. A graphophone horn at the receiving end of the instrument sends the voice of the person at the transmitter to all parts of the room at the other end of the wire.

With every public room of a big hotel connected with an enunciator, it will no longer be necessary to send a bellboy traveling over the building calling out messages for the guests, the inventors of the instrument declare. The message spoken into the transmitter will be heard over the entire building, and will not need to be repeated. Several big Chicago hotels will have them in operation before fall, Mr. Harris declared, one big hostelry now nearing completion having already concluded arrangements for the automatic bellboy.

Theodore Roosevelt, had he postponed his visit until the work of installing the instruments had progressed a little further, could speak to practically every person in Chicago without getting hoarse, the enthusiastic inventors pointed out. All that would be necessary would be to put a transmitter on the platform beside him and connect up various halls in all parts of the city, where people of the different neighborhoods could gather.

Running descriptions of baseball games or prize fights can be sent over long distances for the entertainment of sporting fans of all varieties. Cabs can be called from the theaters while waiting parties remain inside the building, and trains may be equipped with the instrument so that stations may be called in all the cars simultaneously.

Beyond stating that the enunciator is the combined work of a number of American and foreign inventors, Mr. Harris refused to reveal the discoverer of the new method of sound transmission.

Food for Cows is Wasted

Atlanta, Ga.—Governor Brown is a strong believer in the conservation of the national resources and a foe to waste. On the simple matter of cornstalks Governor Brown figures that Georgia is throwing away enough feed to keep a million head of cattle.

It is a well known fact that while the farmers of Georgia pull the leaves from the corn for fodder, leaving the stalk standing to support the ear of corn, through the northern and western states it is the custom to cut the stalk down, shock it up and then to shred it for cattle feed after the corn has been taken off.

Governor Brown is of the opinion that the method now in vogue in this state of pulling fodder is an exceedingly wasteful one and he would welcome the introduction of shredding machines as a saving to farmers of millions of dollars annually.

"The impression prevails among our farmers," the governor said, "that the corn would shrivel up if the stalk were cut down. Such is not the case. When the fodder is pulled the cornstalk dies and dies just as quickly as if the plant had been cut down.

"The leaves on the stalk are the lungs of the plant and when they are stripped off the plant dies. Heretofore cornstalks have been considered a nuisance on the land and they are generally raked up and burned. Now there are probably a ton of corn stalks to an acre. A ton and a half would be a nearer estimate. With 5,000,000 acres in Georgia planted in corn the stalk waste would be sufficient to carry through the winter a million head of cattle. Think how much this would mean to the Georgia farmer in meat value, to say nothing of the manure.

Hen Rival of Chameleon.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Mrs. Henry Farnum of Lanesboro has a black Minorca hen which she says is fifteen years old and has changed its color four times. As a pullet the hen was black, later she became speckled black and white, then changed to black and is now pure white. The Minorcan still sings and lays.

Pig Chews Dynamite.

Portland, Ind.—A pig weighing about 75 pounds, the property of Joseph H. Sell of Pennville, was killed in a peculiar manner. A dynamite cartridge accidentally became mixed in the feed and was discharged by the animal while chewing. The lower jaw of the pig was broken by the explosion of the cap and its death followed instantly.

In Chicago's Little Italy

Chicago.—There is a small Italian restaurant in Chicago which has so far escaped the attention of that class which spoils Bohemia by entering its borders. When invaders led by curiosity and armed with lorgnettes and ear trumpets come in such numbers that the original inhabitants fly before their invasion then Bohemia is gone. Therefore to say that it is in the neighborhood of Sixteenth street is to be definite enough.

It is a place of good fellowship and equality. The host greets with the same gracious welcome the first faint spark of talent and the genius whose flame has lighted up the world. The unpretentious walls have sheltered diplomats artists actors and singers. Here one may often find Bedusehi who created the tenor roles in most of Puccini's operas in Italy, and who is now a Chicago singing teacher. Scotti and Caruso on their travels frequent the place, although, sad to say, the golden voiced one does not go there as frequently as he did before Bonci discovered the place.

Here one can listen to real Italian songs sometimes sung by those voices which call the public in crowds to fashionable opera houses. Here the real Italian wines can be obtained and the proper manner in which to eat spaghetti half a yard long may be observed.

If you would find your way to this little eating place ask the Italian violinist in the lobster palace any one of 'em which you may happen to frequent. He knows, and, perhaps, he'll tell.

Topless Potatoes Fool Bugs.

Lewistown, Pa.—Perke Murtiff, proprietor of the St. Charles hotel, owns a farm in the vicinity of Burnham park, and his farmer called him over and informed him that he was growing topless potatoes.

An investigation proved that two rows, supposed to have been Early Rose seed, were absolutely without sign of stalks; yet there are roots, with potatoes the size of large shellbarks in the rows.

The farmer says it's a good thing, as it will fool the bugs.

Only Witness at Wedding

Forsaken New Jersey Lass Takes Uninviting Station and Faints After Ordeal.

Hoboken, N. J.—One of those everyday romances which would sound improbable if presented as fiction was revealed the other day in the marriage records filed by Samuel Engler, justice of the peace, at 53 Newark street, this city. Two certificates bear the name of Margaret Korn as a witness. This is the story told by Mr. Engler.

William Longley of 45 Second street, Jersey City, and Margaret Korn of 220 East Eighty-second street, Manhattan, were warm friends. Their close acquaintances said they were engaged. Recently they disagreed and Longley went from Margaret to Sadie Katzenstein of 1685 First avenue, New York, a mutual friend and proposed. He was accepted, and they went to the office of Justice of the Peace Engler to be married. On entering the office they came face to face with Margaret Korn, who had gone there to be a witness at the wedding of two other mutual friends, Albert Rheinhardt of Jersey City, and Louisa Cops, of New York.

To add to the dramatic feature of the situation, Longley stepped over to Miss Korn and asked her if she would not be a witness of his wedding to Miss Katzenstein. She agreed and stood up with them. As they were pronounced man and wife Miss Korn fainted. She was revived by the two newly married couples and departed with them to the wedding dinner.

Unearths Mammoth Teeth.

Stephenson the council surveyor, worked at it with his walking stick and succeeded in unearthing a tooth of a mammoth in a perfect state of preservation, weighing 12 pounds 13 ounces. It stands 8 inches high and is over 4 inches thick. A thorough search is to be made of the cliff side for further remains

A TERRIBLE CASE OF DROPSY.

Lebanon, Ind., Man Gives Vivid Description of His Suffering.

John T. Anderson, 613 W. Main St., Lebanon, Ind., says: "I was taken suddenly with agonizing pains through my kidneys, followed by a stoppage of the urine. I was soon in such agony I could not lie in bed and for weeks sat in a chair propped up by pillows. The urine was mostly blood and had to be drawn with a catheter. My limbs were swollen to twice their normal size. The doctor finally said he could do no more and my family gave up hope. It was at this time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and gradually improved until well. I gained twenty-eight pounds and have had no trouble since."

SOFT, WHITE HANDS

May Be Obtained in One Night.

For preserving the hands as well as for preventing redness, roughness, and chapping, and imparting that velvety softness and whiteness much desired by women Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, is believed to be superior to all other skin soaps. For those who work in corrosive liquids, or at occupations which tend to injure the hands, it is invaluable.

Treatment—Bathe and soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the Cuticura Ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. Wear during the night old, loose gloves, or a light bandage of old cotton or linen to protect the clothing from stain. For red, rough, and chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, and shapeless nails with painful finger ends, this treatment is most effective. Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, Boston, Mass.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medical forest plants. A double wedding of local interest occurred at St. Joseph's church Monday, Rev. Fr. Fayolle officiating. The young people who were parties to the happy affair were Miss Delima Benoit and Mr. Fred Raymond and Miss Josephine Constant and Mr. Henry Raymond. The first named couple were attended by Miss Rose Lacoursiere and Albert Pruneau and the others by Miss Anna Constant and Henry Raymond. Wedding dinners were served at the Benoit and Constant homes and then the wedding parties joined again for a wedding supper and reception at the Raymond home near Mentor. The young people will reside near Mentor.

We take pleasure in announcing to the public that we have purchased the stock, tools, machinery and good will of L. A. Kaufer, Old Reliable Harness Shop, and will continue in the business at the same location as occupied by Mr. Kaufer, having made a lease of the premises from him. It will be our aim to conduct a good, first class, up-to-date establishment. P. F. Pouliot will have charge of the financial and A. J. Pouliot of the mechanical and managing department. With this combination we feel that we will be well equipped to cater to the needs and wants of the trade. It is our earnest desire to make a success of this business. We will need your aid to do this which we hope to receive and merit by fair and square dealing and thereby be a credit to the community.—P. F. Pouliot, A. J.

As announced in last week's issue of the Gazette, I had made arrangements to dispose of my harness stock this week. I am glad to say that I succeeded in closing a deal whereby P. F. Pouliot, A. J., become the owners of the stock. These two young men need no introduction from me as they grew to manhood among you. I was much pleased to turn over my business to two such men as I am satisfied that they will not only strive to keep up the business to what it has been, but will bring new ideas and ambition which will result beneficial to them and the community. I wish to thank the public for the many years of patronage given me.

Very Respectfully Yours,
L. A. Kaufer.

O. J. Knuteson, who has been with the Red Lake Falls milling company as bookkeeper for the past several years, will not go to Crookston when the offices of the company are moved to that city. He has resigned his position with the milling company, to accept a more lucrative position with the Red River Power company, the recent purchasers of the local light and power plant. He will be employed in the office at Grand Forks and will leave for the North Dakota city Saturday. Mr. Knuteson has been a valuable man for the milling company and it was his good work in the office here that brought him the offer of the better place at Grand Forks. Mr. Knuteson has many friends here who will hope for his rapid promotion with the company.

Dear Doctors:

I promised you that I would send you a letter of reference in regards to your ability, so after a long delay here it is.

Well my boy is all right now, going to school and as strong and healthy as a boy of six could be.

Just to think of his condition when you first started his treatment in Minneapolis. He was having 40 to 60 convulsions in 24 hours, could not talk, walk or feed himself. When you said that 3 month's treatment would cure him I surely thought that you was trying to graft me, but like a drowning man grasps at a straw I took a chance with you, with the wonderful results.

Now, Dr., I won't attempt to thank you for mere words won't express my gratitude, but if I can be of any help to you or your patients, let them write me enclosing stamp and I will verify any of this letter.

Kindest regards from
J. Richard Steree,
Seattle, Wash.

OWN MANY WATER POWERS IN STATE

H. M. Byllesby & Company Issue Statement Showing Extent of Enterprise.

Property Here Has Capacity of Three Thousand Horse Power

According to reports published in last evening's dailies, the H. M. Byllesby company of Chicago have issued a circular showing the water powers in the state controlled by the company and offering for [illegible] in the various enterprises.

These people recently purchased the Red Lake Falls electric light plant, water power and electric light plant and are conducting the business and that at Red Lake under the corporate name of Red River Power company. Besides the local property, the Byllesby company owns like properties in the following cities: St. Paul, Stillwater, South Stillwater, [illegible] Cannon Falls, [illegible] Mankato, [illegible] Fargo, Grand Forks and [illegible].

The [illegible] announcement [illegible] 3300 horse power capable of use here and on [illegible] cities in the state being improved [illegible] 2300 horse power.

RAILROAD RATE DISCRIMINATION

Makes Fat Cities and Lean Towns—Will Lind Accept.

St. Paul, Aug. 9.—The announcement [illegible] by the census bureau that the population of St. Paul is now [illegible]. The population in 1900 was [illegible] the gain in the ten years is [illegible] per cent of [illegible] of increase. While the population of Minneapolis is not yet announced those familiar with conditions in both cities believe that both the [illegible] and the rate of increase there will be great.

Growth of Cities.

Naturally the rapid growth of the [illegible] cities is considered by their inhabitants a matter of congratulation. And it is if the increase of rural has kept pace with the increase of urban population. Otherwise it might become a matter of serious concern. The state at large reaps small advantage from the growth of its larger cities in population and wealth if that growth is brought about by artificial conditions [illegible] it results from a studied policy to center industry and trade in [illegible] localities at the expense of the [illegible] the other parts of the state [illegible] if they were not discriminated against.

Fat Towns and Lean Country.

It is the failure of the smaller towns in the state and especially in the older parts of the state to make that progress which their favorable location seems to warrant has long since ceased to be a matter of surprise. The conditions which bring it about are well known. No town can become more than a country village which has only a rural trade to depend upon. Its growth is retarded even in that respect when by reason of unfair transportation charges the price the farmer receives for his produce is arbitrarily cut down. Nor is the condition of purely agricultural communities as favorable as they should be where the policy of the railroads to center trade and industry at points they consider to their advantage results in depriving them of the local market which a wide diffusion of industry would involve.

The Farmer's Best Market.

The best market the farmers can have is the market that lies at his door. The building up of local industries in his market town is what gives him this. But manufacturing industries do not thrive in Minnesota country towns. They do not thrive and prosper in Iowa country towns and many of the comparatively small towns of Wisconsin are seats of industries of national importance. The same thing is true in Illinois, in Indiana and other states of the middle west. Here the growth of manufacturing and industry is to all intents and purposes confined to the Twin Cities and Duluth.

An Artificial Condition.

The reason is that they get more favorable freight rates. In Duluth this is a natural result. Duluth is at the head of the great inland waterway. In St. Paul and Minneapolis it is an artificial result, brought about appreciably by railroad discrimination in their favor and against the smaller towns which have equal natural advantages, and are equal or in some cases shorter distance from the sources from which raw materials are supplied and the markets in which manufactured products are sold. Indeed the shipper of practically all the products of Minnesota soil, if he lives in a small town, must pay a higher rate to reach the ultimate market for those products than a shipper who lives in the Twin Cities, although he may ship in the same quantities for the same or even less distance. Under such circumstances there is nothing surprising in the rapid rate of growth in the large cities and in the sluggish rate at which country towns expand.

Political Conservation.

It is little peculiar about politics at the National Conservation Congress which is shortly to be held in St. Paul. The governor says there must be none of it. Mr Ballinger says it must be tabooed. But Mr. Roosevelt tells the boys all to get together and boost President Taft on the opening day. Indeed it is to be called the president's and governor's day in which of course there is no political purposes. Evidently in this matter politics is to take on a new meaning. If the conservation congress were anything else than a Republican sideshow, is it not a little remarkable that the name of no single Democrat of national prominence has yet been connected with it? We have Taft and Roosevelt and Dolliver and Beveridge and Wilson and Lindsey and Garfield and a score or more of lesser lights, but no single solitary Democrat of national prominence on the program. Isn't it strange that one of them could not be found to take part in a national non-partisan movement?

A Peculiar Situation.

It is scarcely conceivable that there are no Democrats who wish to preserve for the use of the people the Democracy of the republic—the resources which are the gift of nature. When did Mr. Bryan ever fail to plead the cause of the common people that he should be excluded from a conference of non-partisans as to the best methods to protect the right of the people to the public domain? Is the eminent Democrat who presides over the destinies of Ohio unworthy to be consulted on these vital matters of preservation of our forests and our mineral resources or as to the best method of advancing the interests of agricultural education? Was there not one among the distinguished Democratic orators in either house of Congress but is in league with the forest despoilers, the iron kings and the war waterpower grabbers?

Playing for Position.

The idea that there are no patriotic members of the Democratic party interested in any genuine movement to preserve to the nation its natural resources is of course absurd. But the fact, so far as the men who have taken an active part in arranging the program for this convention is concerned is that they have acted throughout as though it was a Republican sideshow. That is what the governor undertook those pilgrimages to Chicago for. Pinchot and Garfield and their faction were getting the long end of it and incidentally to do a little advertising for himself and to help out Ballinger. Roosevelt comes in with the design of wielding the big stick over the head of both factions and making them be good until after election which he sees to be fraught with danger unless they get together. Generally the governors of the states throughout the union are wise to the real situation. That's why so many of them are passing the congress up. They have troubles enough of their own and have no fancy for pulling either Pinchot's or Ballinger's chestnuts out of the fire, and a good many of them don't give a continental whether peace prevails in the Republican household or not.

Much to Learn.

Not that anybody who can attend the congress would not do so, for after all, the men who are sparring for points are not going to be the whole thing in it by any means. So far as our local Republican politicians are concerned when the matter of real moment comes to be discussed they are hardly of the size to cut a figure. To be sure much of the conservation concerns semi-arid lands and the best method of irrigation which effect us but little and the preservation of forests in the mountain regions where there are still forests. But these subjects will be treated by experts, not by the men who are now getting the advertising out of it, and there will be much opportunity for the persons who really want to know the present condition of the state's natural resources to learn. There are able men who have made the subject a life-long study to be here to tell us what they have learned and to advise what is best to do. The politicians will thresh out after the first big splurge or so and then the men in earnest about conservation will get down to business and it is at their conferences where the real work will be done and the real information disseminated.

The Governorship Again.

Within the past few days there have been developments in the Democratic situation in this state, which indicated that an active junta has been extremely busy since the convention propagating misinformation. It is exceedingly difficult to get those who do know to say much, but there seems every reason to believe that the administration boosters have been a good deal too previous with their crowing. "Eberhart's luck" in not having to try conclusions with John Lind on which they have been counting may in the end prove not to have been such a remarkable dispensation of Providence in behalf of our "God-given Governor" after all. Really it's about the only thing that could save him and there are signs which indicate that it may fail.

Doctored Dispatches.

There have, since people have been hoodwinked with queer telegrams from Washington, been a number of conferences among independents of various kinds with the governorship as the subject of deliberation. There are a whole lot of people in the state who want to cast an effective vote on the one hand for Eberhart or go to the extreme to vote for the candidate of the Prohibition party. They would like to see some other way out. Now Lind would have found a highly satisfactory alternative. It is in the cards that they may yet not be disappointed.

Keifenheim-Converse.

Miss Mary Keifenheim and Mr. Milton A. Converse were married Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock, Rev. Fr. Fayolle officiating. The ceremony was a quiet one, only a few relatives being present. The attendants were Miss Marie Baril and Mr. Edward Keifenheim. Mr. and Mrs. Converse left on a short wedding trip to Detroit, Minn. On their return they will go to housekeeping in the south part of town in the house until recently occupied by the Tundberg family. Mr. and Mrs. Converse have many friends who are glad of the opportunity to offer congratulations and best wishes.

DROWNED IN RED LAKE RIVER

Two Young Ladies Lost Their Lives at Crookston Last Evening.

Two young ladies, daughters of L. M. Walton, head miller for the Crookston Milling company, were drowned in the Red Lake river at Crookston last evening. The young ladies, with others, were in bathing. One of them went beyond her depth. She called for help. Her sister went to her assistance and both went down. The girls were 16 and 18 years old. This information was contained in a telephone message received here last evening and is all that has been learned of the sad accident.

WILL BE REAL GLIDERS

Wright Brother's Aeroplane at the Minnesota State Fair.

The second week in June the Wright Brothers gave their first public demonstrations at Indianapolis, Ind.. With a 22 mile wind blowing, Mr Brookins, a graduate from the class Mr. Orville Wright had been teaching in the vicinity of Montgomery, Ala., broke the world's record for height, reaching an altitude in excess of 4,300 feet.

This is the kind of aerial exhibition that will be seen at the State Fair. A competent operator and an engine of sufficient horse power to make long, high and sensational flights is what the Wright Brothers will furnish.

Glen Curtiss of Hammondsport, N. Y., who made several successful flights during the aviation meet, promises he will send an eight-cylinder machine to the fair, which will assist in making this portion of the attraction of extreme interest.

The fair aeroplanes will not be gliders, that make a short flight of two or three hundred feet at a height of fifteen to twenty feet, but the real article you have read and heard so much about.

Thief River's Only Hope in Division Contest is to Juggle Figures.

If They Told the Truth There'd Not be a Single Reason for Division.

The newspapers of Thief River Falls continue their tirade of abuse, vainly imagining that the foolish falsehoods their special articles contain are so disguised that the people of Red Lake county will swallow them for logical argument.

Both papers contain the same identical unreasoning, malicious round of personal abuse written for the occasion, not by the respective editors, (whose minds usually run in widely different channels,) but by a professor of the city schools in Thief River Falls, who shows his ability to teach the young, by the facility with which he abuses older and better men than himself.

The arguments which have been put forth in favor of the division of Red Lake county, have been so weak and transparent that they fell to pieces of their own weight and scarcely required an answer. But, owing to the insistent demand of the voters of the county for REAL FACTS, we have decided to publish some.

One of the main and most plausible arguments set forth by the "yellow journalist" of the north was the statement that the "average rate of taxation" in Red Lake county for years quoted by him was high as compared with some other counties in the state. And he went on to say that the "average rate of taxation" in Red Lake county for 1909 was 45 mills. This was a deliberate attempt to deceive the people of the county who haven't time to look into the figures for themselves, to make them believe that the 45 mills represented the county tax, levied for the county purposes. As a matter of fact the actual county tax of our county for 1909, levied for county purposes, was less than 12½ mills, and even then it included an extra levy of four mills for court house building purposes. If you have any doubts go to the office of the county auditor or the county treasurer, and see for yourselves.

The 45 mill average not only includes the county tax, but the township, city, village, and school district taxes, and the state tax.

You know, don't you, that whether you live in a large county or a small one, Red Lake, Pennington or Polk, your state taxes, your township, city or village taxes, and your school district taxes will be just the same? The county has nothing to do with them except to collect them and to pay them over to the local treasurer for you. The county board does not levy them. The state levies the state tax, your township, village or city board levies your township, village or city taxes, and your school board levies your school tax.

You know, don't you, that in the last few years, eleven or twelve towns of new territory have been opened up and settled in Red Lake county, each requiring new school districts, new school houses, new expenses, which had to be met by a levy of larger school taxes? The new towns required roads and road work, making the township taxes larger. The city of Thief River Falls is building a fifty thousand dollar opera house and a forty thousand dollar school house, adding so much more to the total taxes necessary.

Would your town, or your school cost less to run if you were in Pennington county instead of Red Lake.

All these items go to make the 45 mill average.

Do you think it is a fair appeal to your intelligence that the Thief River Falls Boomers should try to make you believe that the county board of Red Lake county is responsible for that 45 mill average?

They want to do your thinking for you.

They actually believe that you voters won't know any better than to take their padded, bogus figures as Gospel truth.

Why don't they tell you the REAL FACTS AND FIGURES? Why do they seek to mislead you? If the truth was in them they would be feeding you on such fanciful figures as the "45 mill average?"

It is because if the real facts were laid before the intelligent voters of this county, it would convince every one beyond a doubt that to vote for a division of Red Lake county would be to cut off your nose to spite your face.

Do you want to know what the tax levy for county purposes in Red Lake county has been for the last few years?

Well, here it is, and it is true. You can verify it by the county records any time.

County rate of taxaton for each year.

1898	9.97 mills.
1900	11.17 mills.
1901	15.17 mills.
1902	9.47 mills.
1903	9.77 mills.
1904	9.07 mills.
1905	8.67 mills.
1906	8.82 mills.
1907	9.82 mills.
1908	9.47 mills.
1909	9.40 mills and 4 mills for courthouse.

And these levies include the one-mill county school tax, and the money necessary for roads and bridges and to pay bonds and interest.

Only about 9½ mills per year, and some of the time less, for county purposes.

What do you think about that, after all the shouting Thief River Falls has done about high county taxes and forty-five mill rates?

Now, do you know what it cost to run the extravagant city of Thief River Falls, and their city schools at the same time?

Their city and school levy for 1909 is 33 mills, and besides that they get one mill out of the county tax and a big state apportionment, for their schools. THIRTY-FOUR MILLS LEVY to provide Thief River Falls Boomers with spending money, and only NINE AND A HALF MILLS to run the whole of Red Lake county with thirty-one townships.

Doesn't it look as if out of that big forty-five mill average, they levied about thirty-four mills for themselves?

Now, if they tax their own people that high to provide spending money for themselves, what wouldn't they do to Pennington county if that unfortunate would-be county should come into existence, and be owned by the Thief Riverites?

With their claimed twelve hundred votes controlling the Pennington county elections, they would tax the poor farmers out of existence to add glory to Thief River Falls, and build fifty thousand dollar opera houses.

The reservation townships would become mere suburbs of the city and the biggest crop you would have to raise would be taxes.

"BUFFALO BILL" COMING.

Will be at Crookston Saturday August 20.

The interesting announcement is made that Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Pawnee Bill's Far East will exhibit as indicated above. A remarkable event is announced in the leave-taking from public life of the old scout, "Buffalo Bill," who is making a last bow to each city he now visits—a valedictory. It is further stated that arrangements have been made with officials of the railroads to run reduced rate excursions on that date, thus affording residents of this vicinity an opportunity to visit the exhibition at a minimum of expense. Two vast enterprises are now allied under one management. The union of Buffalo Bill's Wild West with Pawnee Bill's Far East brings together two great factors in out-of-door entertainment. While, of course, the general style of the combined entertainment remains the same as when they were separate units in public amusement, there will be many features entirely new to this style of exhibition. The Far East contingent will be represented in an oriental spectacle of great beauty and splendor; introducing many picturesque types which inhabit the romantic east. In this scene and as a particular feature, Rossi's Musical Elephants, imported at an expense of $1,000 per week, will introduce their remarkable exhibitions; playing various musical instruments, dancing, and in other manners evidencing their remarkable sagacity and wonderful training. The chief scenic feature will be the Battle of Summit Springs, a reproduction of one of the deciding conflicts in Indian warfare; a battle in which Col. Cody participated and in which he shot and killed Chief Tall Bull. In "A Holiday at 'T-E' Ranch" will be pictured the pleasures and past-times of the plainsman, cowboy sports and a dance upon the green.

Bids Wanted for Office Counters, Fixtures, Etc.

Sealed bids are invited for the furnishing and installtion of the judge's desk, witness and jury box, railing, paneling, etc., in the court room and for the counters, railings, etc., in the different offices in the County Court House now under construction at Red Lake Falls, Red Lake county, Minnesota, according to the plans and specifications of the architect on file in the office of the county auditor in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minn. Plans and specifications may also be seen at the office of the architect, Fremont D. Orff, Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn.

The County Board of said county will meet at the office of the county auditor in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minn., at 1:00 o'clock P. M. September 9th, 1910, to open and consider such bids as shall be submitted and to award the contract for the same. All bids must be filed with the county auditor at or before the hour of the meeting and must state when the job will be completed. Court House will be ready for installation on or about November 1st, 1910.

The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids or to invite further bids. A certified check in the amount of not less than $250, payable to the order of the County Auditor must accompany all bids.

THE WISE PLAN.

School Officers Should Consult Teachers and Superintendent.

A wise plan, the only safe plan, for school officers to follow in the purchase of school supplies is to consult with teachers and the superintendent before making any purchases. They are better able to advise you than are any other people. Even if people claim to have recommendations from the county superintendent or from others, you are not playing a safe game unless you consult with the superintendent.

GENTILLY WON THE PRIZE AGAIN

High Score for State Cheese Contest for the Month of July.

For the steenth time the Gentilly cheese factory has carried off first prize in a state cheese scoring contest. In the contest for July Gentilly scored 97 per cent, an exceptionally high mark. Dairy Commissioner French this week notified Fr. Thiellon of the result and he and the cheesemaker are very much gratified.

PROCEEDINGS

Red Lake Falls, Minn., August 5th, 1910.

On the call of the county auditor pursuant to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1905 and acts amendatory thereof, the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, met in special session at the office of the county auditor in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minn., at 1:00 o'clock p. m. August 5th, 1910, for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition of Ole Omundson and others for a ditch located wholly within the county of Red Lake, Minn.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at 1:00 o'clock p. m.

The petiton of Ola Omundson and others for a county ditch in said county was presented to the board and read and the board being satisfied that all of the conditions of Chapter 230 of the General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1905 and acts amendatory thereof had been complied with, on motion made by Commissioner Aubol, seconded by Commissioner Pigeon and carried unanimously the following resolution appointing an engineer to survey the route of the said proposed ditch was adopted:

In the matter of the petition of Ola Omundson and others for locating and constructing county ditch No. 56 in the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

Whereas, A petition bearing date the 27th day of June, 1910, signed by Ole Omundson and others praying for the establishment of a certain ditch in said county designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 56 the route of which is more fully described in said petition and a proper bond accompanying the same, have been filed with the county auditor of said county as by law required:

And, Whereas, It appears by satisfactory proof to the county board of Red Lake county that due notice of the pendency of said petition and the time and place at which the same would be heard, has been given as required by law:

Now, therefore, We, the county board of said county, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint C. H. Martz, as a competent and experienced engineer to make an accurate survey of the line of said proposed ditch from its source to its outlet, as provided and specified in and by Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905, and acts amendatory thereof, and after completing his duties as such engineer to make and file his report with the County Auditor of said County, on or before the 30 day of September, 1910.

Dated Aug. 5, 1910.

By the Board,
C. A. LINDQUIST,
Chairman of County Board of Red Lake county.
Attest: A. A. Latendresse,
County Auditor.

THE NERVE OF THOSE FELLOWS

They Talk About Extravagance, Graft and Other Crookedness.

It's a Subject in Which They Ought to be Well Versed.

Isn't it refreshing to read in the Thief River Falls newspapers the charges of extravagance and wrong-doing that they make against Red Lake Falls and Red Lake county, the veiled insinuations and slanderous rounds of abuse that they heap upon certain selected members of the county board—selected to abuse because these members are straight, upright men with minds of their own, who have refused to become the tools of the Thief River Falls boomers.

It well becomes Thief River Falls to stand upon a pedestal stamped with virtue and honesty, and point a hypocritical finger at any other town or people.

Thief River Falls—the home of graft; the hot-bed of corruption. The place that furnishes a "full house" for our county jail from January to December.

The place where they vote bonds every morning before breakfast and spend the money before dinner.

The place where the city officers get a slice of the contract price of building $50,000 opera houses with tax payers' money.

The place where in one year the saloon keepers paid sixteen thousand dollars license money, and only eight thousand dollars of it found its way into the city treasury.

The place where every man's hand is against his neighbor because he fears he isn't going to get a share of the "rake-off."

No wonder their fingers itch to get the handling of the county money as well as their own. Their field isn't broad enough. They have put their city where it is about "all in" so far as raising more money goes, and if they should lose their saw mill, and its big tax-raising valuation, Thief River Falls would be swamped with a debt it could never pay.

Don't you farmers of the would-be Pennington county want the boomers of Crooked Town to handle your tax money for you? And they would if Pennington became a sad reality.

At the last general election Red Lake county cast less than three thousand votes. Count off our southern half of the county with its fifteen hundred votes and you will have Pennington county with fifteen hundred votes, of which Thief River Falls will cast two-thirds. How will you get your representation in county offices then? The city will control every election in your county, grab all the county offices for city men, and the only use they will have for you farmers will be to raise taxes to pay salaries.

You can stay on your farm and grub, and plow, and sweat, while the Thief River Boomers hold snaps, draw salaries, and smoke good cigars at your expense. Don't you see that that is what they are after? You complain now that you have no representation on the board of county commissioners when, as a matter of fact, every man on the board is a farmer and lives in the country. How much representation would you have if Thief River Falls elected the board for you?

Don't you know that the very best thing for you farmers is to keep Red Lake county as it is, with the two cities opposed to each other, so that each one needs your help, and you farmers hold the balance of power?

If the time ever comes when Thief River Falls don't need your help or votes—has votes enough to run things—do you think they will chase you around asking you to hold office?

Just remember their name. The man who started the town must have been born with a gift of prophecy, for he named it THIEF.

MINN. PROSPERS

PROCEEDS OF JUDGMENTS

Hoard May Wipe Out Taxes for 1911 and Become a Christmas Gift.—Governor Said to Be Seeking Legal Authority.

St. Paul. — Minnesota's taxes abrogated for the year 1911. No state taxes paid, the state running itself through collections coming in from various sources and through the unusual collections made during the year.

This is an unheard of thing, something that probably has never occurred in the history of this or any other state, but it is exactly what is going to happen in Minnesota, if recommendations which Governor A. O. Eberhart, following suggestions made by Attorney General George T. Simpson and other state officers, are reported to be considering, are followed.

At present the treasury of the state of Minnesota is groaning under the burden of a surplus which has never been duplicated. On Oct. 1 there will be nearly $4,000,000 in the state treasury. Oct. 1, 1909, there was approximately $2,000,000 in the treasury, or about half the amount that will be in the state's strong box on the corresponding date this year. There is, or will be, a surplus of $1,700,000 in the state treasury.

The unusual amount of money in the state's cash box has come about through the successful settlement of cases which have netted the state large sums of money. The largest of these items came from the settlement of the lumber cases, the gross earnings tax cases, the Kennedy inheritance tax cases and others.

Not only have large sums of money come into the treasury, but they will result in constantly augmenting streams of gold in the direction of the state's coffers, so that Minnesota bids fair to become a state unique in the history of taxation—a state that may find it not necessary to tax its people one cent for the general maintenance of state governments.

As this money has been piling up in the state treasury the officers of the state have been wondering what to do with it. It is understood there have been secret conferences extending over a month. The governor's office has been in secret consultation with the office of the attorney general, the attorney general has been in consultation with the state auditor and the state auditor has in turn consulted with the others.

"Melon" Won't Be Cut.

What the exact results of these conferences have been and just how far they have gone in settling the future financial policy of the state is not known. The matter has been guarded jealously with the probable intention of giving the conclusions to the state all in one finding and the definite conclusions may not have been reached.

But this much can be stated, the governor's inquiry has resulted in an approval of the part of the attorney general of the program of abrogating the state's taxes and it is probable that a cool million or more, possibly the entire taxation sum, will be lopped off the roll for the year beginning Oct. 1.

Matters of policy for the future are involved. Surpluses are dangerous things. They tempt to the cutting of melons, of useless expenditures in the way of improvements, new buildings, state institutions, etc. The application of money to the running expenses of the state which are paid out of the general revenue fund, would find an immediate use for the cash.

The program is so revolutionary that the absolute legality of the act may be questioned, but it is understood from seemingly credible sources that Attorney General Simpson believes it can be done, that other lawyers are of the same opinion and that it will be done to the extent of applying the surplus, of over one million dollars to the general expense fund of the state, leaving only something like $200,000 to be raised by general taxation purposes.

BUYCK TOWN CLERK ACCUSED.

Duluth.—B. B. Brosvik, town clerk of Buyck, has been arrested on a charge of forgery, the warrant having been sworn out by W. J. Stevenson, special counsel of the board of county commissioners. The alleged irregularities were discovered by County Examiner Waegatt.

But one count has been entered against him, but it is declared on reliable authority, that the investigation which has been under way for some time will open a pit of corruption exceeding anything in the history of St. Louis county.

ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK.

Oyster Bay, L. I. — Theodore Roosevelt says that he has decided definitely to speak before the conservation congress in St. Paul on Sept. 6. He was informed that there had been reports of friction because some of the men on the program as speakers were regarded as ultraradical in their views. He gave the impression that these reports had reached his ears, but that the matter had been adjusted and said that his speech would be delivered as scheduled.

Vicious Horse Attacks Child.

Rochester.—A 6-year-old child of William Hennessey, residing five miles west of this city, was attacked by a vicious horse and her escape from a torturing death was a miracle. The horse knocked the child down and trampled upon her. The screams of the child brought the terror-stricken parents and their quick and prompt action saved her life. The body of the child is badly bruised in a number of places and the right arm is fractured. It is not known that there are any internal injuries.

BIG FIRE AT HAZEL RUN.

Blaze Which Wipes Out Principal Business District Costs $35,000.

Hanley Falls.—A $35,000 blaze wiped out the principal business buildings in Hazel Run, a village near Hanley Falls in Yellow Medicine county. The Jertson building, owned by J. H. Jertson, of Hazel Run, constructed partially of concrete, two stories in height, and containing the Hazel Run Mercantile Company's store, the Farmers' store and the furniture of three families occupying flats in the second story; and a frame building containing the store and residence of Ole Wilson and two vacant store rooms were both burned to the ground.

The fire originated in a defective gas plant in the basement of the Jertson building. No one was injured, the families occupying the buildings escaping before the flames had much headway.

The town is without fire protection, and after the flames had burst through the first floor of the Jertson building efforts to save the buildings were futile.

The value of the Jertson building was estimated at $12,000. The Hazel Run Mercantile Company's stock was valued at $15,000. The stock of the Farmers' store was valued at about $10,000. Other losses are as yet unestimated, but it is believed that the total will be about $35,000.

The insurance is unknown.

MINNESOTA "DRYS" PLEASED.

Urge Indian Bureau to Remain Firm in State.

Washington, D. C. — The anti-saloon league of northwest Minnesota telegraphed its congratulations to the bureau of Indian affairs for its action in extending prohibition on the ceded Indian lands in that state adjacent to the Leech Lake and White Earth reservations.

The league referred to the instructions recently issued by Chief Supervisor Holcombe to the field agents of the Indian bureau, forbidding the introduction of liquor to the prescribed territory in order to carry out for the protection of the Indians against intoxicating beverages, the stipulations of the treaties by which the lands were ceded.

The dispatch requested the officials to remain firm in their attitude on the subject.

ST. PAUL HIBERNIAN IS CHOSEN.

Portland, Ore. — Practically the whole day was taken up by the national convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in electing officers.

James J. Regan of St. Paul, Minn., the present national vice president, was elected national president over Matthew Cummins of Massachusetts by 12 votes.

The vice presidency went to Joseph McLaughlin of Philadelphia, whose support of Mr. Regan enabled the latter to secure the national presidency. National Secretary McGinnis of Scranton, Pa., was returned to that office without opposition.

Thomas Maloney of Council Bluffs, defeated J. F. Quinn of Chicago for national treasurer.

DR. ALEXANDER STONE DEAD.

St. Paul. — Doctor Alexander J. Stone, one of the most prominent surgeons in the Northwest, died at the Aberdeen hotel. Bronchial and lung troubles is given as the cause of death.

Dr. Stone was one of the best known medical men in the Northwest. He has been a resident of the Twin Cities for over 40 years and was surgeon-general of the state of Minnesota under the governorships of Lind, Van Sant, Johnson and Eberhart. He was a prominent officer in both state and national medical societies. He held a professorship at the state university of obstetrics and women's diseases up to a year ago when his health failed him and he was forced to resign. He was a member of the Masons, Elks and Knights of Pythias.

"CARRIE" AT ALBERT LEA.

Woman of Hatchet Fame Talks on Temperance.

Albert Lea.—Carrie Nation of hatchet fame spoke in the city before a crowded house. The noted saloon smasher was in jovial mood, but took occasion to severely arraign the local saloon men. The proceeds of the lecture are to be used for water wagon purposes, that is, the establishment of sanitary drinking fountains in the business district.

DULUTH TEACHER KILLS SELF.

Leaves Note, Declaring Intention, and Body Is Now Sought.

Athol, Massachusetts. — Leaving a note to his mother that the community would be shocked to learn that he had taken his own life, Ernest L. Easler, a teacher in a private school at Duluth, Minn., who was spending his summer with his parent, disappeared. A party has searched the woods for him and the authorities have dragged the pond without finding any trace of him.

SCANDAL GROWS

ANOTHER ALLEGED EXPOSURE IS MADE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

MORE BRIBERY CHARGES

Chicago, July 28. — The Tribune today prints a statement that an attempt was made previous to the election of Wm. Lorimer as United States senator to purchase seventeen democratic votes at $2,0000 a vote to secure the re-election of Senator Albert J. Hopkins.

The story comes on top of the recent luncheon where Roger Sullivan, the democratic national committeeman for Illinois and representatives of the ex-governor, fired pointed remarks at each other.

On this occasion, Sullivan is quoted as saying:

"Why don't you fellows look into what Albert J. Hopkins was trying to do at Springfield for four months?"

The Tribune declares that $35,000 was collected to secure the needed votes. It was placed in the hands of two little known ex-governors and a block of votes selected and made ready for delivery.

It is alleged that Mr. Sullivan and Speaker Shurtleff foiled the plan. The speaker is said to have told the culprits that he would expose the plot from the chair the moment a democratic ballot was cast for Hopkins.

Then Sullivan entered the arena. He arrived at midnight one night and gathering seventeen about him threatened to break every political bone in their bodies if they voted for Hopkins. That ended it.

The Tribune expresses the belief that the plot was formed without the knowledge of Senator Hopkins. The story is said to have leaked out to anti-Hopkins republicans and to democratic leaders through the babblings of one of the seventeen, who was rejoicing at the prospect of "easy money."

Republicans Harmonious.

Fargo, N. D., July 28.—The republican candidates at the meeting this afternoon formed a permanent organization by electing E. C. Cooper, chairman and J. M. Devine, secretary.

McCumber, A. J. Gronna, H. T. Helgesen, L. B. Hanna, C. A. Johnson, J. M. Devine and E. C. Cooper was appointed to prepare a platform to present to the candidates who will meet at Bismarck Sept. 9, the day before the state republican executive committee will meet, in order that such platform if desirable may be presented to the executive committee.

Walter B. Taylor, who participated in the meeting said: "The meeting was a harmonious one and every man present will be for the full ticket at the November election."

The meeting adjourned shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon to meet in Bismarck Sept. 9 for the purpose of hearing the recommendations of the platform committee.

Kentucky Crops Ruined.

Hawesville, Ky., July 28.—Nearly every bridge in Hancock county was carried away, many miles of public highways rendered impassable and the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis railroad washed out in many places as the result of a twelve-hour rain that began last night and continued until daybreak today.

Many homes on streams throughout the county have been abandoned. The loss of livestock is reported heavy. Wheat and tobacco that escaped damage in the heavy rains of the past month was completely destroyed and the farmers are utterly discouraged. Corn is flat on the ground and the meadows are ruined.

Rawn Was No Millionaire.

Chicago, July 28.—Instead of being a millionaire, Ira G. Rawn, president of the Monon Railroad Co., who was found shot to death at his summer home, died possessed of an estate valued at only $120,000. So at least a petition filed today by his widow declared. Rawn's will was promptly admitted to probate. Mrs. Rawn was appointed executrix.

Hill to Be At Grand Forks.

Grand Forks, N. D., July 18.—James J. Hill, the railroad magnate will be at Grand Forks on the occasion of the inauguration of President McVey of the North Dakota state university, and the city expects to make this a big day in her history. The date fixed for the inauguration is Sept. 28.

English Cattle Barred From U. S.

Washington, July 28.—Owing to the discovery of foot and mouth diseases among the cattle in Yorkshire, England, the importation of cattle from that country to the United States has been prohibited until the extent of the disease can be determined.

Attendance Was Large.

Fargo, N. D., July 28.—All records for attendance were broken at the state fair today. It was Dan Patch day and that and the fine weather drew large crowds.

$125,000 Fire at Driscoll.

Bismarck, N. D., July 28—Starting in an alley between a pool hall and a meat market fire did damage to the amount of $125,000 at the little village of Driscoll, east of here on the N. P. this morning. The entire west side of the village was wiped out.

There is no fire fighting apparatus and the buildings on the east side of the tracks caught fire several times but were put out before they gained much headway. There is no theory as to the origin of the fire but there are some who suspect it was started intentionally. The loss is about half covered with insurance.

Rawn's Estate $2,000,000.

Chicago, July 26.—Despite the death of Ira G. Rawn, the former president of the Monon bank, who was to have been a witness in the taking of testimony in the Illinois Central car repair cases, was resumed today before Thomas Taylor, master in chancery. It is part of the present purpose of the hearing to determine whether any money is due the road from officers and employe involved in car repair contracts and amount. The wealth of the Rawn estate is today estimated at $2,000,000 by a detective agency which has made an investigation into the affairs of the former railroad man.

A FRIEND OF DAKOTA DAN

CLAIMS HE WAS OFFERED BRIBE IN RUSSELL CASE.

Will Aid Him To Get Proper Share of His Father's Estate That Should Come To Him.

Boston, Mass., July 27.—William J. Cole, a native of New Hampshire, whose name was mentioned in the famous Daniel Blake Russell court fight, was approached with a proposition to impersonate the missing heir, to the detriment of the North Dakota claimant, according to a story told by Cole today.

Ten thousand dollars is the bribe he claims was offered with the one condition that he carry the impersonation through successfully. Cole confided his story to employes at the hotel where he was stopping, with the result that the Dickinson, N. D., man soon heard of it.

"I was introduced to Cole," said Dakota Dan this morning, "and he told me a story that startled me. He said he was approached by a person—he would not tell me who—while he was in California, months ago, who asked him to come to Boston and impersonate the younger brother of William C. Russell and become a claimant for a share in the estate left by my father.

"He said he later met the author of the proposition in Chicago and was told that he need not fear about his identity becoming known, as it could be shown that he had been killed in the San Francisco earthquake."

Cole himself refused to discuss the statement he made to Dakota Dan, simply saying: "I am a friend of the man you call Dakota Dan, and if I can help him get what belongs to him I will do so."

Harding for Governor.

Columbus, O., July 27.—The republican candidate for governor of Ohio is G. Harding of Marion, O., once lieutenant governor. Despite the efforts of Senator Burton's Cuyahoga county delegation to stampede the convention for Nicholas Longworth, and George D. Cox's every effort in behalf of Judge O. B. Brown, a Dayton man, the combination of "progressives" with the national administration men broke up the fight on the third ballot.

Then Cox, yielding to the inevitable cast ninety-one votes for Harding, and that finished it. The continuation of the roll call was a farce. The withdrawal of James R. Garfield and Carmi A. Thompson, before the beginning of the vote made possible the Garfield administration combination.

All Garfield's outside Cuyahoga delegation, except a few that clung grimly to the candidacy of the ex-secretary of the interior, were cast for Harding. Walter Brown of Toledo and Wade Hellis, state chairman were influential in lining up other delegates for the Marion man.

Immediately after this Lieut. Gov. Frances W. Treadway was renominated by acclimation. Granville W. Mooney was nominated for secretary of state.

Torrid in Chicago.

Chicago, July 27.—Only temporary relief from the intense heat of the last four days was promised by United States forecaster, Henry J. Cox, today, when the wind shifted to the northeast and the mercury dropped to 79 degrees. Warmer weather is predicted for tomorrow, when, according to the forecaster, the temperature is likely to equal its previous record of 97 degrees.

Two prostrations were reported early today. Andrew Peters, 21 years old, was overcome while on a street car and fell to the street, and was taken to a hospital. Another person by the name of Wm. Peters was also overcome and taken to a hospital.

Unknown Man Shot.

Steele, N. D., July 27.—An unknown man between 25 and 30 years, shot just below the heart, was brought to this city at noon today in an unconscious condition. He was found in a buggy just north of Tappen, near here. His gun was lying in the vehicle. The supposition is that he is probably a well-to-do young farmer of that vicinity, and had gone out hunting. His dog, which was in the bottom of the buggy, in some way caused the gun to go off. His condition is serious and his recovery is doubtful.

Small Claim Holds Steamer.

Chicago, July 27.—The failure of the Chicago South Haven Steamship Co. to pay a wage claim of $1 today, tied up one of the steamers of the company and involved the officials of the United States district court in an effort to effect a settlement of the case. The claim of $1 is made by Frank Jones, an 18-year-old Indianapolis boy who worked one day as a coal shoveler. Deputy United States marshals held the boat until the matter was adjusted.

Shot in Strike Riots.

New York, July 28.—Two men were shot and killed, four dangerously wounded and a score or less seriously injured in a riot of strike sympathizers today at the plant of the American Sugar Refining Co., in Williamsburg, where a strike has been in progress for a month.

Venire Ordered Drawn.

Chicago, Ill., July 27.—Circuit Judge Kersten, sitting in criminal court today ordered a venire of 100 drawn for Aug. 3 for the second trial of Lee O'Neil Browne. The trial will open Aug. 1.

ARRANGES FUNERAL.

And Then Nephew of Late Levi Zeiter Attempts Suicide.

Chicago, July 27.—Carver Remington, son of Samuel Remington and nephew of the late Levi Z. Leiter, who shot himself after making full preparations for his burial, is hovering between life and death here. The bullet entered Remington's breast, penetrating his lung and now is imbedded in the muscles of his back.

Disappointment over the result of several recent business ventures is said to be the cause of Remington's attempt to end his life.

HELD FOR MURDER.

Man Recently Shot by Valley City Hotel Porter Is Dead.

Valley City, N. D., July 27.—O. H. Hanson, the porter of the Hotel Butler in this city, will have to answer a charge of murder as a result of the death of Robert Seeford, who was shot by Hanson last Saturday in a row over some trivial matter in the hotel. The two had a dispute, and were not good friends when the trouble arose. Hanson alleges that Seeford came after him with a knife, when he drew his revolver and shot. The man died at the Valley City hospital yesterday.

WOODMEN'S DAY

AT STATE FAIR WAS LARGELY ATTENDED—PARADE WAS A FEATURE.

SAVAGE HORSES EXHIBIT

Dan Patch Was Driven an Exhibition Mile—Great Crowds Line Grand Stands and Fields—20,000 People Attend.

Fargo, N. D., July 26.—This was Woodman day at the fair and the members of that order turned out by the thousand. In addition to the big membership in Fargo, hundreds of Woodmen from all parts of the state were in evidence and the exercises at the grand stand were in consequence most interesting, being enlivened by speeches by the governor and other distinguished men in and out of the order.

The parade formed promptly down town and reached the fair grounds a little after 10 o'clock and proceeded at once to the grand stand where the speech-making took place. The stand was well filled, while several hundred occupied seats on the parade in front.

Ex-ayor W. D. Sweet presided at the meeting and opened the meeting with a gracious word of greeting.

Congressman Hanna was then introduced and in his happy manner gave the Woodmen and the Royal Neighbors a cordial welcome to Fargo and the state fair. He was most happy in his address and was heartily applauded at its conclusion.

At 3 o'clock Dan Patch, 1:55, king of racing horses was brought out on the track and made his bow to the admiring thousands. The great pacer seemed to enjoy the popular acclaim. He bowed to the grand stand while it fairly shook with the thunders of applause. The handsome pacer was then driven an exhibition mile.

Officials Stop Trains.

South Bend, Ind., July 26.—Although two attempts were made to derail passenger trains and one freight was partially burned by strike sympathizers, the Grand Trunk strike situation here today opened quietly.

As was the case Monday, union men engaged in other trades were at their employment and the mob was small and easily controlled. The attempts to wreck the passenger trains were unsuccessful, the obstructions in each case being discovered in time to avoid accident.

Rumors have been current that the trains running are not equipped with full crews, and railroad commissioners it is said, are coming here to investigate. One passenger, running from Port Huron, Mich., to South Bend, was stopped last night by Chief of Detectives Cassidy because it lacked the proper brakemen. Although the train ordinarily stops in the yards in the western part of the city, the officer would not permit it to go beyond the local depot. The distance is but two miles.

Trapped in Burning Hotel.

Belfast, July 26.—Fire swept through the Kelvin hotel here today, burning to death three employees, while several guests received frightful injuries. Five of the guests were dangerously burned and others are in a serious condition. Among those surviving, who suffered were Rev. Wm. John McCaughan, for nine years pastor of the Third Presbyterian church of Chicago and wife. The McCaughans were caught on an upper floor and in attempting to find an exit were terribly burned. Their escape through the usual exits being blocked, the minister and his wife finally threw themselves from an upper window. Both struck the pavement with great force and when they were removed to the hospital it was found that the skulls of both had been fractured. The condition of the two is critical.

Dr. McCaughan resigned his pastorate in Chicago in May, 1907 to become pastor of the May street congregation in this city.

To Suspend Grain Rates.

St. Paul, Minn., July 26.—The conference of the railroad commissioners of Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota at the state capitol ended abruptly today with the receipt of a telegram from Martin A. Knapp, chairman of the interstate commerce commission which said that the carriers will have a conference in Chicago tomorrow, and unless the proposed increase in the grain tariffs in the middle western states are voluntarily postponed to Nov. 1, they will be suspended by the commission.

New York Gets Relief.

New York, July 26.—Although five deaths attributed to the heat were early reported, measurable relief for the heat stricken New Yorkers was in sight today, after a night, which was one of the season's hottest, which was comforts tempered only by occasional fitful breezes. At 8 o'clock this morning the thermometer stood at 80 degrees, the air is much dryer and a twenty-two mile wind is blowing.

No Further Word of Crippen.

London, July 26.—The London police have received no word from the steamer Montrose, aboard which are two passengers suspected of being Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, wanted in London in connection with the disappearance of his actress wife, Belle Elmore.

Cubans Fear Insurrection.

Havana, July 26.—The government is much alarmed over an insurrection at El Caney, province of Santiago. Following a midnight council at the Palace troops were today rushed to the disaffected districts. The insurgents are reported as retreating to the hills, pursued by troops already in the province. Last night the government learned that General Minnet and Colonel Jane, revolutionary veterans, had taken to the woods at the head of about a score of followers. Minnet is a man of influence, and it is feared that many malcontents will be rallying around his standard.

Troops Called in Street Car Strike.

Columbus, Ohio, July 28. — Not a street car has been running in Columbus since midnight and thousands were compelled to walk to get to their places of business today. The cars will not be started until two thousand troops of the National guard arrive today to enforce order during the strike of the street car men. The famous mounted troop A of Cleveland is among the soldiers called out.

NEW WHITE HOUSE OFFICE

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY TO THE PRESIDENT

LITTLE BY LITTLE President Taft has come into direct line with one of the Roosevelt policies, and he will follow it in the future as he has been following it for some weeks. It will be the rule at the summer capital at Beverly, Mass., as it is today the fixed rule of procedure in the White House.

The Roosevelt policy which President Taft finally has adopted as his own is the method of receiving visitors which was in force during the colonel's tenure of office. It is possible that President Taft never will be able to adopt the Roosevelt policy of getting rid of his visitors, because the two men are constitutionally different in at least one respect. It must be said, however, that the Roosevelt plan of receiving guests has done a good deal to save the tempers of White House visitors and the time of Mr. Taft.

As everybody knows, an addition was made to the White House offices some time ago. In the Roosevelt days callers went into the cabinet room and from there either were ushered into the adjoining room, where the president sat, or [illegible] Mr. Roosevelt came out and [illegible] of the cabinet room, speaking to [illegible] and getting through with them quickly and yet without giving offense.

Now President Taft has a circular room all to himself and outside the visitors are allowed the two big rooms [illegible]. It is from these rooms that [illegible] to the president's presence, [illegible] at a time, and not one at a time as was the case when Mr. Taft first took office.

The president has adopted the Roosevelt method of passing from visitor to visitor learning the business of each and trying as best he can to satisfy the caller and to get rid of him as quickly as possible and yet politely. President Taft, however, is so good natured and is so humanly interested in matters not connected with politics or legislation that of his own volition he lingers long frequently with individual visitors, and so while the method of reception hastens things in a measure it cannot offset the delay that comes from the president's apparent desire to have every guest put into good humor and to leave him with a smile in his heart."

At the outset of the Taft administration visitors saw him one at a time and the one who was talking to him did not feel the spur of haste which is now felt by the presence in the room of half a dozen or a dozen other visitors, all eagerly waiting their turn and occasionally shifting uneasily in their seats because of the time that the one who has the president's ear is taking up.

President Roosevelt, just as President Taft, was humanly interested in a great many things which did not affect public matter. For instance, if a well known sportsman called Mr. Roosevelt would perhaps talk to him for half an hour about big game hunting or the best way to reach the haunts of some wild creature which the colonel never had had the pleasure of meeting at the end of the gun. One of President Taft's hobbies is baseball, and every league team that visits Washington calls at the White House, where its members talk of curves, inshoots, drop balls and the best way to place hits, to the man who, weary of railroad legislation and tariff talk, is willing in spirit to sit on the diamond for a few minutes.

President Taft's good nature is proverbial. During the late spring and early summer in Washington school children literally by the thousands poured into the capital. It seems that in some cities the children of the high schools give entertainments during the winter and charge admission thereto. The money that is thus obtained is used to pay the expenses of the pupils to Washington. In cases where the children's parents are able to bear the expenses of the trip the money is used to pay the expenses of boys and girls who otherwise could not undertake the journey.

One day at the White House there appeared a delegation of 450 school children. The president had a number of appointments with senators and representatives and with prominent men from a distance. Notwithstanding this he told his secretary that the door should be thrown open and that the school children should be admitted. He not only made them a speech, but he shook hands with each one and had a word beyond the perfunctory "Glad to see you," to say to each pupil as he or she went by.

The story of the welcome which the 450 children had went abroad and for days the president's mornings were busy with the work of welcoming the pupils of schools from all the eastern cities. The children always are accompanied by several teachers, who chaperon them and make preparations for their sightseeing. As soon as they reach Washington the representatives in congress from the district or districts in which the schools are situated are called upon, and the congressmen in nearly every case lead the way to the presence of the president.

The wonder is if the country knows how much hard work goes on in the White House, not only in the president's office, but in all the adjoining offices. If anyone envies the private secretary his position perhaps he would throw envy to the winds after watching Charles Dyer Norton go through one day's labor. The assistant secretary works just as hard as does the chief secretary and in the office communicating with the room of these two hard-working men is a room filled with stenographers and clerks hard at work.

There is one White House clerk who has a most painstaking job. Invitations to the semi-public White House receptions of course are engraved, but as the name of each person invited must appear on the engraved ticket of admission which accompanies the invitation, one line of the ticket must be left blank because the engraving of 4,000 individual names, one to go on each card, would be an endless task and a tremendous expense. It is the duty of one of the clerks to fill in the names and to do it so that the writing shall look as though it were engraved. This he does in a way that deceives the ordinary eyesight. A card of admission to one of the White House receptions looks as if it were all the work of the engraver, so fine is the handicraft of the man who fills in the vacant line with the tracing of his ordinary pen.

About a year and a half ago the clerk who did this engraving died and it became necessary to find some one to take his place. It was supposed that this would be a hopeless task, or that at the best the services of a man must be obtained who after long practise might be able to accomplish what his predecessor so successfully had done. To the surprise of everybody the first cards of invitation that went out were just as deceptive as far as engraving and handwriting were concerned as were those that had gone from the desk of the man who for years had labored at the task and had arrived at a perfection which it was supposed no one without months of practise could reach.

One of President Taft's daily tasks is to sign the commissions of officers of the army and navy, and of men appointed to various positions in civil life. Of course commissions are for the most part engraved, but there are names and dates to be filled in and these are written deftly and then the pile of parchment is laid on the desk before the president, who frequently in a seemingly automatic way signs his name to commission after commission while carrying on with some visitor at his elbow a conversation relating perhaps to intricate matters of state.

The White House officials, secretaries and clerks have to concern themselves with all kinds of matters. Secretary Norton is the recipient of letters from people all over the United States, who write to the president upon the most trivial affairs.

When one takes into consideration the fact that hundreds of persons who have really legitimate business with the White House either call or write every day, it can be seen at once that the secretary's hands, time and mind are well filled. There are certain orders of rank which have to be respected, and in a democracy it is pretty hard work to convince the ordinary citizen that any man has the right of precedence. As far as precedent is concerned the president's audiences are governed by the supposed importance of the visitor's official business. For instance, if a senator is waiting to see the president and a cabinet officer happens to come in the member of the president's official family always will see President Taft first unless he says specifically that his business is of little importance and expresses a willingness that the senator shall get to the president ahead of him.

A newspaper man with whom President Taft has had frequently personal relations for some years went to the White House one morning and told Mr. Taft that he would like to see him alone for a minute if he could, and so the president took him into a side room and closed the door. They staid together talking for fifteen minutes and then the newspaper man went out into the president's main office, leaving the president behind him to write a letter in seclusion. On entering the president's office the caller met a senator who had been waiting for fifteen minutes. The senator is a jovial soul and with mock solemnity of spirit he bowed low to the newspaper man. "Would you mind going back to ask the president," said the senator, "if now that he has completed his affairs of state with a newspaper correspondent he will consent to see an humble senator of the United States?"

The ambassadors and ministers representing foreign countries in Washington are great sticklers for precedence and every known means has to be taken to prevent giving them offense. It is almost impossible for any human being except one or two of the state department officials, to keep rigid track of the rank of the diplomats and the attaches at all the foreign legations in Washington. So it occasionally happens that some second assistant secretary of the legation of the king of the cannibal islands is allowed to get into a room ahead of the first assistant secretary of the legation of the king of ballyhoo, and then there are black looks which if they could be put into words would be tantamount to a declaration of war against the United States.

The American officials in Washington life are not above being piqued if a junior gets in ahead of a senior, though troubles of this kind are confined as far as Americans are concerned almost wholly to social offenses, for senators, representatives, supreme court judges and the rest have finally made up their minds that at the White House one must take his chances of precedence.

Stag a Powerful Swimmer

The stag is not by any means afraid of the water, and when the necessity arises he is ever ready to give an exhibition of his swimming powers. Such a spectacle is not uncommon in the Highlands and excites little comment among foresters. The noble creature frequently takes to the limpid element in order to elude pursuit.

Only the other day a fine stag which had apparently been subjected to some molestation in the neighborhood of Melmsdale Harbor, Sutherlandshire, plunged into the sea and set his course oceanward. He swam lightly and rapidly and succeeded in placing two miles to his credit.

Two fishermen in a boat captured the animal, which unhappily was drowned while being towed ashore. It was a nine pointer and weighed about 18 stone. The occurrence reminds me of a similar incident which some four years ago came under my observation in the island of Mull.

A certain proprietor had ordered a number of stags from the south with the object of infusing some fresh blood into his ruddy herd. On arriving by steamer the animals were carted in their crates to the park assigned to them and where they were promptly liberated. One of the strangers was evidently much alarmed by his new surroundings and instantly made a dash for the adjacent shore.

Without a moment's hesitation he sprang into the water—which was at the time very choppy and intensely cold—and struck out gallantly for the nearest point on the mainland. The Sound of Mull, three-quarters of a mile broad, was duly negotiated, and after resting for an instant on the tangle covered beach the gallant creature tripped it lightly toward the rugged bens.—Country Gentleman.

GIRL WINS A FARM

Philadelphian Draws 160 Acres on Indian Reservation.

Outdoor Life and Larger Freedom of Undeveloped Country Appear Pleasing in Contrast With Environments of City.

Spokane, Wash.—Miss Mary R. Bloomer of Philadelphia, who won a homestead of 160 acres in the Flathead Indian reservation in western Montana at the government lottery, has decided to become a farmer. She is now at Missoula with her mother and brother, and says her father living at Philadelphia, and brother, a resident of Seattle, will join them in a short time.

Miss Bloomer did not journey from Philadelphia to the Spokane country merely for the purpose of registering in the land drawings last year at Missoula, Spokane and Coeur d'Alene. In fact, when she left her eastern home for a visit in the Pacific country she did not know there was any such thing as a land drawing in progress. She had not even heard of the Flathead reservation, and Montana was to her not much more than a name convenient in identifying a huge portion of the great American desert—a vast, unmeasured hunting ground for gun toting cowpunchers, savage Indians and wild things.

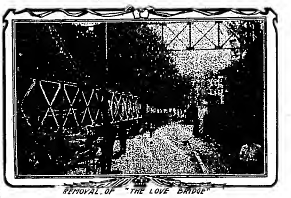
But, while stopping on the way to visit relatives at Leavenworth, Wash., her uncle mentioned the big land opening, and then and there it was determined that she would stop at Missoula, Spokane and Coeur d'Alene, and register. This was done, and in course of time Miss Bloomer received notification from Uncle Sam that she should have 341st choice among the Flathead farms in Montana.

Evidently Miss Bloomer was happy in the prospect of becoming a farmer in the eastern part of the Spokane country. Missoula she thought to be a most progressive and attractive little city; and she seemed to appreciate at its full value the exquisite beauty of its surroundings. She is impressed with the activity and optimism of the people and believes she will become as much attached to the west as she was to her home city.

"There is much to attract one in the northwest," she said, when asked why she left the east. "The outdoor life and the larger freedom and more vigorous atmosphere in this land of magnificent distances and opportunities possess a fascination that few can resist, and I believe I will become a full fledged westerner in a short time. It is true I am what you would call a 'tenderfoot,' and I do not know a thing about farming, setting a hen or milking a cow, but I am going to learn, and I feel I shall 'make good' with the best of them."

Miss Frances L. Loosmore of Hilyerd, a suburb of Spokane, who had 337th choice, filed on 81 acres, which, she says she will put into grain and fruit.

TEARING DOWN LEOPOLD'S BRIDGE



REMOVAL OF "THE LOVE BRIDGE"

BRUSSELS.—The people of Belgium are pleased to note that one relic of the dissolute life of the late King Leopold has been removed. This was the so-called "Love Bridge," which connected his majesty's palace at Loeken with the residence of Baroness Vaughan, whom he married secretly shortly before his death. The bridge crossed a handsome thoroughfare and was an eye-sore, in addition to being a reminder of Leopold's unworthy conduct.

Old Hiding Place Safer.

Bristol, Tenn.—After hiding $1,000 in $20 gold pieces for 50 years at different spots on his premises, John Hopper of Washington county, Virginia, two weeks ago secreted the yellow coin under the kitchen of his home. When he went to get the money the other day, to count it, it was missing. There is no clue to the thief.

Manufacturers of Crude Product in Mexico Form Organization.

Discrimination Is Alleged and Foreign Dealers, Especially in United States, Are Prejudiced Against Para Product.

Torreon, Mexico.—The manufacturers of crude rubber from the guayule shrub are forming a strong organization, which has for its purpose the fixing of the price that shall be paid for the product and to protect themselves against the discriminations which they allege is being practised against this kind of rubber in the principal markets of the world, particularly in the United States.

The guayule rubber manufacturing companies and individuals composing this new combine represent a capital aggregating about $65,000,000 gold that is now invested in the industry in Northern Mexico. The combined capacity of the manufacturing plants is about 300 tons of crude rubber daily. The reports of the different factories show that those located in the state of Coahuila alone has outputs aggregating $12,000,000 during the first four months of this year, and that this is to be still further increased by the erection of new factories of large capacity.

The chief concerns interested in the movement to improve prices and market conditions of the crude products are the Continental-Mexican Rubber company of Torreon, the Compania Explotadora Coahuilense of Parras, the Mexican Crude Rubber company of Viesca, the Compania Gandere de la Merced of Cuatro Cienegas, the Compania Guayulera de Torreon, S. A., of Torreon; the Compania Hulera Mexicana of Gomez Palacio, La Internacional Mexicana of Torreon, the Compania Hulera de la Laguna, S. A., of Torreon; the Compania Huayulera Nacional, S. A., of Gomez Palacio; the Compania Mexicana Explitedora de Hule of Torreon, Othan Kateerfeldt of Gomez Palacio, and Enrico Northoldt of Torreon.

The complaint of the manufacturers is that the foreign dealers and brokers in rubber arbitrarily fix a price on the guayule rubber considerably below that which is paid for the Parra product, and that of rubber trees in other parts of the world without regard to the relative difference in the cauchouic properties of the two products. The fact is cited that while the rubber tree product is accepted on a basis of 90 per cent. on its gross weight, an allowance of only 48 to 50 per cent. on its gross weight is made for guayule rubber. It is claimed that an analysis of guayule rubber shows that it averages 75 per cent. chauchou, the manufacturers being therefore deprived of practically one-third of the value of the product in its sale. When the Parra and other rubber tree products were selling for $1.25 a pound, offers of 80 to 90 cents per pound were made for guayule rubber.

It is the purpose of the guayule rubber combine to demand an equalization of the prices, which will place their product on a parity with that obtained from the rubber tree.

Presentiment Halts Hymen.

Allentown, Pa.—Through a mother's premonition, the elopement of Miss Julia Cutler, seventeen years old, of Lensford, and Michael Daniels of this city, was frustrated.

The girl came to Allentown some time ago to work, and falling in love with a man ten years her senior, made all arrangements for her wedding, even buying her trousseau.

The couple had planned to get married the other night. The mother, however, having some premonition, came on during the day and after rigid cross-examination, the daughter divulged her plans.

The mother objected violently, and with the aid of a policeman, took the daughter home, trousseau and all.

Will Make Spooning Legal

Asbury Park Police to Show Much Toleration and Allow Flirting Within Reason.

Asbury Park, N. J.—Oh, joy! "Spooning" is to be permitted at Asbury Park this summer, and flirting is to be tolerated within reasonable limits. This will be good news for the boys and girls who summer at that resort and who have heretofore found the restrictions irksome. Chief of Police Smith has said it. If a man flirts with a woman, the man will not be arrested if the woman reciprocates his advances.

Of course the police will interfere if they find any man forcing his attentions on a girl who does not desire his acquaintance. But the guardians of the peace positively will not interfere if any fair maiden takes the initiative and persists in flirting with a man. Smith figures that the men are able to take care of themselves in such emergencies, and he will take no action unless called upon by the man who is thus offended, or would you say honored and complimented?

The police chief's statement is tempered with a warning. Girls who flirt are to take all the responsibility to themselves.

"Spooning" will not be interfered with if done in dark places away from the public gaze. Smith says there are sufficient number of corners along the beach to accommodate all the spooners summering at Asbury Park and that "spooners" will not be molested if they keep out of public gaze and off the board walk.

The police chief says also that he and his men will be more lenient in the matter of bathing suits.

DICTIONARY FOR THE BLIND

Sightless Wizard Is Author of Most Wonderful Book—Printed in Braille Type.

Vienna.—A notable achievement for the benefit of the blind is the first French-German dictionary printed in Braille type. This work demanded an extraordinary amount of minute and laborious precision, and was carried out by Herr Karl Satzenhofer, who is himself blind, at the printing works of the Vienna Institute for the Education of the Blind.

It is the well known Legenscheidt dictionary which has been put into Braille type. The main difficulty was that in order to economize space the work had to be printed in what is known as the abbreviated type, which in France is different from the system followed in Germany, and called for an intimate knowledge of both systems on the part of the translator.

Aeroplanes at Army Meet

New Engines of Modern Warfare to Figure in Grand French Maneuvers in September.

Paris.—This year's grand maneuvers of the French army will take place between September 9 and 18 in the region between Rouen and Amiens. The operations will be directed by the generalissimo, General Tremeau, and General Michel of the army council will be chief umpire. The troops engaged will be the Second army corps under the command of General Picquart and the Third army corps under General Meunier, together with three battalions of chasseurs, the Paris Zouave regiments, the Fifth Colonial brigade and the First and, perhaps, also the Third cavalry division.

The composition of the two army corps will be on the basis of 30 battalions of infantry and 30 batteries of artillery to each army corps. Companies will be not less than 150 and squadrons not less than 100 strong. The artillery will be organized in four-gun batteries. Every appliance of modern warfare will be employed, and according to present arrangements aeroplanes as well as airships will be seen at work.

BOY IS BETTER FLY KILLER

In Contest Conducted by English Parochial School Girls Come Out Second Best.

London.—Stirred to action by the statement that the slaughter of one fly in early spring was responsible for the suppression of 1,728,000 in June, the headmistress of a parochial school in Wiltshire persuaded her pupils to do their utmost to exterminate these household pets.

The results of their efforts have been as follows: Twenty-eight girls killed 2,210 flies; twenty-four boys killed 3,150 flies.

The biggest haul of any one child was 275, secured by a boy; but the highest score of any one girl was 120.

In all, 5,360 flies are known to have been accounted for. Reckoning that every fly is responsible for 1,728,000 of its species, it is evident that these determined exterminators have saved the world from the presence of 9,262,080,000 flies.

Man Has Slain 2,000 Bears

Veteran Western Hunter Also Has Remarkable Record of Shooting 3,000 Cougars.

Spokane, Wash.—Tom Hopper, who has killed more than 2,000 bears in California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and the province of British Columbia in the last 35 years, has returned to his home in Spokane from Kingston, Idaho, with the pelts of four bears, including the largest cinnamon bear ever killed in Idaho, and two cougars, the result of three days' work with a pack of hounds.

The big bear was killed on Pine creek, south of Kingston, after a lively battle, in which several of the dogs were severely pawed. The hounds were game, however, and stood their ground till Hopper reach the scene and dispatched the big fellow with a head shot. The other three bears and the cougars were bagged without much difficulty, though Hopper admits that one of the black bears showed a lot of fight.

The veteran has killed several thousand cougars in the Pacific and northwestern states since 1890, his largest bag in one year being 739, killed in eastern Washington and Oregon and northern Idaho and southeastern British Columbia. Hopper confines his work to predatory animals, upon which the various states have placed a hand bounty.

It Wasn't.

The telephone call of a suite of apartments in a ladies' boarding house is 190. One young lady, a recent comer, answered the call and was astonished to hear a man's voice inquire hurriedly, "Is this one nine o?" When she could catch her breath, the lady who was a very proper young lady indeed, replied, "I think not. Were we ever introduced?"

$1.50 Per Year in Advance

The president and other apologists for the Payne-Aldrich tariff tell us the bill is a great revenue producer. If this is so we presume that the foreigner is paying the tax.

The recent resurgence of insurgency in Kansas and Iowa ought to stiffen the backbone of Moses E. Clapp. Lately the junior senator has shown marked symptoms of [illegible] heart.

The composite opinion of the Republican press of the state seems to be that an officeholder may be active in politics so long as such activity is confined to an advancement of the Republican end of the game.

During the last fiscal year, ending July 1, 1910, 1,041,570 immigrants came to this country. Among these were 223,453 Italians and 128,348 Poles. Only 38,392 Irishmen came over, against 52,198 Englishmen.

The Fairmont Sentinel says that the nomination of John Lind, with [illegible] the county option plank, means a greater realignment of the dominant parties in this state than the average man realizes. It is not necessary to go far anywhere to find Republicans who will not vote for Eberhart or Democrats who will not vote for Lind.

In the future analysis of the case of People vs Interests the late Democratic state convention will stand out as a turning point in the fight against the surrender of the politics of the state to the breweries and the other corporations. The nomination of John Lind by the country Democrats was notice that at least a majority of the voters of that party cannot be controlled by the special interests.

An important, a just and common sense supreme court decision was handed down last week by the supreme court of Minnesota. It holds that wholesale jobbers who sell adulterated foods to retailers are liable. This puts it up to the manufacturer to see that his product complies with the pure food laws. The practise has been to arrest and fine the retailer which was an injustice in most cases.

Now that we are to have a "seed corn day" by virtue of a generous dispensation of gubernatorial power, why shouldn't the governor insist upon having every day of the year devoted to some useful and patriotic purpose? For the guidance of a half million thrifty housewives let him designate Monday of each week as wash day. Then we might have a barn-raising day, a tax-paying day, and a snipe-hunting day. And, above all, why not devote Tuesday, November 8, to praise and thanksgiving for the vouchsafance of such a thoughtful state administration?

WHY HE ADVERTISES.

A prominent business man of Michigan explains why he advertises and why he uses newspapers for that purpose as follows:

"I advertise in the newspapers because I am not ashamed of my goods or my work and to let people know about myself, my store and my stock; because I cater to the intelligent class, and they read the papers, and I believe in increasing my business; because I can talk to more people through the newspapers at a greater distance in less time and at a more reasonable price than in any other way; because my newspaper advertising has brought me greater returns for the least expenditure of any advertising that I have done; I can [illegible] when I write an ad it is seen and read [illegible] I am not [illegible] stingy to pay for placing it in the best possible medium or to have it inserted so it is attractive; because I know my ad is seen and read by every one in the home where the paper goes."

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Olivia Times: If an editor published all items that are told him he would be in jail half the time and in the hospital the other half.

Fergus Falls Weekly: Admitting that Mr. Lind decides that he will not serve if elected, and that the state central committee is compelled to select a candidate to take his place, it is clear that the new man will enter into the campaign under much cleaner and better auspices than he would have done if he had been named in place of Lind at the convention, which, very clearly was not captured by "the liquor interests."

Fairmont Sentinel: The country delegations had their way in spite of the city politicians. They went down to nominate Lind and they nominated him.

Little Falls Herald: Some republican is quoted in the Twin City city Press as saying Lind would be "easy" because he was twice defeated for governor. As a matter of fact, John Lind was chosen by the people three times. In 1896 skullduggery and manipulation of the returns in certain parts of the state robbed the people of their choice; in 1900 the Lucas "Socialist-Democrat" deal did the job. In Morrison county alone many voted for both Lucas and Lind and the votes were thrown out. John Lind, although he did not serve, was really elected three times. This year will give an opportunity to confirm the popular choice of other years.

Auditor's Notice of Hearing on Petition in Ditch Proceedings.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss.
County of Red Lake. }

In the matter of the petition of Wm. G. Hunt and others, for a public ditch in the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, designated and numbered as county ditch No. 47.

Notice is hereby given, That a petition has been filed in the office of the County Auditor of said county, praying for the construction of a public ditch, designated and numbered by the county auditor of such county as county ditch No. 47.

DESCRIPTION OF MAIN DITCH.

Said ditch is located within the townships one hundred fifty two (152) and one hundred fifty-three (153), Ranges forty(40) and forty-one(41) and the lands over and through which it passes is as follows:

Commencing at a point twenty(20) feet east and twenty five hundred (2500) feet south of the quarter corner between sections six(6) and seven(7), Township one hundred fifty-two(152), Range forty(40), thence running due north parallel with and twenty(20) feet east of the quarter line in the center of sections six(6) and seven(7), to the town line between townships one hundred fifty-two (152) and one hundred fifty-three(153), thence extending due north parallel with and twenty (20) feet east of the section line between sections thirty-one(31) and thirty-two(32), township one hundred fifty-three(153), range forty(40) to a point twenty(20) feet east and twenty(20) feet south of the section corner between sections twenty-nine(29), thirty(30), thirty-one (31) and thirty-two (32), thence extending due west parallel with and twenty(20) feet south of the section line between sections thirty (30) and thirty-one(31) of aforesaid township and range to the range line between ranges forty(40) and forty-one (41), thence extending due west parallel with and twenty(20) feet south of the section line between sections twenty-five (25) and thirty-six (36), to a point twenty (20) feet south and twenty (20) feet east of the quarter corner between sections twenty-five (25) and thirty-six (36), township one hundred fifty-three(153), range forty-one (41), thence extending due north parallel with and twenty(20) feet east of the quarter line in the center of section twenty-five(25) a distance of forty three hundred and twenty-four(4324) feet where said ditch intersects with a coulee and follows said coulee in a northwesterly direction a distance of six hundred and fifty(650) feet to the Red Lake river, where said ditch terminates and has its outlet.

DESCRIPTION OF BRANCH NUMBER 1.

Said branch is located wholly within township one hundred fifty-two(152) range forty(40). Commencing at a point seventeen hundred(1700) feet east and twenty(20) feet south of the section corner between sections six(6) and seven(7) thence running due west parallel with and twenty(20) feet south of the section line between said sections six(6) and seven(7) to a point twenty(20) feet south and twenty(20) feet east of the quarter corner between said sections where said branch terminates and has its outlet in main ditch number 47.

DESCRIPTION OF BRANCH NUMBER 2.

Said branch is located within the townships one hundred fifty-two(152) and one hundred fifty-three (153), range forty-one(41). Commencing at a point eighteen hundred and fifty-four(1854) feet south of the southeast corner of section one(1), township one hundred fifty-two(152), thence extending due north parallel with and twenty(20) feet west of the range line between ranges forty(40) and forty-one (41), to a point twenty(20) feet west and twenty(20) feet south of the north east corner of the north east quarter of section one(1), thence due west parallel with and twenty(20) feet south of the town line to a point twenty(20) feet south of the north west corner of the north east quarter of section one(1) of aforesaid township and range, thence extending in a northwesterly direction over and across the south east quarter of section thirty-six(36) and the north east quarter of said section thirty-six(36) to a point one thousand and fifty(1050) feet south and twenty (20) feet east of the quarter corner between section twenty-five(25) and section thirty-six(36), township one hundred fifty-three(153) range forty-one (41), thence extending due north parallel with and twenty(20) feet east of the quarter line in the center of section thirty-six(36) to a point twenty(20) feet east and twenty(20) feet south of the quarter corner between sections twenty-five (25) and thirty-six (36), where said branch terminates and has its outlet in Main Ditch Number 47, as appears by the report of the engineer hereinafter mentioned and that the names of the owners of the lands and the names of the Municipal and other corporations that will be affected by the construction of said ditch as appears in the report of the viewers hereinafter mentioned are as follows, to wit:

Ione O. Rjenstad, Fred L. Ferley, Knut Olson, Gustav Swenson Swen B. Swanson, J. A. Duffy, Thomas C. Rome, Andree Anenson, Fred York, Hans S. Quam, Elvira C. Hoviand, William A. Swanson, Martin E. Hylend, Bennie P. Rustad, Ole Skreland, Mike Kolski, Charles W. Johnson, Clarence Hayford, Oscar E. Lillo, John Quirk, Daniel Sullivan, William G. Hunt, Annie Spokely, Walter McAndress, Kate O'Brien, Charley Clark, Frank Jeffers, Olaf H. Snoback, Even J. Lund, Jerry O'Brien, Annund Knutson, Julius Helvorsen, Andrew M. S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S. S. S. to any who are likewise afflicted.
MRS. LUCY GOODING
Pollock, La.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

PETITION FOR PUBLIC DITCH.

The undersigned, land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by or assessed for the expense of the construction of the drainage ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a drainage ditch along the following described route, in the towns of New Solum, Viking and Comstock, in the County of Marshall, State of Minnesota, the towns of Norden and Numedal in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota and the Towns of Helgeland, Brislet, Farley, Sandsville, Higdem, Brandt, Angus, Tabor, [illegible] and [illegible] in the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, and will also affect lands in the Town of Bray in said Red Lake county, and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility and is further necessary for the reasons that in seasons of high water, the surface water collecting upon the adjoining territory has no adequate means to be carried off and remains upon and adjoining the proposed route for said ditch hereinafter described for long periods, thus causing great damage to lands, public travel and health.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said drainage ditch and branches, is as follows:

Main Ditch—Commencing at a point at or near the center of Section 5, in Township 154, North of Range 43 West, in Marshall county, Minnesota, thence due south and along the quarter line through said section 5 and through section 8 to the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of section 17, in said township and range; thence due west along the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 17 and 18, in said township and Range, thence due west along the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 13, 14, 15 and 16 in Township 154 North, of range 44 west, in the County of Red Lake, Minnesota, to the north east corner of Section 17, in said Township and range, thence due south along the east side of the section line forming the west boundary line of Sections 16, 21 and 28 in said Township and Range; thence due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 32 and 31, in said Township and range, thence due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary line of sections 36, 35, 34 and 33 in Township 154 North, of Range 46 west, in Polk county, Minnesota, to junction with the coulee at or near the north west corner of section 33 in said township and Range; thence along the center line of said coulee in a westerly and south westerly direction through sections 33, 32 and 31 in said township and range, thence continuing along the center line of said coulee, in a westerly and south westerly direction through section 36 in Township 154 North, of Range 47 West, to a point at or near the south west corner of section 36, in said Township 154 North, of Range 47 west, to a point at or near the south east corner of section [illegible] said township and range, thence due west and on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary line of sections 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 in township 153 North, of Range 47 West; thence continuing due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary line of sections 1 and 2 in Township 153 North, of Range 48 west, to a point at or near the center of the north line of said section 2 where said boundary line intersects with County Ditch No. 7 as an outlet.

Your petitioners further represent and show to the court that the said County Ditch No. 7 is at this time too shallow and narrow to carry off the surface water in the immediate territory thereof, and is wholly inadequate in its present condition to adequately carry the surface water thrown into the same, and that the said ditch will be wholly inadequate to carry off the additional water that will be delivered by the said proposed ditch hereinbefore described, and that your petitioners pray that the said ditch be widened, deepened and straightened sufficiently to adequately carry off the surface water coming into it from the immediate territory thereof, and also and in addition thereto the water furnished by the proposed ditch hereinbefore described.

Your petitioners further pray that said County Ditch No. 7 be deepened, widened and extended as follows: along and on the section line forming the south boundary line of sections 35, 34, 33, 32 and 31, in Township 154 North, of Range 48 West, in said County of Polk, thence continuing along the said ditch and the course thereof and along the section line forming the south boundary line of sections 36, 35, 34, 33, 32 and 31, in Township 154 North, of Range 49 West to the south west corner of said last mentioned section, thence due west on the section line forming the south boundary line of sections 36, 35, 34, 33, and 32 in Township 154 North of Range 50 West, to a point where the same intersects with the Red River of the North, as the final outlet.

Your petitioners further pray that if in the judgement of the engineer it would be cheaper or more feasible or beneficial to all parties interested and concerned, that the said engineer be authorized and empowered to continue the said proposed ditch due north from the said south west corner of said section thirty-one in township 154 North, of Range 49 West, and following the course of the said ditch to where the same intersects with Judicial Ditch No. 1, and thence due west to a point where the same may be found to be of sufficient size to form an adequate outlet, and if necessary to the Red River of the North as a final outlet in lieu of the course heretofore described due west from the said southwest corner of section 31, Township 154 North, of Range 49 West to the Red River of the North.

Branch A—Commencing at a point at or about the center of Section 25, in Township 153 North, of Range 45 West, in Polk county, Minnesota, thence due north through said Section 25 and on the quarter line thereof and continuing on the quarter line through sections 24, 13, 12 and 1 in said Township and range to a point on the south side of the north boundary line of said last mentioned section 1, thence due west and on the south side of the north boundary line of said section 1, and of sections 2 and 3, in said Township and Range to a point on the south side of the north boundary line of said last mentioned section where the said line intersects with a coulee at or near the quarter line of said section; thence in a northeasterly direction and along the course of said coulee through section 34 and part of section 33, in Township 154 North, of Range 46 west to a point at or near the northwest corner of said last mentioned section where the said last mentioned coulee joins with the course of a certain coulee the course of which runs in a westerly and southwesterly direction from said northwest corner of said section, and which coulee is more fully described as a part of the description of the course of the main ditch herein, as an outlet for the said "Branch A."

Branch B—Commencing in the north west corner of section 16, in Township 151 North, of Range 45 West, being on the south and east side of the North and West boundary lines of the said section, thence due north on the east side of the west boundary line of section 9, in said township and range to a point on the south and east sides of the section lines forming the north and west boundary lines of said last mentioned section, thence due west on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 8 and 7 in said last mentioned township and range, and continuing due west and on the south side of the section line forming the north boundary of sections 12, 11, 10, 9 and 8, in Township 154 North, of Range 46 West, to a point in the northwest corner of said last mentioned section, South and east of the north and west boundary lines of said last mentioned section; thence due north and on the east side of the section line forming the west boundary of section 5 in said township and range to a point where the same intersects with the coulee running in a westerly and north westerly direction through said last mentioned section as an outlet. It is proposed that a greater portion of the said Branch B will empty into the first mentioned coulee, described as the outlet, and that a portion thereof will empty into the main ditch heretofore described at the point described at the commencement of said Branch B.

And your petitioners further petition and request that if better results can be obtained or greater benefit will accrue to the greater part of the area affected by such proposed ditch, by a different source, course or outlet for such proposed ditch, or any branch thereof, that the engineer appointed herein designate the same and that the court establish the same as designated by such engineer, and that the engineer designate and lay out such lateral ditches as is necessary and that the court establish the same.

And your petitioners further pray that in the order establishing the said ditch it be ordered that the bonds for the said ditch be twenty year bonds, and that the liens for benefits be ordered paid in fifteen annual payments commencing five years after the order establishing the said ditch.

Your petitioners further pray that you will proceed to establish such drainage ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter 230 of the General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1905, and amendatory acts.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS

Now, therefore, we the County Board of said county, at a special session held this day do hereby appoint Gilbert K. Haavi and Joseph Belair, and Alfred Lindquist three resident freeholders of said county, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of the county auditor of said county designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified, in the order of the county auditor aforesaid and shall proceed to view said proposed work and the land damaged or benefitted thereby: and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with said county auditor of said county within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefitted or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the county tax duplicates of said county and the description to be given in legal form) and the total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged, as the case may be, the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake, or the change of any water course and the location and value of such added land; the damage, if any, to riparian rights pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefitted or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains either in whole or in part any public or corporate road or railroad or benefits any such road so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and other particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefitted thereby, and amounts of benefits to each; they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch entire, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not, in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and if so, stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

M., of that day, at the office of the county auditor of Marshall county, Minnesota, in the court house, in the city of Warren in said county, the county auditors of Marshall and Red Lake counties will meet for that purpose and sell the job of digging and constructing Judicial Ditch No. 18 of Marshall and Red Lake counties, together with branches thereof, shown in the engineer's report all as established by order of the Judge of the District court of Marshall county, Minnesota. Sealed bids will be received at the said time for the work as one job, or for one or more of linear sections of one hundred feet thereof, as shown by the engineer's stakes, or for any portion of the said main ditch or branches, said work to be completed within the time required therefor, and in the manner specified in the said engineer's report. No bid will be entertained which exceeds by thirty (30) per cent, the estimated cost of the construction of the part of said work covered by said bid, and no bid will be entertained unless accompanied by a certified check on a State or National Bank for not less than ten (10) per cent of the amount of such bid, payable to A. G. Lundgren, auditor of Marshall county and A. A. Latendresse auditor of Red Lake county, Minnesota, said certified check of successful bidder to be forfeited to the said counties in case successful bidder fails to enter into contract and execute a bond as provided by law. The estimates, profile, blue-prints and specifications and plats or maps of the said ditch are on file in the office of the Clerk of District Court of said Marshall County, Minnesota, in the city of Warren in said County.

The approximate amount of work to be done in the matter of the construction of such ditch is as follows:—

Estimated number of cubic yards of excavation of main ditch and branches is 385,467 cubic yards of earth.

Estimated total cost of the work is the sum of $38,846.70 and for leveling roads $4,555.84.

Grape Fruit.

Grape fruit owing to its bitter principle was on its first introduction more of a curiosity than an epicurean delight. It is a fruit, however, that grows upon one. It is now generally accepted as a wholesome fruit valuable also for its medicinal virtues.

Owing to the high price of grape fruit it is not as commonly used as the orange. The most universal manner of serving grape fruit is to cut in halves and eat with a spoon. Served after standing on ice with a little sugar added there is no more appetizing breakfast fruit to serve.

Grape Fruit Ice.

Extract the juice from three or four grape fruit. Boil the rind in a quart of boiling water for 15 minutes. Make a syrup of two cupfuls of sugar and one of water and the juice of one lemon, cook until thick, add the water that the peeling was cooked in to the fruit juice and freeze.

Grape Fruit Sherbet.

Extract the juice from the desired number of grape fruit and add about two-thirds of a cupful of sugar and one-third of a cup of water for each medium sized fruit. Dissolve a tablespoonful of gelatine for six grape fruit. Boil the juice and sugar five minutes, add the dissolved gelatine and freeze. When half frozen add the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Serve with a preserved cherry on each dish.

Household Hints.

In the spring when apples grow tasteless add a little rhubarb to the sauce to give it a fresh taste.

Freshen a carpet by wiping with a cloth dipped in alum water, using one tablespoonful of powdered alum to six quarts of warm water.

Matting is freshened by washing in salt water. A tablespoonful of salt to six quarts of water.

Save the tea leaves from the tea pot to use on the carpet when sweeping.

Maple Custard.

Beat five eggs until well mixed, add half a cup of maple syrup, a dash of salt and three cupfuls of milk. Pour into a dish or mold. Set the mold in a dish on a folded newspaper or trivet, pour boiling water around and bake until the custard is firm. Serve cold.

"CONVERSATION is but carving.
Give no more to every guest
Than he's able to digest
Carve to all but just enough,
Let them neither starve nor stuff."
—Walter Scott.

Fish Chowder.

A delicious fish chowder may be made of any of our fresh water fish. Clean and boil them, removing the bones and skin, then shred the fish and add to the other ingredients prepared as follows: Fry out a piece of fat salt pork (half a pound, cut in dice), add half a dozen potatoes, sliced three onions and sufficient water to cover, cook until the vegetables are tender, add a quart of milk, half a dozen large crackers, butter and salt to taste. Serve hot.

It seems too bad that people living inland should not enjoy the fish chowders of the seashore; the fresh fish may take the place of the salt water fish and make a dish very little inferior to the coast chowders.

Date Pie.

Line a pastry plate with crust and cover the bottom well with well-washed dates from which the stones have been removed. Add a cupful of milk, a dash of salt, a grating of nutmeg and one egg well beaten, bits of butter dotted over the top and a quarter of a cupful of sugar. Bake in a slow oven until set.

Household Hints.

Rub the lumps of sugar to be used in hot tea or iced tea with lemon peel and you have a delicately flavored sugar which adds to the tea.

Equal parts of baking soda and salt dissolved in water and well rubbed in will relieve the pain caused by bites of insects.

Breakfast Hash.

Prepare any hash of meat and potatoes finely chopped and well seasoned, make a nest for each individual and in it place a nicely poached egg, sprinkle with salt, dot with butter and serve. A poached egg is much better in appearance if dropped into a greased muffin ring in the pan of water. Then remove with a skimmer.

Fricatelli.

Chop raw fresh pork very fine, add a little salt, pepper and two small onions chopped fine, half as much bread as there is meat, soaked until soft, and two beaten eggs. Mix well and make into patties, fry like oysters. Serve with slices of lemon.

Shall live to find his cross some day
Supported all along the way
By angels who are walking near."
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Care of Furs.

Furs are needed nearly the year around in our uncertain climate and many women do not put them away at all.

Furs that are often used need constant watchfulness and frequent sunning and airing. They should be kept in air-tight bags and hung where they will not be forgotten.

Very heavy long coats and furs, rugs and wraps should be sent to a professional packer. These firms keep them in cold storage and are carefully preserved from moths. Such furs should be carefully tagged, so that no exchange will be made. Where furs are packed at home, as most furs are, they should be well cleaned before putting away. A soiled spot is often the nesting place for moths. Rub dry bran or cornmeal into the durable furs and powdered magnesia into sable, ermine and chinchilla. When very dirty, meal may be mixed with gasoline before using. Do not rub too vigorously. Never hang on a line and beat, as such treatment will soon torn skins.

In brushing use a stiff brush, parting the hair evenly and getting at the felt. To remove any cleaning meal a man's hat brush is good.

Sun and air furs for several days before packing away. Brush with the nap of the fur. Small furs if wrapped in newspaper are well protected, as moths dislike the printer's ink. After wrapping in paper tie up in a thick cotton bag; a pillow case makes a good bag. A few cedar twigs put into the top of the bag or cedar chips may be used, but many successful furriers use no preservatives when using this method.

Washing Flannels.

Do not leave woolen garments lying about wet; it causes them to shrink.

Avoid extremes of heat and cold. Warm water is the best.

Do not dry the flannels in the sun or in front of a fire; they should not be allowed to steam.

Melt the soap to make a lather; never rub soap on flannel.

Squeeze the articles gently between the hands, but do not rub them; turn and repeat until clean. Rinse in water of the same temperature. Pass through a wringer. Dry in the open air.

"GOOD HABITS are the soul muscles—the more you use them the stronger they grow."

—Goethe.

Laundry Notes.

To preserve color in ginghams, soak them in a pail of water to which add a tablespoonful of kerosene an hour before washing.

To bring back the pink into a faded dress, use dark red crepe paper in the rinsing water and a little of the color in the starch, using care to strain the pulp of the paper out of the water. A dress will bear another washing before it will need to be dipped again.

Home Remedies.

Take common rock salt, dry in an oven and mix with spirits of turpentine in equal parts, put it into a rag and wrap it around the felon. As it drys put on more and in twenty-four hours the felon is cured.

For cold on the chest, wring out a flannel from hot water, sprinkle with turpentine and lay on the chest. Lard and turpentine in equal parts rubbed on the chest is also a fine remedy for a cold.

Sandwich Filling.

A very simple but good filling for sandwiches is made by chopping fine two hard-cooked eggs, add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter with a few drops of onion juice and season well with salt and pepper.

A Stag Dinner.

At a stag dinner given last year by a young woman for her husband and brother the decorations were so original as to be worth repeating here. In the center of the round table was placed a large cut glass tobacco jar filled with loose tobacco. On top of this was a little bisque doll dressed like a ballet dancer, with spreading skirts.

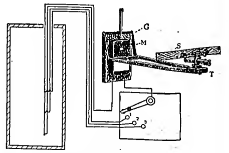
Corncob pipes were stacked at each corner of the table, and at each cover were tiny beer steins and little sample bottles of wine as souvenirs. The menu was a substantial one, such as men like. It consisted of bouillon, thick sirloin steak, with French fried potatoes, string beans, endive salad with Camembert cheese and wafers, a frozen fruit pudding and black coffee. This is an easy dinner to prepare and serve even without a maid.

APPARATUS FOR TESTING TEMPERATURE OF GRAIN

Heat Is Not Uncommon in Bins and When Elevator Man Can Locate It Many Dollars Can be Saved—How Done.



Apparatus for Testing Grain Temperature.

Grain stored in one large bin will often heat. A good many dollars would be saved if the temperature down in the grain could be known at any time. This has been made possible by the Zeleny thermometer, says Popular Electricity. About 90 years ago it was found that two metals, such as bismuth and antimony, if heated while in contact would generate an electromotive force and this principle, that of the thermo-electric pile, is used in this device.

In the illustration one wire of nickel-copper is run in a conduit for protection down into a bin represented at the left. At various points taps are taken off with copper wire. An ordinary galvanometer and scale is placed on the wall near a contact board on which the wires terminate. When the lever is in the position shown, all the circuits are open and the scale (S) is moved so that on looking through the telescope the scale is shown by reflection from the little mirror in the galvanometer. Then the lever is moved over to point (1), for instance, this places the galvanometer in circuit with one of the thermo-electric junctions down in the bin. A slight current will then flow through the galvanometer due to the heating of the junction and will deflect the galvanometer mirror so that the scale as you look through the telescope will appear to move over. The distance which it moves indicates the temperature of the junction, as the scale is calibrated to read in temperatures.

Silo Corn.

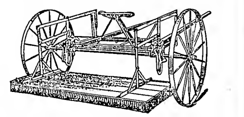
If for the silo the large growing kinds of corn that will mature sufficiently early are to be preferred, as a much greater amount can be grown on an acre, and the process of siloing will put the crop in excellent condition for feeding; but such are not usually the best for curing to feed dry, as there is a liability of being too much waste.

This crop should not be planted too thickly, but space allowed for air and sun, and a fair amount of ears will add materially to the value of the fodder. Plant in rows sufficiently far apart to admit of cultivation which should be the same as for that grown for the grain.

Cost of High-Grade Fertilizers.

Fertilizers of high agricultural value cost no more to bag, freight and handle than those of low agricultural value. It pays to buy and use the best fertilizers, that is, those possessing a high agricultural value, as results of their use show up not only on the first crops but on the crops following. They save freight, money, time, wear and tear on wagons, horses and drills, much disappointment and financial loss.

SUBSTITUTE FOR BUMBLE BEE



The implement here illustrated is a mechanical substitute for a bumblebee, and its purpose is to cross-pollenize clover.

The machine consists of a platform, the under side of which is covered with a myriad of minute fibrous fingers arranged like the bristles of a brush, says Popular Mechanics. The end of each fiber is covered with a rubber-like substance to which the pollen of the clover will cling.

When driven across a field, the platform, or frame, moves up and down, the little fingers reaching down into the heads of the clover. All that is required of the operator of the machine is to know when the pollen is in the proper state to be carried from one blossom to another by the machine.

The clover pollen, unlike that of most plants, is heavy and has a tendency to adhere to the heart of the blossom. The period in which the pollen can be carried from one blossom to another lasts not longer than two or three weeks. Consequently, it would take a vast army of bumblebees to carry the pollen from every head of clover to some other head, even in a small field. The pollen cannot be carried by the wind, and the bumblebees are disappearing, therefore, a machine to do the bumblebee's work is necessary.

Boom in Beet Sugar.

Beet sugar factories are now in successful operation in 16 states, Colorado, California and Michigan being the leaders in the order named. The largest of the factories handles three thousand tons of beets per day. They pay the growers $5.35 per ton and the acreage has increased to eight times the area of ten years ago. The business seems to be profitable for the growers and improves the market value of farm lands in the neighborhood of the factories. The by-products, pulp and molasses, are fed to stock, increasing the amount of cattle kept and fed in the factory districts.

Good Farming.

How many farmers know that air is as necessary to the soil as water.

It is not bad judgment for a hustling young farmer to go into debt for the farm machinery he actually needs, provided he takes care of it.

GOOD FARMING IS PROFITABLE

(By A HIRED MAN.)

The owner of our farm and another man besides myself and a sixteen-year-old boy as chore boy and messenger, farm 160 acres of land and farm it right too. In the spring we put four good horses on a riding plow or three on the big disk and keep them hustling along. We harrow mostly with four horses, because in this way one man and the team can cover nearly as much ground as two men and two teams. We hitch two horses to the drill and always use a two-horse riding cultivator for the corn.

When haying time comes we use a hay loader and a side delivery rake and the hay fork with the horse on the end of the rope makes the job comparatively easy.

Sometimes we help out a neighbor and he gives us a lift later. I notice that the boss always takes care of his own hay and grain first before he works out any trade. Somehow, he seems to be always a little ahead of our neighbors so that this arrangement works well. Our grain is always stacked, although some of our neighbors thresh right out of the field. This saves time, but our boss seems to think that wheat that goes through a sweat in the stack keeps better in storage. Our threshing is done by a man with his own machine and crew. So completely does the thresher men take this job off our hands that frequently only one man is left to our crew to check up the work done, while the other two are at work on another part of the farm.

Prevents Potatoes Sprouting.

Consul General Richard Guenther, at Frankfort, reports that a German publication, the Practical Adviser in Fruit Raising and Gardening, states that a new method for keeping potatoes and preventing sprouting consists in placing them on a layer of coke. Doctor Schiller of Brunswick, who has published the method, is of the opinion that the improved ventilation by means of coke is not alone responsible for the result, but believes that it is due to the oxidation of the coke, which, however, is a very slow one. Coke always contains sulphur, and it is very possible that the minute quantities of oxides of carbon and sulphur, which result from the oxidation, mixing with the air and penetrating among the potatoes, are sufficient greatly to retard sprouting. Potatoes so treated are said to keep in good condition until the following July.

Ingredients of Best Fertilizers.

The highest agricultural value in fertilizers is found in those that are manufactured mainly from animal matter, such as animal bone, dried blood, animal tankage, nitrate of soda and high-grade potash salts.

GATHERED SMILES

DECLARED OFF.

"When can you spare the time for our marriage, Marion?" the betrothed man asked.

The woman consulted her engagement book. "Three o'clock next Friday afternoon," she replied.

"Oh, that will be out of the question," he cried protestingly. "There's a special meeting of the Glitter Gold company that I must attend at that time."

"Well, it's the only time I have," she told him with an air of easy resignation. "Every other hour for the next two years is filled up."

The man jerked his shoulder irritably. "I guess we'll have to call our little matter off, then," he said.

"It seems to be inevitable," she agreed, indifferently.

And so they parted, for with some people marriage is but an incident, and an incident is, of course, too trivial to deserve the sacrifice of an event.

Reason For Doubt.

The obese party with the big diamond in his tie claimed to be a self-made man and a millionaire.

"But," we asked, "were you not happier when you were earning $1.15 a day by the sweat of your brow?"

"No," he answered, "I am happier now than at any previous stage of the game."

Thus were we led to doubt the millionaire portion of the claim.

THE HERO.

The greatest hero of them all
Is not the man behind the gun
Nor he that scales a flaming wall
To rescue some weak, helpless one;
He does not lead the rescue where
The ship is fast upon a rock,
Nor does he navigate the air—
He's playing leads in summer stock.

The maidens gaze at him and sigh,
He is the envy of the boys;
His step is proud, his head is high,

He's playing leads in summer stock.

BROOD MARES FOR PROFIT.

It is now costing the farmer about $90.00 a year to support a horse in Minnesota, according the statistics carefully kept at the Experiment Station. The necessity is apparent for the farmer to get into methods of handling his horses so they will return a profit, in addition to the work they do, "to pay for their board." It has been suggested by the secretary of the Minnesota Stallion Registration Board that the present average farm horses be at once converted into high class brood mares capable of raising a colt annually. The geldings should be sold to people whose business will keep them busy throughout the year and pay their owners a profit. Colts of high class brood mares will sell at the end of the second or third year for a sum sufficient to give the farmer a fair profit on his mare, while her labor will have paid him part of the cost of keeping through the idle season. The farmer needs a horse that will pay him a profit every day in the year.

The Home of the Cod.

There is just one other great cod bank in the world besides those off Newfoundland. It lies off Cape Agulhas, which is the southern tip of Africa, and south of the Cape of Good Hope. The Agulhas plateau is said to be almost a duplicate in size and richness of the north cod banks. But this is too far off, so there is little promise of its appeasing the hungry appetite of the world for cod.

How He Kept the Law.

"I noticed," said the friend-who-could-be-trusted, after a trip through the factory where preserves are made, "that a white powder is first put in the cans, and that the preserves are then put in the white powder."

"Yes," explained the proprietor to the friend-who-could-be-trusted, "that white powder is a preservative. You see we are compelled to put the preserves in a preservative because an idiotic requirement of the government makes it unlawful for us to put a preservative in the preserves."

Silenced the Critic.

Charles Sumner, when in London, gave a ready reply. At a dinner given in his honor, he spoke of "the ashes" of some dead hero. "Ashes! What American English!" rudely broke in an Englishman; "dust you mean, Mr. Sumner. We don't burn our dead in this country." "Yet," instantly replied Mr. Sumner, with a courteous smile, "your poet Gray tells us that 'Even in our ashes live their wonted fires.'" The American was not criticized again that evening.

A Knowing Girl.

When young Lord Stanleigh came to visit an American family, the mistress told the servants that in addressing him they should always say "Your Grace." When the young gentleman one morning met one of the pretty house servants in the hallway and told her that she was so attractive looking he thought he would kiss her, she demurely replied, clasping her hands on her bosom and looking up into his face with a beatific expression, "O Lord, for this blessing we are about to receive, we thank thee."—Lippincott's.

EPIDEMIC OF ITCH IN WELSH VILLAGE

"In Dowlais, South Wales, about fifteen years ago, families were stricken wholesale by a disease known as the itch. Believe me, it is the most terrible disease of its kind that I know of, as it itches all through your body and makes your life an inferno. Sleep is out of the question and you feel as if a million mosquitoes were stinging you at the same time. I know a dozen families that were so affected.

"The doctors did their best, but their remedies were of no avail whatever. Then the families tried a druggist who was noted far and wide for his remarkable cures. People came to him from all parts of the country for treatment, but his medicine made matters still worse. As a last resort they were advised by a friend to use the Cuticura Remedies. I am glad to tell you that after a few days' treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure in all cases.

"I may add that my three brothers, three sisters, myself and all our families have been users of the Cuticura Remedies for fifteen years. Thomas Hugh, [illegible] West Huron St., Chicago, Ill., June 25, 19[illegible]."

Tit for Tat.

Being of a literary turn and having [illegible], both Mr. and Mrs. Glippins contributed special articles occasionally to two different newspapers in the town where they resided. One day Mr. Glippins picked up a paper his wife had just finished, and proceeded to look it over.

"That's very good, Bertha," he said, after completing his inspection, "but I see you use the phrase, 'well known fact.' I wouldn't do that."

"Why not?" she asked.

"Well, if a thing is well known, why mention it?"

His wife said nothing in rejoinder at the time, but a few days later, while reading one of his articles in print, she found something to criticize.

"Horace," she said, "I am surprised to see you using the phrase, 'self-evident.'"

"What's the matter with that?"

"Why, if a thing is self-evident, what is the use of calling attention to it?"

Horace looked at her sharply over his glasses, but made no verbal reply.—Youth's Companion.

The Deacon's Parable.

A self-conscious and egotistical young clergyman was supplying the pulpit of a country church. After the service he asked one of the deacons, a direct, plain-spoken man, what he thought of his morning effort.

"Wal," answered the old man, slowly, "I'll tell ye in a kind of parable. I remember Tunk Weatherbee's first deer hunt, when he was green. He picked the deer's tracks all right, but he followed 'em all day in the wrong direction."—Housekeeper.

Advice.

"Father," queried Bob, just home from college, "you've worked for me pretty hard nearly all my life, haven't you?"

"That's right, quite right, son," said father, retrospectively.

"Well, sir," returned Bob, briskly, "I think you had better get busy and work for yourself a bit—eh, dad?"—Life.

The Modern Idea.

"And you don't love him?"

"No."

"Then why marry him?"

"Oh, I might as well. Every girl has to have a foolish marriage or two before she finally settles down."

"Not enough to make a living with, dad."

"Never mind. I'm going to leave you all of my jokes."

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with mysterious noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson told Miss Innes that she was hiding evidence from him. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. It developed that the intruder was probably a woman. Gertrude was suspected, for the intruder left a print of a bare foot. Gertrude returned home with her right ankle sprained. A man found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff button. Halsey suddenly reappeared. He said he and Bailey had left because Bailey had received a telegram. Gertrude said that she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him Halsey's loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of the Traders' bank, defunct, was arrested, charged with embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong had wrecked his own bank and was able to clear Bailey. A telegram received announced that Paul Armstrong was dead. Halsey trapped Mrs. Watson, the housekeeper, while she was stealing from the house.

"I reckon you bettah come in, Mis' Innes," he said, speaking cautiously. "It's got so I dunno what to do, and it's boun' to come out some time er ruther."

He threw the door open then, and I stepped inside, Halsey close behind. In the sitting room the old negro turned with quiet dignity to Halsey.

"You bettah sit down, sah," he said. "It's a place for a woman, sah."

Things were not turning out the way Halsey expected. He sat down on the center-table, with his hands thrust in his pockets, and watched me as I followed Thomas up the narrow stairs. At the top a woman was standing, and a second glance showed me it was Rosie. She shrank back a little, but I said nothing. And then Thomas motioned to a partly open door, and I went in.

The lodge boasted of three bedrooms upstairs, all comfortably furnished. In this one, the largest and airiest, a night lamp was burning, and by its light I could make out a plain white metal bed. A girl was asleep there—or in a half stupor, for she muttered something now and then. Rosie had taken her courage in her hands, and coming in had turned up the light. It was only then that I knew. Fever flushed, ill as she was, I recognized Louise Armstrong.

I stood gazing down at her in a stupor of amazement. Louise here, hiding at the lodge, ill and alone! Rosie came up to the bed and smoothed the white counterpane.

"I am afraid she is worse to-night," she ventured at last. I put my hand on the sick girl's forehead. It was burning with fever, and I turned to where Thomas lingered in the hallway.

"Will you tell me what you mean, Thomas Johnson, by not telling me this before?" I demanded indignantly.

Thomas quailed.

"Mis' Louise wouldn't let me," he said earnestly. "I wanted to. She ought to 'a' had a doctor the night she came, but she wouldn' hear to it. Is she very bad, Mis' Innes?"

"Bad enough," I said coldly. "Send Mr. Innes up."

Halsey came up the stairs slowly, looking rather interested and inclined to be amused. For a moment he could not see anything distinctly in the darkened room; he stopped, glanced at Rosie and at me, and then his eyes fell on the restless head on the pillow. I think he felt who it was before he really saw her; he crossed the room in a couple of strides and bent over the bed.

"Louise!" he said softly; but she did not reply, and her eyes showed no recognition. Halsey was young, and illness was new to him. He straightened himself slowly, still watching her, and caught my arm.

"She's dying, Aunt Ray!" he said huskily. "Dying! Why, she doesn't know me!"

"Fudge!" I snapped, being apt to grow irritable when my sympathies are aroused. "She's doing nothing of the sort—and don't pinch my arm. If you want something to do, go and choke Thomas."

But at that moment Louise roused from her stupor to cough, and at the end of the paroxysm, as Rosie laid her back, exhausted, she knew us. That was all Halsey wanted; to him consciousness was recovery. He dropped on his knees beside the bed, and tried to tell her she was all right, and we would bring her around in a hurry, and how beautiful she looked—only to break down utterly and have to stop. And at that I came to my senses, and put him out.

"This instant!" I ordered, as he hesitated. "And send Rosie here."

He did not go far. He sat on the top step of the stairs, only leaving to telephone for a doctor, and getting in everybody's way in his eagerness to fetch and carry. I got him away finally, by sending him to fix up the car as a sort of ambulance, in case the doctor would allow the sick girl to be moved. He sent Gertrude down to the lodge loaded with all manner of impossible things, including an armful of Turkish towels and a box of mustard plasters, and as the two girls had known each other somewhat before, Louise brightened perceptibly when she saw Gertrude.

When the doctor from Englewood—the Casanova doctor, Dr. Walker, being away—had started for Sunnyside, and I had got Thomas to stop trying to explain what he did not understand himself, I had a long talk with the old man, and this is what I learned.

On Saturday evening before, about ten o'clock, he had been reading in the sitting room downstairs, when some one rapped at the door. The old man was alone, Warner not having arrived, and at first he was uncertain about opening the door. He did so finally, and was amazed at being confronted by Louise Armstrong. Thomas was an old family servant, having been with the present Mrs. Armstrong since she was a child, and he was overwhelmed at seeing Louise. He saw that she was excited and tired, and he drew her into the sitting room and made her sit down. After a while he went to the house and brought Mrs. Watson, and they talked until late. The old man said Louise was in trouble, and seemed frightened. Mrs. Watson made some tea and took it to the lodge, but Louise made them both promise to keep her presence a secret. She had not known that Sunnyside was rented, and whatever her trouble was, this complicated things. She seemed puzzled. Her stepfather and her mother were still in California—that was all she would say about them. Why she had run away no one could imagine. Mr. Arnold Armstrong was at the Greenwood club, and at last Thomas, not knowing what else to do, went over there along the path. It was almost midnight. Part way over he met Armstrong himself and brought him to the lodge. Mrs. Watson had gone to the house for some bed linen, it having been arranged that under the circumstances Louise would be better at the lodge until morning. Arnold Armstrong and Louise had a long conference, during which he was heard to storm and become very violent. When he left it was after two. He had gone up to the house—Thomas did not know why—and at three o'clock he was shot at the foot of the circular staircase.

The following morning Louise had been ill. She had asked for Arnold, and was told he had left town. Thomas had not the moral courage to tell her of the crime. She refused a doctor, and shrank morbidly from having her presence known. Mrs. Watson and Thomas had had their hands full, and at last Rosie had been enlisted to help them. She carried necessary provisions — little enough — to the lodge, and helped to keep the secret.

Thomas told me quite frankly that he had been anxious to keep Louise's presence hidden for this reason: They had all seen Arnold Armstrong that night, and he, himself, for one, was known to have had no very friendly feeling for the dead man. As to the reason for Louise's flight from California, or why she had not gone to the Fitzhughs', or to some of her people in town, he had no more information that I had. With the death of her stepfather and the prospect of the immediate return of the family, things had become more and more impossible. I gathered that Thomas was as relieved as I at the turn events had taken. No, she did not know of either of the deaths in the family.

Taken all around, I had only substituted one mystery for another. If I knew now why Rosie had taken the basket of dishes, I did not know who had spoken to her and followed her along the drive. If I knew that Louise was in the lodge, I did not know why she was there. If I knew that Arnold Armstrong had spent some time in the lodge the night before he was murdered, I was no nearer the solution of the crime. Who was the midnight intruder who had so alarmed Liddy and myself? Who had fallen down the clothes chute? Was Gertrude's lover a villain or a victim? Time was to answer all these things.

Amazed at Being Confronted by Louisa Armstrong.

CHAPTER XIII.

Louise.

The doctor from Englewood came very soon, and I went up to see the sick girl with him. Halsey had gone to supervise the fitting of the car with blankets and pillows, and Gertrude was opening and airing Louise's own rooms at the house. Her private sitting room, bedroom and dressing room were as they had been when we came. They occupied the end of the east wing, beyond the circular staircase, and we had not even opened them.

The girl herself was too ill to notice what was being done. When, with the help of the doctor, who was a fatherly man with a family of girls at home, we got her to the house and up the stairs into bed, she dropped into a feverish sleep, which lasted until morning. Dr. Stewart—that was the Englewood doctor—stayed almost all night, giving the medicine himself, and watching her closely. Afterward he told me that she had had a narrow escape from pneumonia, and that the cerebral symptoms had been rather alarming. I said I was glad it wasn't an "itis" of some kind, anyhow, and he smiled solemnly.

He left after breakfast, saying that he thought the worst of the danger was over, and that she must be kept very quiet.

"The shock of two deaths, I suppose, has done this," he remarked, picking up his case. "It has been very deplorable."

I hastened to set him right.

"She does not know of either, doctor," I said. "Please do not mention them to her."

He looked as surprised as a medical man ever does.

"I do not know the family," he said, preparing to get into his top buggy. "Young Walker, down in Casanova, has been attending them. I understand he is going to marry this young lady."

"You have been misinformed," I said stiffly. "Miss Armstrong is going to marry my nephew."

The doctor smiled as he picked up the reins.

"Young ladies are changeable these days," he said. "We thought the wedding was to occur soon. Well, I will stop in this afternoon to see how my patient is getting along."

Some time about noon of that day, Wednesday, Mrs. Ogden Fitzhugh telephoned me. I have the barest acquaintance with her—she managed to be put on the governing board of the Old Ladies' home and ruins their digestion by sending them ice cream and cake on every holiday. Beyond that, and her reputation at bridge, which is insufferably bad—she is the worst player at the bridge club—I know little of her. It was she who had taken charge of Arnold Armstrong's funeral, however, and I went at once to the telephone.

"Yes," I said, "this is Miss Innes."

"Miss Innes," she said volubly, "I have just received a very strange telegram from my cousin, Mrs. Armstrong. Her husband died yesterday in California and—wait, I will read you the message."

I knew what was coming, and I made up my mind at once. If Louise Armstrong had a good and sufficient reason for leaving her people and coming home, a reason, moreover, that kept her from going at once to Mrs. Ogden Fitzhugh, and brought her to the lodge at Sunnyside instead, it was not my intention to betray her. Louise herself must notify her people. I do not justify myself now, but remember, I was in a peculiar position toward the Armstrong family. I was connected most unpleasantly with a cold-blooded crime, and my niece and nephew were practically beggared, either directly or indirectly, through the head of the family.

Mrs. Fitzhugh had found the message.

"'Paul died yesterday. Heart disease.'" she read. "'Wire at once if Louise is with you.' You see, Miss Innes, Louise must have started east, and Fanny is alarmed about her."

"Yes," I said.

"Louise is not here," Mrs. Fitzhugh went on, "and none of her friends—the few who are still in town—have seen her. I called you because Sunnyside was not rented when she went away, and Louise might have gone there."

"I am sorry, Mrs. Fitzhugh, but I cannot help you," I said, and was immediately filled with compunction. Suppose Louise grew worse? Who was I to play Providence in this case? The anxious mother certainly had a right to know that her daughter was in good hands. So I broke in on Mrs. Fitzhugh's voluble excuses for disturbing me.

"Mrs. Fitzhugh," I said. "I was going to let you think I knew nothing about Louise Armstrong, but I have changed my mind. Louise is here, with me." There was a clatter of ejaculations at the other end of the wire. "She is ill, and not able to be moved. Moreover, she is unable to see any one. I wish you would wire her mother that she is with me, and tell her not to worry. No, I do not know why she came east."

"But my dear Miss Innes!" Mrs. Fitzhugh began. I cut in ruthlessly.

"I will send for you as soon as she can see you," I said. "No, she is not in a critical state now, but the doctor says she must have absolute quiet."

When I had hung up the receiver, I sat down to think. So Louise had fled from her people in California, and had come east alone! It occurred to me that Dr. Walker might be concerned in it, might possibly have bothered her with unwelcome attentions; but it seemed to me that Louise was hardly a girl to take refuge in flight under such circumstances. She had always been high-spirited, with the well-poised head and buoyant step of the outdoors girl. It must have been much more in keeping with Louise's character, as I knew it, to resent vigorously any unwelcome attentions from Dr. Walker. It was the suitor whom I should have expected to see in headlong flight, not the lady in the case.

The puzzle was no clearer at the end of the half hour. I picked up the morning papers, which were still full of the looting of the Traders' bank, the interest at fever height again, on account of Paul Armstrong's death. The bank examiners were working on the books, and said nothing for publication; John Bailey had been released on bond. The body of Paul Armstrong would arrive Sunday and would be buried from the Armstrong town house. There were rumors that the dead man's estate had been a comparatively small one. The last paragraph was the important one.

Walter P. Broadhurst of the Marine bank had produced 200 American Traction bonds, which had been placed as security with the Marine bank for a loan of $160,000, made to Paul Armstrong, just before his California trip. The bonds were a part of the missing traction bonds from the Traders' bank! While this involved the late president of the wrecked bank, to my mind it by no means cleared its cashier.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Why He Did Not Come.

"Why didn't you come, Bobby, when I first called to you?" asked a mother of her six-year-old son.

"Because you told me last week, mamma," replied Bobby shrewdly, "never to accept an invitation unless it was repeated. So many people invite you once out of politeness but really don't want you to come."

The Mountains of Thessaly

Olympus is perhaps the most interesting of all mountains, and it is always within sight of Saloniki, on the Turkish side of the classic Vale of Tempe, which lies along the boundary between the two countries that hate each other with an everlasting and irreconcilable hatred. The Vale of Tempe has been famed for its beauty from the earliest times. In one of its glades once stood an altar to Apollo, to which the priests of the oracle of Delphi sent an embassy to make sacrifice every eight years in expiation for the slaughter of the dragon Python, which the "Far Darting" Apollo slew five days after his birth in the island of Delos.

Mount Pelion is only a little more than half as high as Olympus, the latter rising 9,754 feet above the level of the sea, while Pelion is only 5,308 feet; but Pelion is much more attractive, because it lies directly along the boy, with the waters washing its feet, and is cultivated almost to the very top. It is a long mountain, with a gradual slope, and on the side toward the sea 24 villages of whitewashed houses can be counted from the deck of the vessel, and they glisten like snow in the sun. They are scattered at various elevations, are connected with roads, which may be easily traced and are surrounded by fields, orchards and vineyards which produce abundant crops of corn and wine and oil.

Ossa is not particularly interesting, except for its association with mythological characters, and Shakespeare's famous lines, which are so often quoted. It rises 6,398 feet above the sea. It has a dome that is now covered with snow and is now the most prominent figure in a group of mountains which have been made famous by song and story.—Saloniki Letter to the Minneapolis Journal.

Immense Saving Possible.

In a preliminary bulletin on the cost of maintaining a tuberculosis sanatorium, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis announces that the average cost per patient per day in thirty semi-charitable sanatoria scattered in all parts of the United States is $1.669. These institutions represent an annual expenditure of over $1,300,000 and over 815,000 days of treatment given each year. The bulletin, which is part of an extensive study the National association is making for its bureau of information, points out that the country could save annually at least $150,000,000 if the indigent consumptives were properly segregated.

An Easy Fit.

A number of years ago there lived in northern New Hampshire a notorious woman-hater. It was before the day of ready-made clothing, and wanting a new suit, he was obliged to take the material to the village tailoress. She took his measurements, and when she cut the coat, made a liberal allowance on each seam.

The man's dislike of women in general prevented his having a fitting. He took the finished garment without trying it on. It was much too large, and his disgust was apparent in the answer he made to the friendly loafer on his first visit to the post office, when he wore the despised article.

"Got a new coat, Obed?" said the loafer.

"No, I hain't!" said Obed. "I've got seven yards of cloth wrapped round me."—Youth's Companion.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Prest., Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. Castner had visited in Red Lake Falls and friends here will be pained to learn of her death.

About thirty of the business and professional men of the city gave a banquet at Paul's Hotel last evening for the officers of the Red Lake Falls Milling company, S. M. Sivertson who has moved to his new home at Crookston and J. J. Padden who is soon to leave. It was a glad and a sad affair. It was a delight to honor two such good fellows as Sivertson and Padden, but the change in the affairs of these good men that necessitates their leave taking causes sincere regret. Mrs. Paul provided an excellent banquet and then the oratory flowed spontaneously for everybody wanted to tell how he prized the friendship of the guests of honor and express regret that Red Lake Falls is to lose two such clean, public spirited citizens and two such estimable families. It is a real loss. The many friends of the Sivertsons and Paddens will be glad that they are going to a nearby city and that there will be many things in which they and the people here will have a common interest.

Dr. I. Lemieux arrived Tuesday from the west after having been gone three weeks. The doctor spent a very pleasant vacation. The first point at which he stopped was Black Bear, Idaho. Accompanied by his son and nephew, who reside at that place, and by a guide, he went for a five days tramp through the mountains indulging in trout fishing and other forms of recreation common in a mountainous country. The doctor says he had as much fun as any kid could have. On his return trip he stopped at North Yakima, Wash., for a visit with former Red Lake Falls and Red Lake county people residing there.

On Monday evening, August 8, the local M. B. A. lodge gave a presentation and dance, the object of which was to present a handsome gold emblem ring to Samuel Gibeau in appreciation of his services as president of the lodge for the past five years. The gathering was large and enthusiastic. The presentation address was made by Addies Longtin and Mr. Gibeau was escorted by Frank Brouillet and Moses Ducharme. The local lodge of the Modern Brotherhood of America is one of the financially strongest in membership of the city's fraternal societies. Under the able management of its president, Frank Brouillet, and secretary, Samuel Gibeau, as well as its other officers, it has been brought up to an enviable social and fraternal position. The recognition and appreciation shown its officers augurs well for the stability of the local lodge.

Schoenauer-Teeauson.

Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock occurred the marriage of Miss Zule Schoenauer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schoenauer, to Ole Teeauson of Crookston. Miss Ella and Mr. Jos. Schoenauer, sister and brother of the bride, were the attendants. Following the marriage ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's parents where a wedding dinner was served and a reception was held. The bride and groom drove to Crookston and took the train at that place for the twin cities and other points. On their return they will go to housekeeping at Crookston. Numerous friends in this city and vicinity offer congratulations and best wishes.

Read On And Reflect.

It will be observed that the good old home company, NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL LIFE sells insurance at a LESS rate than any company mentioned above, and its interest earnings are certainly as large, to say the least, as any of them.

What Do You Think Of This?

NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL LIFE has paid in policy claims during the past five years an average of $2,489 every 24 hours—as good as a gold check to some family every working day.

During the same time it has paid $1,807,825.04 in death claims and $1,851,440.85 to people who did not die. What do you think of that? How is that for a low mortality record? Can't YOU be a BOOSTER for your HOME company? Don't you want a policy in this great Minnesota company? Drop us a line, giving your exact age and we will send you all necessary particulars.

STILL ANOTHER LIE IS NAILED

Some Facts About Those County Road and Bridge Appropriations.

Weak Argument of Thief River Papers Knocked in the Head.

Half of the weak argument put up by the Thief River Falls newspapers has been an attempt to inflame the farmers of the county by claims that the road and bridge money of the county has been unfairly distributed. Whole columns have been filled with vague, general statements that this part or that part of the county had received more than its share. Figures were distorted and misplaced with deliberate intent to mislead the people. Now, when you catch a man lying in one of his arguments to you, do you put much faith in anything else he may say? A man who has to lie to prove his case, has a weak case. And to cover up the truth is as bad as it is to lie. They did not tell you that of the road and bridge money spent in the county since December 1st, 1907, nearly six thousand dollars was state money, sent here by the state and appropriated to its different uses by the legislature at St. Paul. What had the county board or the Red Lake Falls people to do with that? Nothing at all. Yet in their frenzied search for some lie to set the voters of the county against us, they lay it all on us. If we had one-half the power with which they credit us or were one-half as mean, we would have wiped Thief River Falls off the map long ago and stopped the fight.

Now, if you want to know what towns have received road and bridge money from the county treasury during the past five years, go to the county auditor's office and see for yourself. You will be received courteously and given plenty of opportunity and help to find what you want.

In 1905, the following towns received road and bridge money in the amounts set after their names: Plummer $200, Louisville, $100, Black River $50, Thief River Falls $150, Numedal $75, Lambert $100, North $200.

In 1906 the following towns received: Equality $100, Poplar River $200, Silverton $200, Lambert $100, Polk Centre $75, Terrebonne $250, Clover Leaf $100, Black River $100, North $100, Equality $100, Goodridge $100, Louisville $2,500, for bridge; Rocksbury $150, Sanders $100, Garnes $200, Poplar River $200, Bray $100, Numedal $75. Also the following further appropriations were made by the county board: Thief River Falls $100, Lake Pleasant $50, Emardville $200, Garnes and Mayfield $250.

In 1907 the following towns received: Red Lake Falls twp., $20, Thief River Falls $150, Star $50, Deer Park $250, Black River $100, Louisville $150, Mayfield $100, Polk Centre $75, Sanders $150, Garnes $150, Poplar River $250, Lambert $150. Also the following appropriations were made by the county board: North $200, Rocksbury $250, River Falls $200, Emardville $1,578, for bridge, Norden $150, Red Lake Falls twp. $200, Thief River Falls $1,000, Red Lake Falls city $250.

In 1908 the following towns received: Rocksbury $200, and $75; Emardville [illegible], Terrebonne $100, North $150, Lake Pleasant $150, Thief River Falls $500, Equality $200, Red Lake Falls city $775, St. Hilaire $46, North $125, Mayfield and Garnes bridge $1508, Lambert $185, Smiley $150, Reiner $100, Kratka $150, Gervais $200, Norden $125, Rocksbury $200, Polk Centre $200, Black River $200, Red Lake Falls twp., $200, Bray $75, Lake Pleasant $50, Terrebonne $50, Lambert $175. Also the county board further appropriated to Sanders $75, Highlanding $100.

In 1909 the following towns received: St. Hilaire $676, Poplar River $1500, Highlanding $100, Kratka $150, Terrebonne bridge $2075, Black River $200, St. Hilaire $20, Kratka $50, Mayfield $825, Thief River Falls $1000, Norden $100, Numedal $175, Silverton $200, Sanders $125, Lake Pleasant $150, Reiner $100, Rocksbury $200, Goodridge $200, Gervais, $150, Louisville $200. Also the county board made the following further appropriations: Star $100, Deer Park $100, River Falls $200.

Now, what about that distribution of money? Every part of the county received all that was coming to them. If your town received none it was because you did not need it or did not ask for it.

If you are a voter, read the list over and decide for yourself whether Thief River Falls has any cause to kick, or to ask you to do their kicking for them. Their whole campaign is one of spite and lies.

How long are you going to let them fool you?

Wait till they get Pennington organized. See how much road and bridge money you will get then, when Thief River Falls controls the county. They will use your road and bridge funds to build opera houses and lay out parks in the city of Thief River Falls.

ENDORSE THE JUDGES.

Bar Association Urge Watts and Grindeland for Re-election.

The bar associations of practically every county in the Fourteenth Judicial district have endorsed Judges Watts and Grindeland for re-election. All of the attorneys in Red Lake county have gone on record as favoring the re-election of the judges. It is a commendable move, one in line with the agitation for a non-partisan judiciary.

A car load of Italians are making headquarters on the sidetrack near the power house. They say they are here to "fight fire" which probably means that they are here to protect the railroad company's property from possible damage from forest fires along this line of road.

THREE MORE THIEF RIVERITES IN JAIL

Nine of Them Now and Not All of Them Have Been Caught Yet.

And That Means "Quite a Few" Taxes for Red Lake County.

Three more of Thief River Falls' best citizens arrived at the county jail, registered, and concluded to stay and watch us build the new court house. It is not known whether they were members of the county division committee at Thief River or not, but from the general cast of their countenances we have our suspicions. They look as though they would steal everything in sight.

The county jail is now overflowing. Nine crooks from the would-be county seat town draw their rations daily and are growing fat at the tax-payers' expense. Talk about taxes! Do you know that it is costing the tax-payers of the county about two hundred forty four dollars per month in board and jailor's salary to keep those nine gentlemen from Thief River Falls. And they aren't all caught yet. They have a pleasant custom up there. When a man is arrested, he is anxiously searched and if he has any money, complaint is made of violation of a city ordinance, and the city gets his money. But if he is broke, he has violated a state law and they send him down to board on the farmers at Red Lake Falls.

CAMPBELL-BOTTINEAU

Former Resident of Red Lake Falls Married Last Week.

George Bottineau, a former Red Lake Falls resident and known to nearly everybody in the country, and his bride are visiting with relatives in town. Mr. Bottineau and Miss Alice Campbell of Ardock, N. Dak., were married at Crookston August 16, at the residence of the clergyman officiating, Rev. H. C. Hodgson.

Mr. Bottineau is a son of the late Pierre Bottineau, the famous scout of pioneer days. As a boy he lived in Red Lake Falls for many years and he is now receiving the congratulations of his numerous friends in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Bottineau will remain here for a few days and then go to Bemidji where they will reside. Mr. Bottineau has been in the employ of a large lumber company for years and will be employed this winter as foreman of lumber camps.

Mrs. Nicholas Tolan.

Mrs. Tolan, wife of Nicholas Tolan of this city, died at St. Mary's hospital, Crookston, early Monday morning. Mrs Tolan had been a sufferer from rheumatism for many years and had gone to the hospital for treatment. Her daughter was with her at the hospital and Mr. Tolan arrived from Finch, N. Dak., where he had been employed, on Monday. Funeral services were held from St. Mary's Catholic church at Crookston on Tuesday, Rev. Fr. Wurm officiating and interment was in the Catholic cemetary at Crookston. Deceased is survived by her husband, five children and a number of other relatives.

PRAIRIES FULL OF BLACK BEAR-STORIES

And Some are Real Live Bears—And Some Dead Ones.

Several Killed in the Eastern Part of County Last Few Days.

From all over the Red River valley come reports of black bears being seen and killed.

Last week Walter Columbus and Purath brothers killed a black bear near the John Glass farm south of town. They weighed bruin after he was dressed and he tipped the scales at 125 pounds.

On Tuesday E. G. Busa made a trip into the eastern part of the county and he heard many stories of bears being killed. One farmer living in Deer Park township told him that eight had been killed in the vicinity of his farm within a week. While driving along the road Buse saw three or four men chasing a bear through the woods. The farmers out there told him that there are many bears, deer and wolves in the country. It is believed that the animals are taking to the prairie because of the forest and bush fires to the east. There is a shortage in the berry crop and bruin is hungry, so he takes to the good things on the farms. Nice, tender porkers especially are his delight.

During the past week a number of bears have been seen in the Badger creek country between this city and Terrebonne.

The people at T. Morveau's farm in Louisville, a few miles west of town, had a rather unusual experience with a bear Sunday.

Mrs. Morveau heard the pigs squealing in the pen. She ran out and arrived in time to see bruin jump over the pen with a hundred pound porker. Mrs. Morveau called to her husband who ran to the house to get his rifle. Mr. Morveau could not find a bullet for the rifle, so he ran after bruin and laced him over the head with the gun. The bear let go of the pig and got away but not until he had secured a mouthful of fresh pork.

None of the bears seen have made any attempt at attacking people, but because of the fact that none had been seen in the country for several years people have become quite excited over the bear stories.

HEALY AND OTHER STIFFS

Some Moss Covered Base Ball Dope.

Frank Sanders, the kid who played good ball in Marshall a quarter of a century ago, has been playing ever since, and is still playing on the Pacific coast. A dispatch in the Minneapolis Journal on the 16th says:

"Speaking of old baseball players and veterans on the diamond, Frank Sanders of Bickleton, Wash., is the oldest active player on the Pacific coast. He is the first baseman on the Bickleton team He fields his position, runs bases, hits the ball and annoys the umpire with much more ginger than most of the youthful members of the team. "Dad" Sanders began his baseball career in his home town, Marshall, Lyon county, Minn., when he was 14 years old, and played with an organized club every season save one since that time. He started in playing left field on his home team but his throwing ability became so noticeable that he was soon tried as a pitcher. In 1878 he joined the Sliver Stars of Winona, Minn., in the Northwestern league, composed of sixteen teams in the leading cities of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Dakota and Iowa. He pitched for them for four years. He returned to his home town in 1882 and played with Goldendale, Arlington, Ore., Bluelight and Bickleton, Wash."

This "Dad" Sanders is the junior of "Dad" Sanders of Marshall of twenty-five to thirty years ago, and both the kid and the old man were sports and athletes. They wore on what is known as the Patterson farm adjoining Marshall on the south and the old man was a trainer in athletics before coming to Marshall. He was a conspicious figure at all the sports on the county fair ground when located on the Van Fleet now Peniston farm. Old residents remember the old man as a sprinter, when he ran foot races with Dave Gamble and other would-be sports, always winning out. Frank, the kid, was long on the manly art, and made a reputation as a boxer, which was emphasized by the frequency of black eyes and bloody noses of many of the town boys who ran up against him. In those days Marshall had an invincible ball team, which made historic records with Watertown, Redwood Falls and other places. And young Sanders was in the team with Fred Healy, Ed. Healy, Billy Gwathmer, Jale Murray and other old stiffs, who could doubtless show the present Marshall team pointers of the game, especially if they could have "Dad" Sanders on first base.—Marshall News-Messenger.

Fred Brosseau, who left with his family this morning for Glaichen Alta., Canada, has bought the interest of N. A. Bray in the big hotel there which Bray owned with Eudore Brosseau. Mr. Bray cleaned up $20,000 in his 17 months stay there and is now taking charge of another hotel and buffet in a town 20 miles from Gleichen.—Crookston Times.

Contractor Johnson's Men Completed Their Big Job Today.

New Court House Will be Ready for Occupancy November 1.

The brick work on Red Lake county's fine new court house was completed today and such excellent progress has been made on all of the work on the building that there is little doubt that it will be ready for occupancy by Nov. 1.

Contractor Johnson's men have done excellent work They have been employed on the building since the last of May and they have made a conscientious effort to comply with the the conditions of the contract in every detail. The fine building will be a monument to their good workmanship.

The best St. Louis brick, and there is none better in the country, was used in the construction of the building. Though the people of Red Lake county will not have the largest or most expensive court house in the state, they will have something for the money expended.

It will be an imposing building erected on a site that cannot be surpassed and will be big enough and large enough for Red Lake county for several hundred years to come.

Contractor Brady and his men have been on the job all summer. The framework has been put in, the lathing is about completed and the roof is now being put on. The heating plant is also being installed and the contracts have been let for the electric wiring and the instalation of water-works plant and that work will be done in the course of a few weeks.

SOME WHEAT YIELDS

A Very Good Crop Was Harvested in Southern Red Lake County.

During the past few weeks several farmers residing near Red Lake Falls have threshed their wheat and the threshing that has been done indicates that the average yield in the southern part of the county will not be far from 20 bushels to the acre. That of course is a very good yield but what is just as gratifying is the fact that the grain is practically all of first quality, clean, plump and of fine color. It is believed that nearly every bushel will grade No. 1 hard or No. 1 northern.

In the country east of town there is some fine grain. On a large piece of ground Cadieux Bros got 27 bushels to the acre and on their home farm 23 bushels. W. D. Boyd, near Badger creek, got 25 bushels. E. Reopelle got 25 bushels. Frank LaPlant, living near Badger creek, 4 miles east, got 22 bushels.

P. B. Gaass went out into Gentilly Tuesday and at three places where wheat had been threshed yields of 20, 13 and 10 bushels to the acre were reported.

On a farm southeast of town Frank Hagel got 22 bushels an acre on a 40 acre piece. Frank Hovuld threshed 80 acres just north of the forty and got a yield of 14 bushels to the acre.

C. H. Martz has threshed the wheat and oats on his farm near St. Hilaire. The wheat went 20 and oats 40 bushels to the acre.

Other crops are not so good as the wheat, but they are far from failures, and the season is a very satisfactory one for the farmers of Red Lake county.

PLOTTING AGAINST CONSERVATION

Planning to Do Things to Roosevelt's National Conservation Plan.

Paul Pry's Comment About the Big Meeting In St. Paul.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, August 23—There is a plot on to queer the conservation congress, in so far as it was designed to advance the national conservation policy as outlined and inaugurated by President Roosevelt. It is part of a widespread conspiracy to discredit Roosevelt. The first move in the game was made last week when Theodore Roosevelt was turned down in New York in favor of Jim Sherman for temporary chairman of the state convention. It is the beginning of the campaign to re-elect Taft president in 1912. The "system" is at the back of it. The campaign in the northwest is in charge of the Hill interests. The Eberhart administration is one of the pawns these interests are playing with. The conference of western governors in Salt Lake City is where the second move is being made.

Where Tawney Got In His Work.

The governors who met there are frankly opposed to the Roosevelt policy of conservation. They belong to the Ballinger school. They make no pretense of being anything else. They knew they had no place in a genuine National Conservation Congress, for they don't believe in national conservation. They therefore did not intend to send representatives to the St. Paul gathering which they regarded as antagonistic to their interests. They relied on putting up the right sort of fight against the forces back of national conservation in congress at Washington and bring about ultimately the abandonment of the policy. Headway has already been made there. Mr. Tawney as chairman of the committee on appropriations, was able to cut off the funds which were used for educating the public in respect to the conservation movement. Bulletins and printed matter bearing on the subject of national conservation is no longer sent out to the newspapers all over the country, as when Pinchot was at the head of the forestry service. The public is no longer supplied with the information by which they were able to keep in touch with what was being done. That much, thanks to Mr. Tawney, has already been accomplished.

State Conservation Preferred.

The purpose of the Minnesota delegation which was sent to Salt Lake City was to get these western governors to send delegations to the congress in St. Paul antagonistic to the original purposes of the national conservation congress. The ultimate purpose is to capture the congress with the cry of state's rights. The interests concerned know where they are when they have only the state administration to deal with. They do not know what they may run up against if it becomes the settled policy of the national government to preserve for the use of the people the natural resources of the nation in the way of minerals, forests and waterpowers.

What the Schemers are After.

The merger roads are not merely scarcely primarily a great railway system. The iron holdings of the Great Northern almost, if not quite, equal in value the physical value of the transportation plant. So great are its other holdings that a separate corporation had to be created to care for them. Into the Lake Superior company, Limited, has been dumped securities representing natural resources of fabulous value acquired by the Hill interests. There are coal, iron and other mineral lands. There are forests. There are vast areas of agricultural land. Incidentally there are branch railroads leading to them. Similar convenient dumping grounds are provided for Northern Pacific properties of one kind and another. Naturally the Hill interests seek to perpetuate a policy by which these were acquired. Naturally, too, they see the advantage of co-operating with the Gugenheims and the Ryans and others interested in natural resources in the west and in Alaska not yet either exploited and appropriated. Naturally there is nothing for any of them in a policy of national conservation as outlined by Roosevelt.

The Fixers From Minnesota.

That is why Eberhart has been so busy for some time back. In Chicago they saw through his game. The national conservation leaders there showed the thing up. They wouldn't stand

PATNODE-RUBERTUS

Prominent Young People Married Yesterday Morning.

At high mass at 10 o'clock at St. Joseph's church Wednesday, August 24, occurred the marriage of Miss Carrie Patnode, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dolphis Patnode, to Mr. Andrew Rubertus. Rev. Fr. Fayollo was the officiating clergyman and the ring service was used. Miss Nettie Patnode, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Mr. Noel Delorme was groomsman.

The ceremony was witnessed by the relatives of the bride and groom and by a few invited guests.

At noon a sumptuous three-course wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Rubertus left on the five o'clock train for a short wedding trip. They will visit with Mr. Rubertus' relatives at Montevideo and in the twin cities and will return to Red Lake Falls early in September. They will be at home to their friends after October 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Rubertus are popular and estimable young people and have many friends who are glad of the opportunity to offer congratulations and best wishes.

WEDNESDAY LAST DAY FOR FILING

Only Thirteen Candidates Have Filed for the Primary Election.

All are Republicans—Contests For Only Three Places On the Ticket.

Next Wednesday, Aug. 31, is the last day for filing before the primary election and yet only thirteen people have signified their intention of becoming candidates before the primaries. All are Republicans and unless there are other filings there will be contests for the nomination for only three of the offices, judge of probate, treasurer and sheriff. Those who have filed and the nominations they seek are as follows:

County Treasurer—Harry E Ives, G. G. Kindseth.

Judge of Probate—Ira C. Richardson, Ben Christianson.

Sheriff—L. A. Nelson, Charles J. Fellman.

County Attorney—Wilhelm Michelet.

Clerk of Court—C. W. Johnson.

County Superintendent—H. F. Anderson.

County Auditor—Andrew Hanson.

County Surveyor—C. H. Martz.

Commissioner 1st. Dist.—C. A. Lindquist.

Commissioner 5th. Dist.—Joseph Pigeon.

The primary election will be a quiet affair, but there are going to be some independent candidates after awhile and the general election will be interesting enough so that the people of Red Lake county will not be deprived of their due share of campaign excitement.

Time to Quit.

A little girl was on a visit to her aunt and had enjoyed herself very much until Monday morning.

On this occasion she accompanied her relative on a rent collecting excursion through a poor district where her aunt owned some property. As is often the case, they were in many instances met with excuses for nonpayment, and the little lady's countenance, as for the ninth time she heard the remark, "I'm very sorry, but I can't give you anything today!" took on an expression of great disgust.

At last she could restrain herself no longer.

"Auntie," said she, "I think I had better go home this afternoon. I am quite sure my mamma would not like to know that you had taken me round such dirty streets begging!"

A Rejected Bid.

Eugene Walter, the noted playwright, had a visitor one afternoon at his apartment in New York. The visitor, a thickset young man in a shepherd's plaid suit and a red tie, said:

"Mr. Walter, I like your work, and I want you to write me a one act skit. I'm the Only Maunering of the Quag circuit, and I want a breezy, funny skit, but it must have a deep underlying feeling, the same as 'Paid In Full,' you know."

"What would you be willing to pay for a satisfactory skit of this type?" Mr. Walter asked.

"Well," said the Only Mannering, "if the skit suited me I wouldn't mind paying $10 for it."

"Ten dollars!" said Mr. Walter "Oh, dear, no! I can always borrow that."

BAD FIRE ON ED. GARCEAU'S FARM

House and Other Buildings Were Burned Sunday Afternoon.

Fire Occurred When Members of Family Were at Church.

There was a fire which resulted in a heavy property loss on Ed. Garceau's farm in Polk Centre township Sunday afternoon. No one was at home when the fire started and its origin is unknown. Some time before the fire was discovered the members of the family had gone to Louisville to attend church.

The fire was discovered by Game Warden Munch of Crookston who was out looking for "sooners." Mr. Munch whipped up his horses and drove over to the fire, having picked up T. P. Smidesang of Wylie on the way and the two fought the flames for quite a while before other assistance arrived. People attending church near by came to their assistance and that made quite a company of fire fighters. However, the fire had made much progress before the fire fighters had arrived and the property loss will be heavy.

Just a few articles of furniture were gotten out of the house before it was necessary to give up the fight on that building. The machinery was taken out of the sheds and the stock from the barns. Before the fire was under control the house, machine shed, machine shop and pig pens were burned.

There was a hard fight to save the barn. A straw stack near the barn caught on fire and frequently set fire to the roof of the barn and it was necessary to tear all of the shingles off the barn to save that building. Four large hogs were burned, but the rest of the stock was saved. The granary, barn and a few stacks of grain near the barn were saved.

Mr. Garceau's loss is a heavy one. There is some insurance, but it will come far short of covering the loss. Only two or three articles of household goods were saved and all clothing except what was worn by the members of the family was destroyed.

Lost Beyond Recall.

A fussy old Scotchwoman, travelling to Glasgow, seated in a corner of the railway carriage, was provided with an india rubber cushion for her greater comfort, but unfortunately, owing to the heat and continued pressure, the cushion suddenly exploded. The old lady was in despair, even to tears, over the misfortune to the windbag and again and again reverted to her misfortune.

"Tut, woman," said a commercial traveler in another corner of the carriage, "it's not worth making a fuss about. You will get it repaired in town for about 18 pence."

"It's no' that I'm vexed aboot—it's no' the price. That's easy sorted. But the last time that bag was blawn up it wis by Aunty Jean, almaist wi' her very last breath, an' that canna be restored!"

He Did.

"Excuse me, but does Walter Halter live hereabout?"

Thus the English tenderfoot, polite and timid, addressed himself to the grizzled native in the slouch hat and whiskered trousers.

"No," replied the native.

"Well, do you happen to know where I shall be able to find him?" politely pursued the Englishman.

"No!"

"Dear me!" The tenderfoot stood puzzled. "I must have lost my way. Perhaps you can tell me where Mr. William Bluff, popularly known as Grizzly Bill, hangs out?"

"I can."

"Where?"

"Right here! I'm Bill!"

"But," expostulated the tenderfoot, "they distinctly told me at the settlement that Halter lived within a gunshot of you."

"Well," responded Grizzly Bill, "he did."

Revenge.

Revenge is a naked sword.
It has neither hilt nor guard.
Wouldst thou wield this brand of the Lord?
Is thy grasp then firm and hard?

But the closer thy clutch of the blade,
The deadlier blow thou wouldst deal,
Deeper wound in thy hand is made—
It is thy blood reddens the steel.

And when thou hast dealt the blow,
When the blade from thy hand has flown,
Instead of the heart of the foe,
Thou ma'st find it sheathed in thine own.

BIG ORE INCREASE

MESABA RANGE PRODUCTION JUMPS 15,000,000 TONS IN SEVEN YEARS.

GOVERNMENT STATISTICS

Much Money Spent in Improving Region.—One-Half of the Iron Imports Come From the Island of Cuba.

Washington, D. C. — A great advance in iron ore production has been made in the Mesaba range in Minnesota, where the shipments have increased from 13,000,000 tons in 1902 to 28,200,000 tons in 1909, according to a report of the geological survey on the movement of Lake Superior iron ores.

In that region where the increase has resulted from the continued activity of the opened deposit and from the extension of the operations of the ore field beyond the Mississippi river, the expenditures for railroads, permanent mine equipment and explorations indicate a faith in its future. The Lake Superior iron ore represent about 80 per cent of the total iron ore production of the United States.

The Adirondack region of New York, from which eastern furnaces draw ore, has produced since it was opened over 100 years ago about 36,000,000 tons. There are numerous other fields supplying ore and during last year the foreign iron ores imported aggregated 1,700,000 long tons, which is the maximum quantity imported in any one year. Over one-half of the imports were from Cuba.

MOORHEAD MUST GO "DRY."

S. S. Comstock Says Washington Officials Stand Squarely by Order.

Moorhead.—Former Representative S. G. Comstock and Mayor Davy have returned from Washington, where they went to put before the Indian department on Indian affairs the financial condition of Moorhead, and the effect that the saloon closing order of Special Agent Johnson would have on the city.

In speaking of his trip Mr. Comstock said:

"The government is determined to stop the sale of liquor to the Indians and is taking drastic measures to reach this end. As far as the closing order goes, it is positive in its statement that the saloons must be closed. I have received no information from any source that would make me believe this order will not be enforced. No one could regret more than I the necessity for such a trip, but any one familiar with the finances of our city will comprehend its imperative necessity. The department is strongly prejudiced against Moorhead because of the undue proportion of saloons to the population, and the impression seems to be that the dealers in Moorhead have been engaged in the illegal sale of liquor to the Indians."

BLUFF IS GIVEN TO RED WING.

"Old Sentinel" Becomes Property of City; Will Be Park.

Red Wing.—After several years of agitation to save Barn Bluff for picnic purposes and prevent further quarrying, the "Old Sentinel," as it is sometimes affectionately called, has been donated to the city of Red Wing.

James Lawther, who now lives in Ireland and who recently donated $50,000 for the Y. M. C. A. building here, offered to buy the bluff for the city, giving other citizens the privelege to participate. Accordingly announcement was made that Mr. Lawther, the Bank of Pierce, Simmons and company, the Red Wing Manufacturing company and C. A. Beecher would jointly give the famous bluff to the city.

Barn bluff was once suggested as a state park because of its unusual natural beauty. There is much rejoicing over the happy outcome of the controversy which for some years threatened to disrupt Red Wing's unity. The Milwaukee road is said to have sustained a loss of $10,000 by discontinuing quarrying in response to the demands from the people.

CULPRITS ARE NOT FOUND.

Men At Large Who Dynamited Duluth Coal Dock.

Duluth.—No trace has yet been found of the men who attempted to destroy the new machinery on the Philadelphia & Reading coal dock in Superior by blowing it up with dynamite. Two explosions occurred, one coming just before midnight and the second at 12:35. They were distinctly heard even in Duluth, but the police were unable to locate them until after the second explosion.

He has been missing for a week, and the body was discovered by accident by woodsmen. Lackenberg has a wife and several children in Finland. He was about 25 years old.

ROBBERS LOOT A BANK

State Institution At Onamia Robbed of $3,000 in Coin.

Milaca, Minn. — Five burglars successfully blew the safe of the State Bank at Onamia, got between $2,500 and $3,000 in currency and escaped in a stolen rig toward Mille Lacs. It is believed they will try to elude their pursuers by crossing the lake.

J. H. McKenzie, lawyer and editor of the village newspaper, was passing the bank on his return from a night fishing trip when he was held up by three of the robbers who were standing watch outside. Thrusting revolvers into his face, they compelled him to halt and keep quiet, which he did while from inside the bank issued reports of the boring of the safe door and later the explosion.

A few minutes later the two safe experts of the robber crew emerged from the bank with their pockets loaded with money. With final and threatening warning to the editor to refrain from alarming the townspeople, the five robbers piled into a wagon, to which a spirited team was hitched and drove swiftly away.

Onamia is in Mille Lacs county, on the Soo Line and 30 miles from another town or railroad line. Owing to its isolated location it is believed detectives of Minnesota State Bankers' association and the Interstate Bankers' Protective association have more than a fair chance to apprehend the band.

As soon as the robbers had fled beyond pistol shot, Mr. McKenzie shouted the alarm to the townspeople. He then called J. H. McGilvre, president of the bank at Milaca, by telephone. The latter notified Charles R. Frost of Minneapolis, secretary of the Interstate Bankers' Protective association. Detectives were at once dispatched to the village.

The village marshal of Onamia was engaged in quelling a miniature Indian outbreak at the edge of town while the burglars were working on the safe. The Indians were drunk and fighting. It is believed the robbers provided the Indians with liquor so as to get the marshal out of the way.

ANDERSON OUTLINES CAMPAIGN.

Country Leaders Believe the Lanesboro Man Has Chance.

Albert Lea. — The insurgent Republicans assembled here, and the first gun in the campaign against Congressman James A. Tawney has been fired. Sydney A. Anderson of Lanesboro, Fillmore county, the candidate of the progressives was present, and made a stirring address to the assembled progressives, outlining what might be expected of him, should be be elected and also what sort of a campaign might be hoped for.

His business and campaign manager, O. M. Levang, the "original" insurgent, accompanied him and is enthusiastic over prospects for success at the primaries. Representatives were present from practically every county in the district and many of the committeemen reported great enthusiasm over Mr. Anderson's entrance into the field.

Thomas Frazer of Rochester, one of the most radical of the insurgents stated that in Olmsted county the dissatisfied voters had been only awaiting the entry of some good candidate to express their disapproval of Tawney, and that they had taken up with Anderson at once, and would support him to the last ditch.

He is confident that Tawney will lose Olmsted. Eugene Miller of Winona, is also delighted over Anderson's entrance and believes that they now stand a good chance to make deep inroads into Tawney's vote in Winona county. T. P. Kelley of Owatonna, who was originally urged to make the run, was present at the meeting and pledged his hardiest efforts towards the success of the progressives. He has canvassed Steele county very carefully, and is of the opinion that Tawney will lose the county by a considerable majority.

Campaign Short.

The campaign agreed upon is to be short and decisive. Anderson will speak in every voting precinct in the district and will conduct a whirlwind fight.

To those who have suggested that the time remaining is too brief, he cites the fact that Knatvold made but a three weeks' campaign and yet placed the Winona man in perilous danger of defeat. Anderson is himself confident of success, and will put in some strenuous days from now until after the primaries.

Papers to Be Used.

One of the first things that will be done, is to line up those papers which are opposed to Tawney and endeavor to conduct through them a liberal advertising campaign, the idea of Anderson being that as much publicity as possible is desirable.

Levang cited a long list of papers throughout the district which were to be counted as insurgent publications. The active campaign will begin the latter part of the week when Anderson will sound the keynote of his fight and will make public declaration of his platform.

EPIDEMIC ATTACKING CHILDREN.

Coleraine.—An epidemic of an unknown disease has broken out among the children of this village. Over a score are ill and four deaths have occurred since Sunday.

Physicians are puzzled over the disease and so far have been unable to diagnose it. They say it bears no resemblance to infantile paralysis, which was prevalent in several cities of the southern part of the state last summer, but is no less fatal.

Improvement in the Dairy Herd lies in better breeding, in better housing and in better feed in greater quantities. Corn fodder, clover and roots must succeed alough hay in winter, and old, weedy pastures must be broken up and sown to clover, blue grass and timothy for summer feeding. Systematic care, and feeding with only the substances which may be grown on every farm in Minnesota, is the practice at University Farm, St. Anthony Park, and is what gives the results reported from the Experiment station.

Weighing and Testing Milk.—This is the only sure way to determine the difference in value between the good and inferior cow. Weighing and testing daily is only a business proposition. It is the only safe way of determining what price to ask for a cow in selling her, or of what to pay for her when buying. No intelligent farmer will sell a cow for thirty dollars that will make him a net profit of $40 or $50 a year. Neither will he keep a cow that doesn't pay him a profit if he knows it.

FOREST SERVICE ASKS FOR TROOPS FROM THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

TAKE TURN FOR WORSE

Hot, Dry Weather Responsible for Fiercer Outburst of Flames—Small Fires in the National Park Under Way.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 11.—The forest service has called on the war department for aid to fight the forest fires in Montana. General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, has directed that a battalion of the Fourteenth infantry, now taking part in maneuvers at American Lake camp, Ore., be immediately ordered to Missoula for work.

White Fish, Mont., Aug. 11.—Forest fires in the Lally Lake region have taken a serious turn and now are burning more fiercely than ever after three days' of hot, dry weather. The smoke has been so thick that it completely obscured sun.

Livingston, Mont., Aug. 11.—The report that disastrous forest fires were burning in the National Park has been thoroughly investigated and it is learned that no fires of serious character are raging. Several small fires have been under way far from the route taken by transportation companies. These are now all under control. The fires are believed to have been started by lightning. The game is being driven into the valley's below the fire region, the animals apparently losing their fear of man.

Washington, Aug. 11.—Serious forest fires are raging on the Flathead Indian reservation in Montana and the situation of the Couer de 'Alene national forest in Idaho continues extremely critical. A telegram received today by Acting Secretary Pierce of the interior department from Superintendent Morgan of the Flathead Indian reservation reported that seven distinct fires were burning beyond control. The war department ordered troops to his aid.

THREE MEN KILLED.

Sad Wreck in Minnesota Ruins Much Merchandise.

Erskine, Minn., Aug. 11.—A very bad wreck occurred on the Great Northern one mile from Erskine last night in which three men lost their lives and an immense quantity of merchandise was practically ruined.

The train was west bound and in it were sixteen cars of merchandise for points in western North Dakota. The accident was caused by a kinked rail which caused the tearing up of seventeen full rails and a long stretch of track. Two of the dead men are strangers and supposed to be itinerants. The third is thought to be Henry Buelow of Erskine who sustained bad scalp wounds. Late this afternoon the track was not clear and a transfer system was being used for passenger trains.

It was the worst wreck on the Great Northern in northern Minnesota in years.

Steamer Gets Stokers.

Southampton, Eng., Aug. 11.—The steamer Adriatic sailed for New York punctually, somewhat to the surprise of the striking firemen, who were confident that the company would be unable to secure stokers.

The White Star line officials used a bit of strategy. Office clerks and other shore employes were put aboard the ship to help get up steam, after which the Adriatic gently dropped down the Solent and picked up 100 firemen who had been held in waiting off the Isle of Wight. The stoke-hole complement was thus made complete and the steamer proceeded under normal conditions.

Since the strike began on Monday, when the men demanded an increase of wages, up to the hour of sailing today, the White Star piers were guarded by a large police force, but there was no trouble.

Mine Workers in Convention.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 11.—Nearly 1,000 delegates are in Indianapolis today ready for the opening of the special convention of United Mine Workers, called by President Thomas L. Lewis, principally to discuss wage contracts and the strike situation in various districts.

No mention is made specifically in the call of the convention of dissensions in national order, but one clause states one object of the convention is "to take such action as is necessary to require the officers and members of the United Mine Workers to respect and comply with the authority of the international executive board."

Convict Recaptured.

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 11.—J. Jerome, a convict at the state penitentiary, sentenced to two years and nine months from Bottineau county for burglary, made his escape from the pen last night. He was captured a few hours later by Officer Buck. The officer found Jerome perched in a tree a mile from the penitentiary.

Jerome made his escape from the guards while coming from the hayfield with a number of other convicts who had been at work.

Inquest on Murder Victim.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 11.—The inquest into the death of William L. Rice, who was shot and killed near his home in Euclid Heights village last Friday, was begun today. The chief witnesses summoned were Doctors W. H. Phillips, and T. H. George, who found the body, and Special Policeman E. J. Wahl.

The manager of the club which Rice had left a few minutes previous to the killing, was called. The inquest is expected to throw light on the newly formed theory that Rice had an appointment to meet some one on his way home from the club.

Fined for Reviling Gaynor.

Pittsburg Aug. 11.—An echo of the shooting of Mayor Gaynor reached the police court of Pittsburg today, when a magistrate fined and sentenced Joseph McDonald charged with disorderly conduct, for making public announcement that the shooting of New York's chief executive was justified.

Antarctic Ship Overdue.

London, Aug. 11.—Considerable anxiety is felt for Captain Scott's antarctic expedition ship, the Terra Nova, now eleven days overdue at Cape Town. The vessel has not been seen since she left Maderia on June 27.

INSTRUCTS A COMMITTEE

STATE DRUGGISTS WANT THE PERMIT LAW REPEALED.

Resolutions are Passed at the Fargo Convention to That End—Officers are Elected for 1911.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 10.—The North Dakota Pharmaceutical association at its convention in Loyal Knights' hall, went on record as being opposed to the present permit laws of the state, which places the granting of a permit to sell intoxicating liquors in the hands of the district judges.

The question came up during a discussion as to what legislation the association would ask its legislative committee to look after at the coming session of the state legislature next winter. It was stated that the present law is unjust and discriminating, in that it placed alcohol and other spirits which are used as medicines in a class by themselves.

Almost as soon as the meeting was called to order this morning twenty-seven applications for membership were read and referred to the committee on membership and were reported on favorably this afternoon.

The election of officers took place at the meeting this morning and the officers are as follows:

President—A. B. Bell, Devils Lake.

First Vice President—H. R. Strehlow, Casselton.

Second Vice President—A. S. Sigurdson, Valley City.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. S. Parker, Lisbon.

Local Secretary—Robert McGrath, Grand Forks.

Place of Meeting 1911—Grand Forks.

Time of Meeting—First Tuesday of July, 1911.

Grand Forks was chosen as the next place of meeting, there was no opposition.

HOLDS HIS OWN.

Mayor Gaynor Is in No Immediate Danger.

New York, Aug. 10.—Mayor Gaynor continues to hold his own this afternoon and while his physicians have not pronounced him out of danger, they hope an operation to remove two fragments of bullets may be unnecessary. The mayor has been active in police reform. James J. Gallagher, the discharged dock employe, who shot the mayor, has been placed under constant guard. Fearing he may attempt suicide, his belt and suspenders have been taken from him and he is denied the use of a knife and fork, being fed with a spoon.

An encouraging symptom displayed by the stricken executive was the development of a pronounced appetite. The nourishment mentioned in the official bulletin was chicken broth. The patient had some difficulty in swallowing the broth, owing to the soreness of the muscles.

One of the first announcements made by the physicians today was that a consultation of all physicians would be held this morning when it would be decided whether an operation would be performed to remove the bullet. The X-Ray photographs last night showed that the bullet had split just after it entered the head. The mayor's physicians showed by their course through the night that they considered him in no immediate danger.

Police Strike Sympathizers.

Columbus, O., Aug. 10.—The fear of more serious trouble tonight in the street car strike here is openly expressed today in spite of the fact that Mayor Marshall says he can control the situation. The 200 special police sworn in to take the place of 3,000 soldiers who have left here, are declared to sympathize with the striking union street car men and many business men declare that they are utterly unable to cope with the strike sympathizers who bombard the cars with stones and bad eggs.

Indians on Stand.

McAlester, Okla., Aug. 10.—Little, if any evidence bearing directly on the Gore bribery charges was heard today by the congressional committee investigating the Indian land affairs. Many Indians who were summoned to testify concerning their attitude toward the McMurray contracts repeated the testimony of previous witnesses that they signed the contracts agreeing on a ten per cent attorney's fee because they were impatient at the delay of the government in selling their lands.

No Immediate Break.

Rome, Aug. 10.—Cardinal Merry Del Val, papal secretary of state, remains at his summer villa on Monte-Mario. His absence from Rome was construed as indicating that no immediate developments bearing on the strained relations between the vatican and Spain were expected. It was learned that the attitude of the holy see is unchanged.

Indict an Employe.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Thomas G. Lee of the dressed beef department of Armour & Co., was indicted today on a charge of perjury by the grand jury which is investigating the alleged combination of packers.

Steal Confiscated Beer.

Linton, Ind., Aug. 10.—Thieves broke into the jail here last night and stole twelve barrels of bottled beer, which had been confiscated by the city authorities in a blind tiger raid.

Disobeyed Orders.

Ignacio, Cal., Aug. 10.—Disobedience of orders, according to the railroad officials, on the part of a conductor was responsible for a head-on collision between a passenger and a work train on the Northern Pacific near here that took a known toll of eleven lives and resulted in the injury of about twenty. The unidentified bodies of three others are reported to be under the wreckage. The smoking car of the passenger train was telescoped by the engine of the freight and aside from the train crews who were hurt, all of the killed and injured occupied the smoker.

Killed in Hight Rent Strike.

Bari, Italy, Aug. 10.—Four persons were killed and several others wounded today during a clash between two troops and the participants in a general strike which had been organized in protest against high house rent.

Sixteen Men Indicted.

Columbus, O., Aug. 10.—Sixteen members of a mob at Newark, O., who participated in the riot which resulted in the lynching of Carl Ethrington on July 8 were indicted by a grand jury for first degree murder.

RELATIONS BETWEEN PORTUGAL AND THE VATICAN ARE STRAINED.

SPAIN GETS 6,000 RIFLES

Government Seizes Arms From Tug Chartered to Attend Demonstration —May Have Been For Carlist Uprising.

Lisbon, Aug. 8.—Portugal like Spain, is almost o the verge of an open rupture with the vatican, due among other causes, to friction over governmental censure of the Roman Catholic archbishop of Braga for suppressing Portuguese Franciscan newspapers without submitting the order to the Portuguese government for approval. Since the issue of the royal decree, July 12, nullifying action of the archbishop, the clerical forces, inspired, it is charged by Cardinal Merry Del Val the papal secretary of state, have been conducting a bitter campaign against the government on this account. At the same time the vatican has been raising difficulties about refilling diplomatic vacancies caused by the death of Senor Martin Dox Antas, the Portuguese ambassador to the vatican.

Danger also threatens the government from the side of the republicans on account of the refusal of the king to redeem the promise made by government of an amnesty for political offenders, including the assassinators of his father and brother.

Bilbao, Spain, Aug. 8.—Six thousand rifles were seized by the authorities today on board the tug which had been chartered to go to San Sebastian, where the great anti-governmental demonstration was proposed to be held yesterday, before the clerical leaders abandoned the manifestation. The local authorities at San Sebastian had held that the Carlists were planning to take advantage of the Catholic manifestation to start a movement against the government. No statement, however, is made as to which party to the conflict chartered the tug and loaded it with arms.

San Sebastian, Spain, Aug. 8.—The city continues tranquil, no further attempt at a demonstration having been made since the group of more hot-headed adherents yesterday gathered on the street with shouts of "death to Spain; long live the pope." The troops, however, will remain in the summer capital for several days.

The pope and Cardinal Merry Del Val received this morning from Spain many telegrams expressing loyalty to the Vatican in the conflict with Spain. The telegrams sought to encourage the Vatican to resist the anti-clerical movement in Spain.

May Use Soldiers.

Washington, Aug. 8.—President Taft has authorized the use of troops to fight forest fires in Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California.

The war department has ordered Maj. Gen. T. H. Barry, commander of the department of California, with headquarters at San Francisco, Brig. Gen. M. H. Maus, commanding the department of Columbia with headquarters at Vancouver barracks, Wash., and Brig. Gen. Walter Howe, commanding the department of Dakota at St. Paul, Minn., to hold the troops at all posts in their commands in readiness to fight forest fires.

The troops will be furnished as they may be requested by district officials of the national forests. Commanders of posts will be instructed to give immediate assistance in case of a call in their territory.

Fighting in Teheran.

Teheran, Persia, Aug. 8—The casualties in yesterday's battle in the city streets between the government and nationalist insurgents were about twelve killed and wounded on the government side. The nationalists, who were fighting under the leadership of Satar Khan, made famous by his long defense of the city of Tabriz against the forces of the deposed shah, lost thirty killed and wounded.

Three hundred of their number were captured in final assault which was made after their position in the northern part of city had been under fire from infantry and rapid fire guns during the entire afternoon yesterday. Bakir Khan, principal subordinate to Satar Khan was among the prisoners and was wounded.

Government Crop Report.

Washington, Aug. 8.—The average condition of corn crop on Aug. 1 as estimated by the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture made public with the general crop report today was 79.3 as compared with 85.4 last month, 84.4 year ago and 82.1 average on Aug. 1 for last ten years.

Average condition of the spring wheat on Aug. 1 was 61 as compared with 61.6 last month, 91.6 last year and 81.9, the ten years' average on that date.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Hurt.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 8.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who is making a political tour of western Canada, was slightly injured last night near Pense, Sask., as the train he was on collided head on with a freight. The fireman was killed and Laurier injured about the legs.

Prisoners Crowded in Cells.

New Orleans, Aug. 6.—A special to The Picayune from San Pedro Sula, Spanish Honduras, says that the jail there is packed with political prisoners.

It is said that in three small cells there are over 100 men, crowded almost to the point of suffocation. Some of the most influential natives are among the prisoners suspected of being implicated in the alleged movement to overthrow the government. Several suspects are said to have been severely tortured in an effort to wring confessions from them. The Bonilla expedition is reported to have been last seen in Guatemalan waters near Livingston.

Cholera Epidemic in Russia.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 6.—Russia's scourge, the cholera, continues to spread with most alarming rapidity, particularly in the southern mining districts, and in St. Petersburg, where the conditions are fast approaching the proportion of the great epidemic of 1908.

Figures furnished today by the central sanitary bureau show that in the week beginning July 24, there were 15,244 cases of cholera and 6,944 deaths. Of these 4,780 cases and 2,233 deaths were reported from the province of Yekaterinoslav and the territory of Don Cossacks in south Russia.

WEDDING REFRESHMENTS.

A sunrise marriage, followed by a porch breakfast is particularly adapted to a small company. For this early breakfast simple Arcadian fare is the most appropriate. Fresh berries on the stem, brook trout or fried chicken with water cress and creamed potatoes, waffles or baking powder biscuits with honey, and coffee fragrant and rich with thick country cream, will make a collation satisfying to all.

If a wedding takes place at noon, a wedding breakfast follows. A ceremony at four o'clock is followed by a buffet luncheon, which need be no more elaborate than an afternoon tea and still be in good taste. For a more formal entertainment the guests are seated.

A Wedding Cake Novelty.

If the bride is as fortunate as the one at a recent wedding, she may have a composite wedding cake. The bride's cake contained beside its usual ingredients, small portions of the wedding cake of the bride's parents, her sisters and brothers, as well as the silver and golden wedding cakes of the grand parents.

In the wedding cake which the bride cuts there is often hidden a ring, a thimble, a dime and a raisin. These are wrapped in paraffine paper. The one receiving the ring is properly supposed to be the next bride, the thimble foretells spinsterhood, the dime wealth in prospect, and the raisin an unannounced engagement.

Aside from the bride's cake, which may be either white or black fruit cake, everything is small and made so that it can be handled without soiling fingers or gloves. Usually the cakes are made in sheets, then iced and cut in squares, triangles or rubes. These may be decorated with candied cherries, mint leaves or violets.

While most brides prefer to cut their own wedding cake as a pretty touch of sentiment the fashion of distributing small slices of the cake, daintily boxed, is a prevailing one.

"I HAVE learned that success is to be measured, not so much by the position that one has reached in life, as by the obstacles he has overcome while trying to succeed."—Booker T. Washington.

BONNY CLABBER.

Bonny clabber is an old time dish that is worthy of revival, and is good at any meal. Allow good unskimmed milk to sour without disturbing it. After about the second day, dish it out in spoonfuls and serve with sugar and nutmeg dusted over it.

Nothing could be more delicious than Devonshire cream served either on berries or on the breakfast cereal. Scald rich new milk, at least two quarts, put in a cool place for the cream to rise. The next day remove the cream and serve on fruit or cereal.

Fruit omelets make a pleasant change for a breakfast dish. The fruit may be added to the omelet and cooked in it or served around it as a sauce.

For hygienic reasons it is well to have days throughout the summer when a meal may be omitted entirely or serve something very simple.

A favorite breakfast is composed of rolls torn open and toasted in the oven, then lightly buttered, to be served with coffee and a cold cereal in which some fresh fruit was stirred while hot, this to be eaten with cream.

For another breakfast try whole tomatoes that have been peeled the day before and placed on ice, season with salt, pepper and a little sugar and eat with thick cream and toasted bread.

Carrot Soup.

Wash young carrots, scrape them free from skin and cook in boiling water until tender. Press through a vegetable ricer, and to a cupful of carrot add two cupfuls of milk. Cook together two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter, combine the mixtures and cook five minutes. Season with salt and pepper and a little onion juice. Serve with a little finely minced parsley sprinkled over the top.

Hot Pineapple Compote.

Canned sliced pineapple heated in its own sirup and served with the game or meat course is another novelty, but one generally approved. The fresh pineapple may be served, but it should be cooked in a rich sirup and served hot.

Cherry Pie.

Line a pie plate with pastry, fill with sweetened cherries, put strips of pastry across in lattice work fashion, and bake. Just before serving, put little spoonfuls of sweetened whipped cream on each square and on each mound cream put a fresh cherry.

"EVERY one must have felt that a cheerful friend is like a sunny day which sheds its brightness on all around; and most of us can, as we choose, make of this world either a palace or a prison."—Sir John Lubbock.

THE FIRELESS COOKER.

The revival of the fireless cooker has passed through its fad stage and settled down to a practical necessary article. It hardly seems necessary to describe its construction and merits, yet there are many who have not acquainted themselves with its usefulness, as there are so many queries regarding it. One great beauty of the cooker is that any one may have one, for they may be made very satisfactorily at home. The manufactured cooker is more easily kept sweet, but one in my own kitchen, which has been in use three years is still in good condition. It is packed with crushed paper, and after cooking any odorous vegetable in it, it is taken out of doors and aired on the grass. The earth absorbs all odors in a very few hours.

The cooker above mentioned is made from an old trunk, a small-sized one. It is lined with several layers of newspaper, a partition of thin board put through the center, which makes two compartments. The utensils to be used in each are set in and the paper crushed and packed in by hard pounding. The dishes used should be fitted with tight covers, as the secret of a successful cooker is air-tight dishes. The nests made by packing the paper around the utensils permit their being taken out and put in easily.

Cushions of excelsior and hay cover each compartment tightly, and the cooker is ready to use.

For the proper cooking of meats there is no better device than this cooker, as it is cooked rapidly for ten to twenty minutes on the stove and then as it is put into the cooker and covered tightly it simmers for hours below the boiling point, the ideal way of cooking meat.

Rice and breakfast cereals which take long cooking, if boiled for ten minutes and put in the cooker are ready in a few hours to reheat and serve. Put the breakfast cereal in the cooker at night for breakfast and the fricassee at breakfast time to be ready for dinner.

As a practical convenience in the army it has been found invaluable, as the men have been provided with hot meals when a fire would reveal their positions to the enemy.

"ENJOY your goods as if your death were near,
Save them as if 'twere distant many a year,
Sparing or spending, be thy wisdom seen,
In keeping ever to the golden mean."

CHERRIES ARE RIPE.

The delicious cherry is one of our most satisfactory fruits for canning and preserving, as it keeps its color and flavor so well.

A well-tried recipe for preserving them fresh, if carefully followed, keeps them in such good condition that it is hard to tell them from the fresh fruit.

Pit the fruit and mix with equal bulk of sugar, let stand 12 hours, stirring occasionally so that the sugar is completely dissolved before canning. See that the cans are well sterilized and air tight. Fill them with the prepared fruit, seal and put in a cool cellar. The secret of keeping any fruit in this way is the low temperature.

Other fruits keep equally well, currants are especially fine canned in this manner. Any fruit canned without cooking is more desirable for salads and desserts.

Directions for Canning.

Fruit for canning should be fresh and ripe. If over-ripe the fruit is apt to ferment. Allow one-third its weight in sugar for canning, boiling the sugar with water to dissolve, cooking ten minutes before adding the fruit. By so doing the fruit is kept in better shape.

Cook a small quantity of fruit at a time, put into sterilized jars, fill with the boiling sirup to overflowing. If a spoon is inserted between the fruit and the jar the bubbles rise to the top and break. Screw the tops on tight and when cool tighten again.

To Sterilize Jars.

Wash the jars and fill them with water (cold). Set them on a trivet, and surround them with cold water. Heat the water gradually to the boiling point and fill the jars while hot. Put the covers into the water and let them scald five minutes. Dip the rubbers into the water before putting on the jars. New rubbers should be used each year. Care should be used that the rims of the covers are not bent, as the jars cannot then be hermetically sealed.

Nellie Maxwell.

SEASONABLE HINTS.

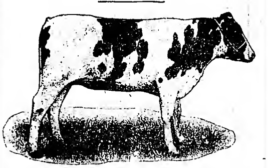
When going camping this summer the following suggestions may prove helpful. Dig a hole in the dry ground about three feet long, 18 inches wide and about as deep.

Build a good fire in the hole of hard wood, and let it burn to coals. While the wood is burning get the beans ready to bake. If parboiled first in a soda in the water it softens them more quickly. Turn the beans into the camp kettle, cover with boiling water and add a piece of salt pork, some salt and an onion, then cover tight. Clear a place for the kettle by raking the coals aside, then put it down in. Arrange a layer of ashes around the kettle to keep the beans from burning. Then heap the coals all round and over the ashes, and throw over all a foot of earth. In the morning you will find the most delicious kettle of baked beans.

Other things may be cooked as well. Chicken and game of all kinds is beautifully cooked in this manner.

SKIM MILK EXCELLENT FEED FOR DAIRY CALVES

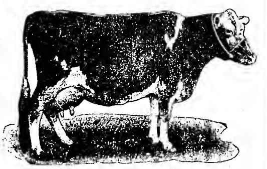
May Form Principal Diet of Young Animal for Eight Months or Year—Experiments Show It to Be Inexpensive.



Pure Bred Dairy Heifer Reared on Skim Milk.

The annual calf crop of Wisconsin amounts to about 2,189,600 head. The state has 2,576,000 head of cattle, of which 56 per cent., or 1,462,000 head, are milch cows. A herd properly managed ought to reproduce at the rate of 85 per cent. of its number annually (one calf to every 1.18 cows). This means 2,189,600 calves born in Wisconsin every year, of which 1,242,700 are from milch cows.

If the dams have been properly nourished the value of these calves at birth depends largely if not entirely upon the intelligence and skill exercised by their owners in their breeding. The future possibilities of the newborn calf, however, rest on the thought and skill that the owner puts into its feed, care and management. Mistakes made at this period of the calf's life are probably of lifelong influence, while a mistake in feeding and caring for a mature animal may be only temporary. By good feed and care, or the lack of it, it is easy to make a variation of $1 to $5 or even $10 per head in the value of the calf the first year. This means millions of dollars to the dairy farmers of Wisconsin. A difference of $5 per head would mean from $60 to $65 annually to every farm in the state.



Queen, Famous Wisconsin Cow Raised on Skim Milk.

The 1,242,700 calves from milch cows receive but little whole milk, and consequently must be raised on skim milk, buttermilk, whey, grain and roughage or some other substitute for whole milk. Of these calves 20 per cent., or 248,540, are from cows whose product is turned into farm butter, 50 per cent., or 621,350, are from cows that supply creameries and 30 per cent., or 372,810, are from cows that supply cheese factories. From this it will be seen that 70 per cent. of the calves from Wisconsin milch cows will have either farm or factory skim milk as a part of their ration and that 30 per cent. may have whey as a part of their ration in addition to whatever whole milk or milk substitutes are offered them.

Good calves can be raised on factory skim milk provided the creamery is careful to receive only good sweet milk so that the skim milk may be kept sweet until consumed by the calf. It should be borne in mind, however, that unless factory skim milk is heated sufficiently to destroy germ life it is not only difficult to keep sweet but it may spread disease, especially tuberculosis, to the calves and hogs kept on the farm.

It is much less work when the hand separator is used, and the calves are assured of a more uniform feed. The calves are usually fed immediately after separating, while the milk is still warm and sweet. This uniformity of condition and freedom from outside infection in the milk is exceedingly important, and the hand separator deserves much credit for making this possible and practicable.

Buttermilk is of practically the same composition as skim milk. There is little question if it has not the same feeding value as sour skim milk. Experiments show that calves fed buttermilk made good gains and may even be less subject to scours than those fed skim milk. Where buttermilk is fed special effort should be made to have its condition at feeding time as nearly uniform as possible.

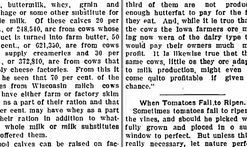
Iowa Cows.

The report of the recent Iowa Dairy Train says: "While it is true that there are a million and a half cows in Iowa, it is also true that at least a third of them are not producing enough butterfat to pay for the feed they eat. And, while it is true that if the cows the Iowa farmers are milking now were of the dairy type they would pay their owners much more profit. It is likewise true that these same cows, little as they are adapted to milk production, might even become quite profitable if given a chance."

When Tomatoes Fail to Ripen.

Sometimes tomatoes fail to ripen on the vines, and should be picked when fully grown and placed in a sunny window to perfect. But unless this is really necessary, let nature perform the work in her own way, as the fruit ripened on the vines has a richer flavor.

CONCRETE FOR SMOKE HOUSE



A handy arrangement of stove for smoke house is shown in the illustration, which can easil yhc made by trntion, which can easily be made by Haughton, in Farm Press.

A box form is placed outside the walls of smoke house and the concrete is filled around same, as shown by (a) in illustration; a box form is made for the flue or opening into smoke house as shown by (c); this is covered with concrete and is made in two sections, so it can be removed when the concrete has hardened; (d) shows the fire box or place where the fire is placed; (f) is an open space outside the wall of stove which ends in a small opening into fire box, to secure draft, which may be regulated by opening or closing this opening with a piece of tin. At (e) is shown the cover to fire box, which is a sheet of tin or sheet iron to close same; the line (g) shows the ground level which is also the floor of smoke house, while (h) shows the walls of smoke house and the method of placing the flue through same to extend into the center of floor and so place the smoke evenly on the contents.

This insures against any danger from fire and makes an everlasting as well as satisfactory stove for this purpose. The size depends upon the capacity of the smoke house and while the walls should not be less than two and one-half inches, for a small size they may be increased as the size of stove is increased.

Marketing Apples.

A man can earn $5 a day or even more, by sorting his apples for market.

After the apples have been sorted it is bad policy to put the little ones in the bottom of the boxes.

Apples in the same box should be as nearly the same size as possible.

If the big and little apples are packed separately the will bring more money than if mixed together with the biggest fruit on top.

Rat and Sparrow Clubs.

In England young people organize rat and sparrow clubs, the object to organize campaigns against these pests. In one small village the local club reported a slaughter of 3,838 rats, 839 sparrows and 614 moles.

When Hens Are Nuisance.

The farmer who says hens are a nuisance generally speaks the truth as far as his individual experience goes. His method, or lack of method, makes them a veritable nuisance.

Do not forget that a balanced ration is just as essential for poultry as it is for other livestock.

SMILES

HIS GOOD TASTE.

A young man contemplating matrimonial felicity took his fair intended to the home of his parents that she might be introduced to the old folks.

"This is my future wife," said the young man proudly, turning to paterfamilias, who was a canny Scot. "Now, father, tell me candidly what you think of her."

The old man eyed the blushing bride-elect critically for fully two minutes, and then answered with deliberation:

"Well, John, I can only say that you have shown much better taste than she has."

An Ultimatum.

"Let me see, Alice," said the old man to his eldest daughter, "young Blinkers has been calling on you regularly for six or eight months, hasn't he?"

"Yes, father," replied the fair Alice.

"Well," continued the anxious parent, "if he asks you to marry him when he comes tonight, tell him he wants to see me. Understand?"

"Yes, father," she rejoined.

"And if he doesn't ask you to marry him," added the old man, "just tell him that I want to see him."

A Good Reason.

She—How is it you were not at the West End's reception?

He—I stayed away on account of a personal matter.

She—May I ask you what it was?

He—Will you promise to keep it secret?

She—Yes.

He—Well, they failed to send me an invitation.—Judy.

Only a Partial Loss.

Mrs. Northside—Is it true that your little boy has lost his voice since his recent illness?

Mrs. Crosstown—Not entirely, but his voice has been reduced considerably. When he is carrying on a conversation with other boys now you can't hear him for more than five blocks.

How to Tell.

"How can you tell a smart man from a fool?"

"Well, when a man is always telling you how wonderfully smart he is that's——"

"The smart man?"

"No, the fool."

WANTED TO WORK IT, TOO.

Swipsey—Say, why wasn't yer at school ter day?

Jimpsey—'Cos I had er headache.

Swipsey—Say, how did yer make yer mudder believe it?

Dearer.

Dear heart, you're twice as dear to me
As what you used to be,
Since things have doubled up in price
You're twice as dear to me.

Her Dearest Pets.

"I have a heart-rending scene in my new drama."

"How now?"

"The heroine is in such reduced circumstances that she has to cook the canary."

"Sad, sad."

"But the worst is yet to come. She has to build the fire with the rubber plant."

Self-Consciousness.

"Is this silk of the latest style?" asked the man who had been appointed on a reception committee.

"The very latest," replied the obliging salesman.

"Then I don't want it. What I'm after is something new enough not to be shabby and old enough to look as if I were used to wearing it."

She Could Spare One.

"'Scuse me, ma'am," said the hobo to the lady at the front door, "can yous spare a pore beggar a copper?"

"Certainly," answered the lady and, turning to a speaking tube, she called: "Jane, send that policeman you have in the kitchen up here at once."

But the hobo was heating it up the nearest alley.

Blasted Hopes.

Mr. Stubb—Maria, do you remember that millinery store that had such a great display of fall hats? Well, there has been a fire down there and everything is reduced—

Mrs. Stubb—Gracious, what a chance for bargains! And everything is reduced, John?

Mr. Stubb—Yes, reduced to ashes.

If.

"If I were as rich as you are I wouldn't stay here to work and swelter."

"If I were as poor as you are I wouldn't have any object in staying here to sweat and worry."

Knew His Man.

His Wife—I'm afraid you are a little too severe with old Mr. Skinflint, my dear. You should treat him with the milk of human kindness.

Her Husband—Huh! He'd churn it and sell the butter if I did.

HOPE.

When all my life's unruly ways be trod,
And at Death's gate I stand to render toll,
When all my body is widowed of the soul
And this hot heart lies cold beneath the sod,
Oh, how shall I, uncovered and unshod,
Endure the tale of that recording scroll?
And where's the hyssop that shall make me whole
To stand unshamed before the face of God?

Yet, though through devious path and dark defile
I wander stumbling and with aimless feet,
Surely I yet shall find a meadow green
Where I may rest and breathe calm air a while;
Surely I yet shall find a river sweet,
To wash my limbs till ev'ry speck be clean.

Professor of Drawing—Miss Hectol, the primary teacher, told her pupils today that she was 22 years old.

Professor of History—Her statement doesn't agree very well with an answer she gave me once.

Professor of Drawing—What answer was that?

Professor of History—Why, she answered "Yes" when I asked her if she remembered the year in which America was discovered.

GENEROUS.

Mrs. Torker—I hear that your husband is very generous.

Mrs. Noowedd—Very! I gave him a box of cigars for a birthday present and he never smoked one of them. He gave them all away to his friends.

Idiot at the Breakfast Table.

"I hope you are satisfied with our table," Mr. Idiot," said the landlady.

"In the main, yes," replied the idiot. "But I really think I ought to register a complaint against yesterday's fish-balls, madam."

"Why, I'm sorry about that," said the landlady, blushing. "We rather pride ourselves on our fishballs. What was the matter with them, sir?"

"Mine had a distinctly fishy taste," returned the Idiot.—Harper's Weekly.

Perhaps He Gives It to Her.

"You husband's business is growing and making more money for him right along, is it not?"

"No, he is losing more and more money every day."

"You astonish me! You must surely be mistaken?"

"No, I'm not; every time I ask him for a dollar, he tells me how he is losing money."

Both Envious.

"There goes a man I envy," remarked Wedderly, "and strange to say, he also envies me."

"What's the explanation?" queried the party of the other part.

"We were both in love with the same woman," answered Wedderly as he permitted an open-faced sigh to escape; "and—and I married her."

Mrs. Styles—No; I was detained by sickness at home.

THE IMPORTANCE OF HEALTHY KIDNEYS.

Weak kidneys fail to remove poisons from the blood and are the cause of backache, headache, urinary troubles and dizzy spells. To insure good health, keep the kidneys well. Doan's Kidney Pills remove all kidney ills. Read what a physician says:

Dr. H. Green, 215 N. 9th St., No. Yakima, Wash., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills in my practice for years and they have given satisfaction. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills personally and pronounce them the best remedy I have prescribed in my long career as a physician and surgeon."

It Was the Other Way.

"Mr. Jones," said the senior partner in the wholesale dry goods house to the drummer who stood before him in the private office, "you have been with us for the past ten years."

"Yes, sir."

"And you ought to know the rules of the house. One of them is that no man of ours shall take a side line."

"But I have none, sir."

"But you have lately got married."

"Yes; but can you call that a side line, Mr. Jones?"

"Technically, it may not be."

"You needn't fear that having a wife is going to bring me in off a trip any sooner."

"Oh, I don't. It is the fear that having a wife at home you'll want to stay out on the road altogether!"

History Cleared Up.

The third grade was "having history." Forty youngsters were making guesses about the life and character of the Father of His Country, when the teacher propounded a question that stumped them all.

"Why did Washington cross the Delaware?"

Why, indeed? Not a child could think of anything but the answer to the famous chicken problem: "To get on the other side," and, of course, that wouldn't do. Then little Annie's hand shot into the air. Little Annie crossed the Delaware every summer herself, hence the bright idea.

"Well, Annie?"

"Because he wanted to get to Atlantic City."—Philadelphia Times.

Seeking Comfort.

"I've got a long way to go and I'm not used to travel," said the applicant at the railway ticket office. "I want to be just as comfortable as I can, regardless of expense."

"Parlor car?"

"No. I don't care for parlor fixin's."

"Sleeper?"

"No. I want to stay awake an' watch the scenery."

"Then what do you want?"

"Well, if it wouldn't be too much trouble, I wish you'd put me up in one of these refrigerator cars I've read so much about."

Only One Cobb.

The morning after Judge Andrew Cobb, a one time justice of the supreme court of Georgia, tendered his resignation, an Atlanta lawyer and a shoe drummer sat in the same seat in an outgoing train.

The lawyer bought a newspaper and looked over the headlines. Then he turned to the drummer and said:

"Well, I see Cobb has resigned."

"Gee!" said the drummer. "What will Detroit do now?"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

His Soft Answer.

"And this is the sort of excuse you put up for coming home two hours late for dinner and in such a condition—that you and that disreputable Augustus Jones were out hunting mushrooms, you wretch? And where, pray, are the mushrooms?"

"Eere zay are, m' dear, in m' ves' pocket; and w'ile zay ain' so many of 'em, m' deer, we had lots of fun—Gus an' I—huntin' 'em."

Attorney General Simpson has ruled that county auditors may receive affidavits of candidates for filing for the primary election ballot up to midnight of Aug. 31.

It looks as though Mayor Gaynor would be forced to take the Democratic nomination for governor. And this course is likely to make him the candidate for president in 1912.

There are some prosperous Indians in Oklahoma. It is said that a Chickasaw chief was able to deposit $75,000 a few days after McMurry received $750,000 in attorney's fees.

Thief River Falls city is a brilliant example of municipal financiering. The prospective tax-payers of the prospective county of Pennington can easily figure out the possibilities in tax rates and bond issues.

The governor and his staff are rusticating at the Isle Royal this week. And the Pioneer Press speculates on the possibilities if that Canadian should happen around to annex the island to Great Britian.

With Roosevelt attending the progressive banquet at St. Paul and James R. Garfield speaking against Congressman Nye at Minneapolis the conservation congress will not be without some political side issues.

Many of the prominent Republican newspapers of the state are urging the election of Thos. D. O'Brien to the supreme court. If the judges could be elected on their merits rather than of party designation there is no doubt that Judge O'Brien would head the list.

The Madison Independent Press expresses our sentiments when it says, "What's the use of blowing about Ballinger. Why not put the blame for his continuing to hold his seat in the cabinet where it belongs? Taft made him. Taft should unmake him. It is a matter for Taft to deal with, and if he doesn't, the voters should deal with Taft.

This is the year which, more than any of his years in the presidency, will make or mar Roosevelt, says the Little Falls Herald. He can encourage greatly the movement for political right doing, but he cannot stop it if he would. It has gone too far. The momentum is too great. Let us see Roosevelt use his tremendous influence on the side of La-Follette, Bristow and Cummins and he will have done greater good for his country than in any other way.

A city is but the larger family, says the Little Falls Herald. The streets, it has been well said, are but an extention of the home. And so the street should be made an extention of the home. That means clean, decent streets. When you invite a stranger into the home you know that cleanliness and decency is pleasant for him. When a stranger comes into the big family home called a city what must he think of the dwellers therein, to find some, perhaps many, parts dirty, unclean, uninviting? Clean your city, keep it clean, physically and morally, and the stranger will long to join the family.

Five Elections.

New York Times: Here are the figures of five national elections, in all of which, save one, the party in power lost the house of representatives in the "off year:"

1874—Republican majority of 102 changed to Democratic majority of 61.

1882—Republican majority of 8 changed to Democratic majority of 74.

1884—Cleveland, Democrat, elected.

Harrison, Republican, elected.

1892—Cleveland, Democrat, elected.

1896—McKinley, Republican, elected.

1910—If the Republicans lose the house of representatives?

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Hinkley Herald: It seems that when a number of men unite their capital and form a corporation serving the public and by doing so increase their power and at the same time they create agencies which create risks for others, they should be made to take all the risk ordinary and extraordinary involved and not the poor working man who under our present system of laws has very little, if any, recourse.

Winona Independent: Dr. Crippen should have taken his wife to Italy to kill her, and then made his way to the United States.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press: The party bosses are getting space in the newspapers telling of the death of the insurgent movement. They overlook the fact that the insurgent senators and congressmen are in earnest and the people back of them are in earnest. Their cause is the cause of truth. Our stand-pat brethren should not forget that never yet has a movement founded on truth and headed and backed by earnest men died a premature death. No, insurgency is not dead.

Pine Poker: The greatest "grafter" that ever entered the state penitentury has been liberated partly because of his ability as a "grafter." He horticultured his way into the hearts of the pardoning board by handing them a three-pound lemon, and the parole followed.

Little Falls Transcript: If pessimistic, change and become optimistic. If optimistic, become more so. It never pays to be glum, but it does pay to boost.

St. Cloud Times: It is rather noticeable that so far the "exposures" that are being made of politicians "higher up" in the Republican party it is always a "regular" and not an "insurgent" that draws the scare head-lines in the newspapers.

for it. Something else had to be done. Hence the delegation sent to the conference of governors at Salt Lake City. At the head of this delegation is Frank Kellogg, who as attorney for the United States Steel Corporation would naturally be expected to entertain views of a certain kind on national conservation. The Steel Trust is a great conservetor. With Mr. Kellogg is Ralph Wheelock, representing the governor, who is relied upon to follow carefully the instructions of those of the governor's powerful supporters interested in preventing the national government from butting in and interfering with their methods of aiding state conservation. Then there is J. H. Beek, the secretary of the Minneapolis Jobbers' association, and Reuben Warner, a wholesaler of Minneapolis.

The Pull of the interests.

Mr. Beek has been a persistent figure at hearings in this state before the railroad commission, the legislature and elsewhere as representing the St. Paul jobbers. The St. Paul jobbers have uniformly regarded their interests as identical with those of the railroads when these conflicted with the interests of the people of the rest of the state. That's where Beek has always lined up. Possibly the jobbers are not quite free agents. Indeed business interests in St. Paul are tied up pretty close to other interests. With these the banks cut quite a figure; and the influence of the Hills, the Weyerhaeusers and others likely to be affected by any genuine scheme of national conservation with the St. Paul banking institutions is a dominant one. If their support for any reason were withdrawn there would be various kinds of troubls. Naturally Mr. Beek, representing the jobbers, would be ready to take his cue from the Hill people.

The Man Who Talked.

Some months ago, on his return from the west, Mr. Louis Hill, who always talks when he can and not always as discreetly as his predecessor in the presidency of he Great Northern took a slam at conservation as practiced in the west during the Roosevelt regime. Shortly before that there had been large acreages set aside as government preserves, and a number of valuable waterpowers among other things as well as mineral deposits were affected when these lands were withdrawn from public entry. All this no doubt has its bearing on the action of the conference of governors who reached the conclusion among other things, "that the early elimination from the national forests reserves of all homestead and untimbered and grazing lands is expedient."

What the Western Governors Want.

Other conclusions reached at the conference of the governors are that "the existing national conservation laws have tended to retrench monopoly," and that "national and state governments co-operate, and within a reasonable time the state governments be conceded complete administration of conservation laws." That is where the cry of state rights is to be set up. Minnesota indeed has no reasonable cause of complaint in this respect. We have had the full right for some years of "the complete administration of conservation laws." How admirably indeed have we conserved the state's timber. Think of the immense benefits reaped by the people because the state has conserved for the use of future generations the mineral deposits with which it is endowed by nature. Small wonder that the Hills, the Weyerhauser's and Mr. Kellog's clients should wish to see the same policy extended to other northwestern states.

A Fight in Prospect.

And that's why they take so great an interest in the conservation movement and why they thought it desirable to send emissaries to Salt Lake City. They propose to show Roosevelt and Pinchot and Garfield and the rest that they are not going to have it all their own way when the conservation congress meets in St. Paul. At a somewhat similar conventon in Chicago a few years ago—one at least in which the representatives of the people had control—there was a bolt. The representatives of the interests herded by themselves and passed all kinds of resolutions. In case of their failure to make the cry of state's rights go here there may also be things doing in St. Paul.

Discrediting National Conservation.

If only Roosevelt can be discredited in St. Paul much will be gained. National conservation is one of his pet hobbies. At one time he had things going his way. The people were beginning to believe that much was to be hoped for from a movement in which the natural resources of the country were to be protected and preserved for the benefit of the people of the country by the federal government. If only now they can be pursuaded that Roosevelt's real purpose was the centralization of power and to rob the people of their rights, may we not hope to see the middle west again rallying around the administration of President Taft? The politicians of New York, as has been seen, are in line. Wall Street is for a safe and sane administration. The manufacturing interests of the nation can be relied upon to do their part. What is needed now is to break up the insurgency of the middle west, and to break in by way of Minnesota would be a victory indeed. With the state administration and the Republican organization working with so much apparent success and so industriously to that end, one of these days party solidarity may triumph and the man on horseback lose his terror to the business interests who regard their welfare as the nation's first concern.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIA

Malaria is a species of blood poverty known as anemia. It is a condition in which the circulation is so weak and impure that it is unable to supply the system with sufficient nourishment and strength to preserve ordinary health.

The medical profession is divided in opinion as to the manner in which malarial poison gets into the blood. Some take the position that it is an atmospheric poison, the specific germs of which are breathed into the lungs and thus transmitted to the circulation. Others advance the opinion that persons become inoculated with the poison through the bites of mosquitos. All however agree that MALARIA is a blood affection, and any treatment to successfully overcome it must not only purify this vital fluid, but at the same time add the necessary qualities of richness and strength to the circulation.

The malarial poison destroys large numbers of the rich, red corpuscles of the circulation, and the peculiar paleness of anaemic persons is due to this fact. In the first stages of Malaria there is a bilious condition of the system, constant bodily weakness, poor appetite, and a "no account," tired feeling. S. S. S. searches out and destroys every particle of malarial infection and builds the blood up to a healthy, nourishing condition. Then the system receives its required nutriment, the bright red corpuscles begin to multiply in the circulation, sallow complexions grow ruddy and flushed with health, the liver and digestion are righted, the appetite improved, and the system vitalized and refreshed in every way. S.S.S. is a safe and pleasant remedy as well as an efficient one. If you have Malaria we will be glad to have you write us describing the case. We will send free our book on the blood and at the same time our physicians will give you some medical advice that will be of great service to you in curing yourself with S. S. S. No charge for the book or advice.

A PHYSICAL WRECK.

During 1900 I was running a farm on the Mississippi River, and became so impregnated with malaria that for a year afterwards I was a physical wreck. I took a number of medicines recommended as blood purifiers, chill cures and malaria eradicators, but nothing did me any good until I began to use S.S.S., which I did about a year ago. The result was that after taking several bottles of the large size I was as well and strong as I ever was, and have never had a chill since. I expect to take S.S.S. every year as a preventive, and would advise everybody else to follow my example.

At a marriage service performed some time ago in a little country church in England, when the minister said in a solemn tone, "Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" Instead of the woman answering for herself a gruff man's voice answered:

"Oi will."

The minister looked up, very much perplexed, and paused. He repeated the sentence, and again the same gruff voice answerd:

"Oi will."

Again the minister looked up surprised, not knowing what to make of it, when one of the groomsmen at the end of the row said:

"'Er be deaf. Oi be answerin' for 'er."

Diary Products as Food.

The products of the dairy are perhaps the most useful articles included in the human diet. A meal made up of dishes into which no product of the diary cow enters would not be such as to inspire "The turnpike road to people's hearts I find lies through their mouths, or I mistake mankind." Take away the butter for the bread, the cream for the coffee and the porridge, the shortening for the crust and the biscuits, the milk in the gravy and in the puddings, the cream for the desurt, and the various kinds of cheese which please and satisfy, then take away the cup of milk for the little one and the meal would be neither tempting nor nutritious.

The health of our people depends so much upon an adequate supply of pure dairy products that even a scarcity is always attended by suffering and death.

Butter is sometimes referred to as a luxury. This is a mistake. Butter is not a luxury but one of the necessities of life, and its composition is such that nothing can take its place and perform the same functions. It is nature's product compounded in the maternal organism and the process is in accordance with nature's law, a law which man can imitate but not understand. Man can manufacture from various fats and oils a substitute for butter but it cannot take the place of nature's product because man cannot understand the needs of the human body as nature understands them.

The animal body is developed best when nourished by foods which have been little manipulated by man and machinery. Dairy products are, as a rule consumed nearly as nature produced them. This is particularly true with milk upon which the growing body must depend. In the case of butter only a small percentage of other products are added to the fat extracted from the milk. Man only manipulates it in order to put it in convenient shape for use. It still can be termed a product of nature designed as only nature can design for use as food by the human body.

THE DEACON'S SHEEPSKIN

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

If you know anything at all about farm life you know that now and then a farmer gets a hankering for mutton and kills a sheep. In removing the pelt he is very careful. A cut in it depreciates its value. Pelts are generally purchased by tin peddlers, and they are generally looked over very carefully beforehand. If there are two or three cuts in the pelt it is only half price. Deacon Strong lived on a farm in the outskirts of the village of Rawsonville. Tin peddlers had found him a truthful man. When the deacon warranted a sheepskin free from cuts it was no use spending time to look at it. On this particular morning when a peddler called the deacon had a pelt all rolled up to trade for tin pans. While he didn't exactly warrant it, he didn't acknowledge to any damage, and it was three days later that the peddler found he had been done for.

The peddler could have gone back and talked about graft and all that and raised a row, but he didn't. He returned to the neighborhood after several weeks, but he didn't call on the deacon. Neither did he make any inquiries about him. He just sawed wood and listened to what people were talking about, and what they were talking about just then was the fact that the deacon had decided to send his old mother to the poorhouse.

Deacon Strong realized that he would be criticised, and so he went about telling what a beautiful poorhouse it was.

The tin peddler got on to the talk and the facts, and he was doing some thinking as he drove from the neighborhood. He had a brother in a town twenty miles away, and the brother was a lawyer.

The day had been set for grandma to go to the poorhouse when one of the neighbors brought in a newspaper to show the deacon an advertisement. It called for information concerning one Anna Strong, widow, and strongly hinted that it would be to her great advantage to step out into the limelight. The poorhouse trip was canceled and a journey made to see a lawyer. Anna Strong, widow, was Deacon Strong's mother. He could prove it by fifty people. The lawyer replied that it was all right so far, but did she have a cousin named Charles Bixby, a rich man living in Boston, a cousin who would be apt to remember her in his will to the extent of $25,000?

The deacon's hair climbed up. He said that he hadn't the least doubt of the cousinship and would take the cash home to the old lady. He went too fast. The Widow Strong must appear and make an affidavit. What her son knew or guessed wouldn't cover the case. The deacon didn't say she had lost her voice. He started for home to see if he couldn't bring it back for her. Her fingers were so crippled that she hadn't written a line for years, and all depended on the recovery of the voice. The old woman had been tucked away in the poorest room of the house. She was at once transferred to the best. The scraps from the table were thought good enough for her. She was now fed on the best. Instead of three regular meals per day she was coaxed to eat much oftener. The son had hardly spoken to her for weeks, but now he sat with her and even told her jokes and hoped she would live for twenty years yet. He also went among the neighbors and said that he had heard the cellar of the poorhouse was damp after every shower, and he couldn't think of taking his dear mother there.

Mrs. Strong, widow, could hear very well. She heard her son ask the name of all her male cousins, including Charles Bixby of Boston, and she heard herself addressed as "dear mother," but she could make no intelligible replies. Not when the daughter-in-law combed her hair for her and washed her face and said she was a saint if there ever was one could she talk. When she was lifted in and out of the buggy for a ride she couldn't express her gratitude in words. Once or twice she happened to overhear her dutiful son say to his wife that he'd like to build a fire under the old woman to make her talk, but she didn't lay it up against him. She went right on having the best in the house and wondering why other old women didn't lose their voices.

Once a month for two long years Deacon Strong called upon or wrote to the lawyer. He offered all sorts of terms and compromises, but it was no use. He wrote to Boston, but his letter was unanswered. He consulted other lawyers, but they said that nothing could be done until that voice came back. Raw eggs and wine, pies, cake and puddings fattened the old woman, but the voice remained obstinate. She winked and she smiled and she nodded, but that wasn't enough to bring home the Bixby legacy. Then at last she died. She went to sleep in her chair one day and passed away without a struggle. She was buried in a very decent manner, and next day the deacon walked into the lawyer's office as next of kin and heir to the Bixby legacy.

"Never spoke a word."

"She had the best of care?"

"The very best."

"I am glad to hear it. I have just ascertained there was some mistake about it. She may have been a cousin of Charles Bixby's, but he left his money to an old man's home."

Who Nero Was.

In the days when Sir Charles Gavan Duffy was a leading figure in Victorian politics there sat in the Melbourne parliament a wealthy but not well informed butcher. The chief secretary of the day was deprecating the attitude of the leader of the opposition, whose conduct was, he declared, worse than Nero's.

"Who was Nero?" interjected the knight of the cleaver, with equal scorn and sincerity.

"Who was Nero?" replied the delighted chief secretary. "The honorable gentleman ought to know. Nero was a celebrated Roman butcher."

The Lure of the National Capital

BY EDWARD B. CLARK

COPYRIGHT BY W A PATTERSON

THEY cannot keep away, for the Washington lure is strong upon them. The attraction of the capital draws former senators and former representatives here just as surely as the call of duty summons the present officeholders. They drift down in November and scores of them stay until the adjournment, and other scores stay all through the summer.

Some men who before they were sent to congress rarely left the environments of their home villages have found after a term or two in the capital city, that the district had few attractions to offer them, provided there was money enough in their bank accounts to keep them in comfort in the city by the Potomac.

There are former senators and representatives whose influence has been sufficient to secure them government positions in the capital which will not only allow them to remain here, but which will pay them for their stay. The lot of these men seems to be particularly fortunate, and they are the objects of more or less envy on the part of those who would like to stay here, but who owing to pecuniary reasons and to inability to get office are compelled to return home.

There are plenty of evidences that former representatives who have chosen, after having once been defeated in the home district, to stay away from the native heath, are not altogether free from the criticisms of the home people, and perhaps there is no reason why they should be. When a man who has spent his entire life among certain people is weaned away from them by a short residence elsewhere, it seems that resentment springs, and few denials probably will come to the statement that a good many of the former officials who stay in Washington in preference to going home are not without frequent intimations that the people back in the district regard them in some degree as deserters.

Of course there are exceptions to every rule and in the case of senators and representatives of long service, who are poor and perhaps too old to renew the practise of the law, or to take up again their mercantile business where they dropped it to serve their constituents, there is excuse for the acceptance of office in Washington in order that the way of old age may be smoothed.

Then again there are the cases of men who have been in Washington so long representing their states, or their districts, that Washington has become their real home, and here they stay after a change of party administration has removed them from representative office.

Of the men who stayed in Washington because the place was like home, there should be mentioned former Senator Stewart, "Silver" Stewart of Nevada, who died recently. He was a noted figure on the Washington streets all through his congressional career, and through the few years of his retirement prior to his death. Stewart's hair and beard were as white as the snow on the top of the Nevada mountains, but until within a few hours of his death he was apparently as strong as any tree that grows below the mountain timber line.

Frequently the former senators and representatives who live in Washington appear upon the floor of congress. They have the right there to appear because of their former services. There is one marked and shining exception, however, to this rule of occasional return to the chamber where the legislative service was rendered. When Senator Spooner of Wisconsin left congress in 1891, to be gone six years, he declared that he would never appear upon the floor of the senate while he was out of office, nor would he go to the capitol unless his professional business called him to practise before the Supreme Court. Spooner kept his word. He always had objected to the rule which admitted former senators to the floor of the senate. He did not say so, but he thought that in some few cases the lobbying opportunity might be too strong to be resisted by some of the senators who were not above using their personal influence with their former colleagues on behalf of some specific legislation.

In the spring of 1907, John G. Spooner resigned from the United States senate. After the six years of his absence from congress was ended he had been returned again to the upper house, but in the spring three years ago he resigned to enter the practise of law. Since the day that Senator Spooner left for this supposedly the last time, he has not been seen in the senate of the United States, nor has he been seen in the corridors of the capitol. He is in law practise in New York, and occasionally he comes to Washington, but unlike many other former representatives he shuns the actual scene of his legislative activities.

Gen. Charles Grosvenor of Ohio, who was in the house of representatives for years, and who was considered one of its most picturesque characters, a man lively and energetic in debate and appealing personal qualities, stays in the Buckeye state most of the time now that he has retired from congress, but the Washington lure draws him here occasionally, and he is seen always in his old haunts. General Grosvenor was such a fixture that it seems impossible to realize when he comes back and appears in the old places that he has been away at all.

No one misses Charles Grosvenor more than Champ Clark, the Democratic leader. Grosvenor is a standpatter of such strength that Mr. Cannon it was said, used to sit abashed in his presence.

Mr. Clark is a free trader so sturdy that the other strong ones are weaklings; but nevertheless these two tariff extremes met and formed a friendship that time and separation have not been able to break.

It was said by some of the high tariff Republicans when General Grosvenor retired, that they were not entirely hopeless as long as John Dalzell of Pennsylvania remained with them. Dalzell recently had a narrow escape from losing the nomination for congress. If he by any chance should be defeated at the election it is believed that the lure will be as strong upon him as it has upon the others.

Dalzell is as picturesque in his way as Grosvenor is in his way. It always was said of him that he never slept. He is nervous energy in its essence, and more watchful of Republican interests generally on the floor than is the titular Republican leader. Mr. Dalzell is always looking out for the interests of his constituents.

One drowsy June day when the house was heavy and business was simply droning its way through, Dalzell yielding to environment, nodded and then napped. Instantly the wily, wide awake Democrats put through something to which no one saw any objection. It touched Pittsburg.

Dalzell awoke too late. He had been asleep at the switch. Had his eyes never known night since that hour, he could not have lived down the memory of that one unconscious moment. One day just before the close of the last session, as he was leaving the White House, three voices in unison called to him so that all within a block could hear: "Any sleep this session, John?"

Dalzell was wakeful to this emergency and his answer carried little comfort to the inquirers, for none of the three was a standpatter:

"Not if the tariff is up," he said.

During the closing days of the last session of congress something of a "filibuster" was attempted by the Democrats in the senate in order to make sure that action should be taken on the statehood bill. A filibuster is known to the parties as an attempt to delay legislation. The senate has no set rules like those of the house, and so if one man chooses to talk on any particular subject, he can delay the consideration of any measure that he chooses, and the limit of his endurance is the limit of the delay that he can force although if he has other senators of his own mind they can "spell" him in the speaking, and thus in relays continue the filibuster almost indefinitely.

One of the most noted filibusters of recent years was conducted by three men still in the service, and curiously enough the arrangement for the filibuster was made by members of both parties. The active participants were Senators Stone of Missouri and Gore of Oklahoma, Democrats and Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, Republican.

These three senators made up their minds that they did not wish to have a vote taken on the currency bill which had been introduced by Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, a bill which some of the senators said was a mere makeshift and would accomplish no good purposes.

In these days it is hard to find in congress a typical Yankee voice which the Englishmen say is our national characteristic. Gore of Oklahoma, however, has it. Why, it is hard to tell, but he has it in full measure, and no Maine coast man in Yankee voice characteristics can surpass this senator of the western plains state.

The filibuster in which Gore, La Follette and Stone took part was contained through a night and a day when Washington was hotter than it ever had been known to be before, at least so the natives say. When Washington heat takes possession of the capitol's interior it lays hold on the premises not to let go until November. It is impossible to keep cool in either house of congress when the heat of this climate strikes in.

During the fearful heat and humidity all one night long, Senator La Follette spoke in an endeavor to keep the currency bill from coming to a vote. He held the floor for 18½ hours practically without stopping. Senator La Follette is fortunate in one respect. When he was a boy, and a little later, he had a thorough training in elocution. If his teacher taught him nothing else, he gave him the secret of strengthening his voice.

At the end of 18½ hours of strenuous effort, La Follette spoke as clearly as he did at the beginning. Perhaps this is not the exact truth, for as a matter of fact, curiously enough, the Wisconsin senator's voice seemed to be actually in better condition during the closing hour of his address than it was during the opening hour.

The Wisconsin senator naturally has rather a rasping voice which like the voice of Gore of Oklahoma, is open to the Yankee characterization, but twang, accent, idiosyncrasy or whatever you may choose to call it, passes with the first few minutes of utterance. The roughness is smoothed away and the words fall smooth and rounded and with a certain appealing force, even though the subject have nothing of appeal.

When a senator has the floor in his own right, he can talk upon any subject under the sun. He does not of necessity have to confine himself to the subject in hand. So it was that La Follette did not speak entirely of the currency question, but about other matters as well. Occasionally in order that he might spare his brain the trouble of thought and so keep it unwearied, he read from a book of fiction.

During many of the hours La Follette spoke there were comparatively few senators in the chamber. Hour after hour he spoke, and then taking up his book of fiction, he read with a perfect regard for the rules of enunciation. His auditors were all sleepy and most of them were out of humor because there were only two who were in sympathy with the speaker, and yet perforce every person in the chamber gave heed to what La Follette was reading. For its subject matter perhaps they cared not a whit, and yet by the force of his reading eloquence he drove it home to their attention.

When La Follette had ceased speaking Senator Gore of Oklahoma, who as had been planned, took up the work and kept at it for some hours. He was relieved by Senator Stone of Missouri, who already was tired with his previous vocal attempt to keep the senate from a vote. The Missourian kept it up for seven hours and then Gore relieved him once more. That filibuster ended because Gore being blind, failed to note, and no one told him, that Senator Stone whom he expected was to relieve him, was not present in the chamber when the Oklahoma senator sat down for the third time. The vice-president instantly put the vote and the filibuster had been in vain.

WALKING FOR HEALTH.

Who has not heard that certain exercises are good for us because they "shake up" the liver? But it is not the best thing in the world to shake up the liver violently unless one is a trained athlete, and ordinary men and women are very far from being in that category. Exercise increases largely the liver's production both of bile and of sugar. Hence if it be more violent than that to which one is accustomed, more bile and sugar may be formed than can be taken care of by the system, and the subject may have what is called in popular parlance a "bilious attack." Now this is where walking comes in as a happy medium in exercise. We can often "walk off" a headache or a digestive disturbance when running would only aggravate the trouble.

It is a fact, supported by the highest authority, that a moderate exercise, such as walking, is a great aid to digestion. To run would retard digestion. In other words, you will digest your dinner better if you walk immediately after having eaten it, than if you sit still. Try this, and if you are thin you will gain in weight, besides saving more in the cost of living than you will lose in the wear and tear of shoe leather.

But suppose you are already corpulent, will walking after meals, in that case, make you stouter? No. Paradoxical as the statement may sound, walking will in that case make you thinner. Fat is a very unstable compound, and when it is present in excess more of it is destroyed by the increased amount of oxygen in the blood—due to the exercise—than is deposited by the blood, while on the other hand when adipose tissue is deficient the oxygen-bearing blood, which also carries fatty particles, deposits more fat than it can destroy, and thus the thin subject grows heavier.

Walking, then, in the open air is an exercise par excellence for everybody. It shakes up the liver just enough to keep it in good working order, it enriches the blood by increasing its amount of oxygen, thus favoring the destruction and elimination from the system of poisonous waste products, particularly by the lungs, skin and kidneys, and finally by stimulating activity of nutrition in the muscles it tends to prevent the deposition of morbid matters of a tuberculosis or cancerous nature.

SULLIVAN, MICHAEL.

An East Boston doctor told of the experience of a druggist the other day who sold some alcohol to a new customer. After the man had signed the book as required he said: "Now, don't get that name twisted. It is Michael Sullivan, and not Sullivan Michael, same as they turned it around in the directory."—Boston Journal.

MAKES IT EASY TO PILOT AEROPLANE

THE MICROPHONE IN USE.

Paris.—Captain Marconnet, one of the French army officers who is doing much to advance the science of aviation, has recently invented a device which enables a passenger on an aeroplane to guide the pilot, despite the difficulty ordinarily of the latter hearing anything that is said while the machine is making a rapid flight. It is a microphone, the mouth piece used by the passenger being attached to the flap of the pilot's cap, and the mouthpiece for the pilot being placed on his left shoulder.

MUSIC CHARMS COW

Gives More Milk While Orchestra Plays Classical Pieces.

Lake Bluff Dairy Woman Tests Theory of Michigan Farmer and Finds Waltzes Are Most Soothing—Don't Like Ragtime.

Chicago.—Sad-eyed cows on the farm of Mrs. Scott Durand in Lake Bluff the other day lost their remorseful feelings, became happy-faced, and gave more milk than they had been accustomed to, because the farm hands milked the 61 Jerseys and Holsteins to the sweet strains of the "Blue Danube" waltz and other selections rendered by an orchestra.

Music-impregnated milk is a fact and not a theory, according to the North Shore society woman, who watched the cows being milked while nine musicians wafted sweet music over the farm.

Milk taken from the "bossies" while the orchestra sent forth soothing music, tasted better and had a more happy effect upon the drinkers than the milk served which had not been "music impregnated," according to those who went through the test.

The unique test was made to prove the assertion of a Michigan farmer that cows give more milk while music is being rendered.

The music calmed the nerves of the cows and their udders let down all the milk in them.

Soon after the milking had been finished, Mrs. Durand, who is known as the "Queen of Hostesses," served the liquid to the musicians.

"This experiment has been a perfect revelation to me," said Mrs. Durand after Helen, Clarice, Flossie and No. 62, the first four cows, had been milked to the music of the orchestra.

Throwing her arms around Helen Mrs. Durand declared that she had never seen her cows stand so still and contentedly before.

"That's perfectly lovely! Look at their eyes! The cows want more music," she pleaded.

Then the orchestra shifted from a classical selection to ragtime music.

Suddenly the cows grew restive.

"Horrors," declared Mrs. Durand when the orchestra began to play the Gubanola Glide. "Stop it, my cows are cultured and abhor ragtime music as much as they do swearing."

Then the musicians started up a selection from "Tosca," "I Live for Love and Music," and to the amazement of Mrs. Durand and the milkers, the cows became quiet and contented again.

"Do you know I feel that my cows are the mothers of the hundreds of babies fed on Crab Tree farm milk," said the society leader, who had invited the orchestra out to her farm to give a practical demonstration to prove if cows give more milk to the tunes of sweet music than otherwise.

Mrs. Durand has been convinced of this fact and intends to equip her barn with several phonographs.

CLUB TO MAKE NEWSIES GOOD

Omaha Business Men Form Organization to Stop Swearing and Tobacco Using.

Omaha, Neb.—How to keep the 400 newsboys of this city from shooting craps, swearing, smoking and forgetting to wash their hands and faces at proper intervals is a problem that has agitated the members of the Children's Home society. At last it is believed that a solution has been reached.

An organization for the welfare of the newsboys started eight years ago fell through, and since then the youngsters have been permitted to grow up and run wild. Now they are to be taken in hand and their condition bettered.

Probation Officer Bernstein has interested a number of business men of the city and a club has been organized, with E. W. Dickinson, capitalist; Rome Miller, proprietor of the largest hotel in the city; J. A. Gudeby, a packer; Rev. Father Burns, a pastor, who has always interested himself in boys, and Judge Sutton of the juvenile court as trustees.

The committee having immediate charge of the welfare of the boys is made up of Joe Carroll, Tony Costenzo, Tony Monico and Sam Kalla, all of them were once newsboys, but now are prosperous business men.

The following rules have been adopted by the committee to govern the actions of the boys:

No smoking, chewing, gambling or jumping on street cars.

Must have clean faces and hands.

No going into saloons.

Must be loyal to one another.

Must be off the streets at eight o'clock at night unless an extra is out.

No boy under eight years of age shall sell papers.

Every boy under sixteen years of age shall attend one session of school daily.

No foul or profane language.

A large room has been rented near the business portion of the city. It has been equipped with a small library, tables on which games of many kinds can be played, tubs and shower baths.

The club will be self-governed and officered by the boys, but over its affairs the committee of business men will have general supervision.

It will cost the boys nothing to join the club. Each member is given a numbered badge for identification and as a certificate of character. If a complaint is filed against any boy, or if a boy becomes troublesome, a report is made to the juvenile court, when Judge Sutton will investigate and take the necessary action.

Stop Killing of Elephants

Friends of Pachyderm in England and France Urge Reserves to Halt Extinction.

London.—Whether it be the outcome of Mr. Roosevelt's recent hunting trip in Africa or not, a meeting held by the French society known as "The Friends of the Elephant," at which it was decided to approach the French government with the object of securing better reserves for elephants in Africa, has had the effect of reviving some interest in the same matter among members of the sister society in London.

Lieut. Col. John Henry Patterson, one of the most active members of the society, said in an interview: "In the United Kingdom this question has been ably and zealously dealt with by the Society for the Preservation of the Wild Fauna of the Empire.

"The objects of the association are to create a sound public opinion on the subject of the preservation of wild life, both at home and in the colonies and British dependencies; to further the formation of game reserves and sanctuaries, the selection of the most suitable places for these sanctuaries and the enforcing of suitable game laws and regulations.

"The society devotes considerable attention to the preservation of elephants, and has sent many deputations on the subject to successive foreign and colonial secretaries. Elephant reserves at present exist in all our African colonies where those animals are found. In British Gambia no elephants are allowed to be killed, and it is hoped that similar sanctuary will, owing to the efforts of the French society, be extended to the elephants in the French West African possessions.

"For the year ended March, 1908, 539 tons of ivory, worth $2,802,760, were imported into the United Kingdom alone. Taking the average tusk to weigh 40 pounds (a very liberal estimate), this means the death of more than fifteen thousand elephants. The ivory was practically all African, the quantity from India being only of the value of $175,000. If this animal slaughter is allowed to continue we are, alas! already in sight of the extinction of the African elephant, but it is hoped that the efforts of the British and French societies will stir public opinion and prevent such a deplorable loss to the fauna of the world."

London Death Rate Low.

London.—In four weeks the death rate in London averaged 10.8 per 1,000, being 1.7 per 1,000 below the mean rate in the corresponding periods of the five years 1905-9. There were three cases of smallpox in the Metropolitan asylum board and London fever hospitals last week, the only cases in London for the last thirteen weeks.

To Spend $30,000,000.

Lisbon.—Two battleships, six protected cruisers, eighteen destroyers, and six submarines are to be built by the Portuguese government at an estimated cost of $30,000,000.

Burglars Steal An Aeroplane.

Incubator Dinner New Fad

Rhode Island Farmer Hits Upon Novel Scheme to Bake Beans While Wife Is in Town.

Westerly, R. I.—A drummer who invaded the rural districts here a few days ago with the latest brand of fireless cooker for the economy and comfort of the over-worked farmer's wife has left town disgusted, with not a sale to his credit. He found the natives equipped with cookers which, they assert, are far ahead of so-called up-to-date ones.

Walter Russell Ross, a farmer on the post road, is the Moses of the kitchen. A few weeks ago his wife went to town to spend the day. Walter foraged his own breakfast and enough for the help. It was Saturday, and his better-half had left instructions to put the big pot of beans in early and let them bake all day. Walter had some hoeing to do and figured he couldn't waste a day indoors, and he cudgeled his Yankee brain for an idea.

It came.

He took the pot of beans with the big chunk of pork floating on top out into the woodroom where the incubator stood. Turning up the lamp, he took off the weight on the thermostat and shoved in the pot of beans. Shouldering his hoe, he set out for the field. When his wife returned from town she found the fire out in the kitchen stove and no beans in sight. She prepared a cold supper and a warm welcome for Walter.

Walter hastened to the woodroom, with the scolding wife at his heels. From the incubator he took a steaming hot pot of beans, browned and savory and done to a turn. Afterward he took out a dozen chickens, which the extreme heat had hatched and subsequently well baked. Walter said that the discovery of the usefulness of the incubator more than repaid for the loss of the fowl.

The news of his experiment has spread, until all the farmers' wives now do their week-end baking in incubators.

Portland, Me.—A dead man was the only occupant of a moving automobile for a short time the other day. While riding alone D. Winslow Hawkes, one of the best-known educators in Maine, died of heart trouble. His automobile ran along the curbing and stopped without being overturned.

Girls Take Bicycle Trip

Two Americans, Making European Record, Take Majordomo for Real Prince.

Dresden.—Among the crowds of Americans who took part in the demonstrations in Berlin were two American girls engaged in the task of building up a European bicycling record.

They are Hattie Sherborne and Maud Handley, both of Brooklyn. Landing at Cherbourg they cycled through France, spending three days in Paris. Italy was the next country visited, and after Italy, Germany, Copenhagen, Christiania and Stockholm are also to be visited.

According to the account given by the travelers to a Dresden paper their journey up to that point was free from any disagreeable incident. They told, however, of an occurrence of an amusing kind if it also brought them a little disappointment. On one occasion, when they were near Cannes, a tire was punctured and they were threatened with being stranded, when the prince of Monaco's automobile came along and gave them a lift. There was a splendidly dressed gentleman in the car whom they at first took for the prince himself, but who turned out to be only his majordomo.

"After having imagined ourselves for twenty minutes talking with a live prince," said Miss Handley, "we were real vexed to discover our mistake."

New Bug Poisons Blood.

Pottsville, Pa.—Frank Ebach may lose his right hand as the result of being stung by a new bug of greenish color, much resembling a mosquito, which is now as much of a pest in Schuylkill county as the seventeen-year locusts. There are scores of victims in this vicinity and blood poisoning has been caused in several instances.

$150,000 DIAMOND IS FOUND

New York.—A fine white diamond weighing 191 carats and worth $15[illegible]000 uncut is the latest find at the Premier mine in South Africa, according to advices which reached Maiden Lane dealers the other day. The stone is described as absolutely flawless, being two inches long by about three-fourths of an inch thick. It tapers in breadth from one and a fourth inches to three-fourths of an inch.

A Maiden Lane expert said that, judging from the description of the uncut stone, the largest perfect diamond that could be cut from it would be pear-shaped.

The finished stone will probably rank among the world's famous gems. When cut the diamond should be worth at least $200,000. The Premier mine became world-famous in 1905, when the Cullinan diamond was discovered by Mr. Wells.

No Worse Than in Europe

Visitor Makes Comparison of Vice in Cities of the Two Continents.

All that I have seen and heard concerning the vice of great American cities, alcoholism, gambling, immorality, seems to me to be neither more nor less that I have seen in all the great cities of Europe. I have noticed these sad features of modern civilization, but they are no more hideous in America than elsewhere. I shall never forget the evening which I spent with an agreeable and clever journalist who took me to see the horrors of New York. For several hours we went about to restaurants, bars and places of amusement. I saw and noted with great attention what was pointed out to me, but I could not help, at last, coming to the conclusion that some day, if I were to take my guide on a similar tour around one of the great capitals of Europe, I could show him much more! Taking the Catholic countries of Europe as the basis of comparison, the only difference that I could perceive was that in America the family tie is weaker. Divorce is too easy by far; the women are too emancipated; the children too independent of parental control. In this respect it has seemed to me that America has reached a limit beyond which really dangerous social disorder lies.—Guglielmo Ferrero, in the Atlantic.

The Simple Shepherd

A cockney, while spending his holidays in the highlands, met an old shepherd driving a flock of sheep. Wishing to show off a bit, he said:

"Now, if I were a shepherd, I would teach the sheep to follow me."

"Oh, aye," said the shepherd, "and I hiv nae doot ye wid manage, for if they saw anither sheep in front they wid be sure to follow."

Why She Brought It Up.

"Do you remember," she asked, "that you said once that unless I promised to be yours the sun would cease to shine?"

"I don't remember it now, but I suppose I may have said something of the kind."

"And have you forgotten that you assured me that unless I permitted you to claim me as your own the moon would fall from her place in the heavens?"

"Oh, well, what if I did say so? Why do you want to bring that up now?"

"I merely wished to assure you that I'm sorry I didn't shut my eyes and let her fall."

The Wrong Sort.

An old Irish peasant was one Sunday sitting in front of his cottage puffing away furiously at his pipe.

Match after match he lighted, pulling hard at the pipe the while, until at last the ground all round his feet was strewed with struck matches.

"Come in to your dinner, Patsy," at length called out his wife.

"Faith, and Oi will in a minute, Biddy," said he. "Moike Mulrooney has been a-telling me that if Oi shmoked a bit av ghlass Oi cud see the shpots on the sun. Oi don't know whether Moike's been a-fooling me or whether Oi've got hold av the wrong kind of ghlass."—Scraps.

THE BEST OF ITS KIND

Is always advertised. In fact it only pays to advertise good things. When you see an article advertised in this paper year after year you can be absolutely certain that there is merit to it because the continued sale of any article depends upon merit and to keep on advertising one must keep on selling. All good things have imitations, but imitations are not advertised. They have no reputation to sustain for they never expect to have any permanent sale and your dealer would never offer them if he studied your interests. Sixteen years ago Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic Powder for the feet, was first introduced through newspaper advertising and through people telling each other what a good thing it was for tired and aching feet. It has now a permanent sale, and nearly [illegible] so-called foot powders have been placed on the market with the hope of profiting by the reputation which has been built up for Allen's Foot-Ease. When you ask for an article advertised in these papers see that you get it. Avoid substitutes.

It Wouldn't Stretch.

The assessor was doing the very best he could but the farmer was shrewd and wary.

"How many acres of farming land have you?" he inquired warily.

"About 20, I guess," said Reuben.

"Twenty! Why, it looks to me like nearer 120. Come, now, can't you increase that a little? There are surely more than 20 acres in that tract. Suppose you stretch that a little."

"Say, feller," said the farmer, "this ain't no rubber plantation."—Harper's Monthly.

What They Did With Them.

An American who spends much of his time in England tells of a cockney who went to a dealer in dogs and thus described what he wanted: "I'll wants a kind of dog about so 'igh an' so long. It's a kind of gr'y'ound, an' yet it ain't a gr'y'ound, because 'is tyle is shorter nor any o' those 'ere gr'y'ounds, an' 'is nose is shorter, an' 'e ain't so slim round the body. But still 'e's a kind o' gr'y'ound. Do you keep such dogs?" "We do not," said the dog man. "We drown 'em."

119 Years Old When He Died.

Paddy Blake, who was born at Ballygreen, parish of Kilnasoolagh, county Clare, Ireland, 119 years ago, has died in the Corofin Union hospital. Paddy had a clear memory of events that happened a hundred years ago and was one of those who went to see Daniel O'Connell passing through Bunratty Pike on his way to Ennis for the great election of 1828.

An Unnecessary System.

"You ought to have a burglar alarm system in your house," said the electrical supply agent, "so that you will be awakened if a burglar raises one of the windows or opens a door at night."

"No burglar can get in here while we are peacefully sleeping," replied Mr. Newpop. "We are weaning our baby."

On a Stygian Ferryboat.

Charon was ferrying a passenger across the Styx.

"Fine scenery for my toothpowder ad," cried the shade.

Thus we see the ruling passion survive.

His Busy Season.

"How's business?"

"Brisk," answered the druggist. "I've bought tickets for two picnics and four excursions this morning and donated goods for several indoor affairs."

A COOL PROPOSITION

And a Sure One.

The Body Does Not Feel Heat Unpleasantly if it has Proper Food—

Grape-Nuts

People can live in a temperature which feels from ten to twenty degrees cooler than their neighbors enjoy, by regulating the diet.

The plan is to avoid meat entirely for breakfast; use a goodly allowance of fruit, either fresh or cooked. Then follow with a saucer containing about four heaping teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts treated with a little rich cream. Add to this about two slices of crisp toast with a meager amount of butter, and one cup of well made Postum.

By this selection of food the bodily energy is preserved, while the hot, carbonaceous foods have been left out. The result is a very marked difference in the temperature of the body, and to this comfortable condition is added the certainty of ease and perfect digestion, for the food being partially predigested is quickly assimilated by the digestive machinery.

Experience and experiment in food, and its application to the human body has brought out these facts. They can be made use of and add materially to the comfort of the user.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. Uncanny noises disturbed her during the night. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff-button in a hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff-button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson arrived. Gertrude revealed she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson accused Miss Innes of hiding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. Gertrude was suspected. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff-button. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey left in response to a telegram. Gertrude said she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him a loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong wrecked his own bank and could clear Bailey. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, was found at the lodge. The lodgekeeper said Louise and Arnold had a long talk the night of the murder. Louise was prostrated. Louise told Halsey that while she still loved him she was to marry another, and that he would despise her when he learned the whole story.

Gertrude and Halsey went for a long walk that afternoon and Louise slept. Time hung heavy on my hands, and I did as I had fallen into a habit of doing lately—I sat down and thought things over. One result of my meditations was that I got up suddenly and went to the telephone. I had taken the most intense dislike to this Dr. Walker, whom I had never seen, and who was being talked of in the countryside as the fiance of Louise Armstrong.

I knew Sam Huston well. There had been a time, when Sam was a good deal younger than he is now, before he had married Anne Endicott, when I knew him even better. So now I felt no hesitation in calling him over the telephone. But when his office boy had given way to his confidential clerk, and that functionary had condescended to connect his employer's desk telephone, I was somewhat at a loss as to how to begin.

"Why, how are you, Rachel?" Sam said sonorously. "Going to build that house at Rock View?" It was a 20-year-old joke of his.

"Sometime, perhaps," I said. "Just now I want to ask you a question about something which is none of my business."

"I see you haven't changed an iota in a quarter of a century, Rachel." This was intended to be another jest. "Ask ahead; everything but my domestic affairs is at your service."

"Try to be serious," I said. "And tell me this: Has your firm made any plans for a house recently for a Dr. Walker at Casanova?"

"Yes, we have."

"Where was it to be built? I have a reason for asking."

"It was to be, I believe, on the Armstrong place. Mr. Armstrong himself consulted me, and the inference was—in fact, I am quite certain—the house was to be occupied by Mr. Armstrong's daughter, who was engaged to marry Dr. Walker."

When the architect had inquired for the different members of my family, and had finally rung off, I was certain of one thing. Louise Armstrong was in love with Halsey, and the man she was going to marry was Dr. Walker. Moreover, this decision was not new; marriage had been contemplated for some time. There must certainly be some explanation—but what was it?

That day I repeated to Louise the telegram Mr. Harton had opened. She seemed to understand, but an unhappier face I have never seen. She looked like a criminal whose reprieve is over, and the day of execution approaching.

CHAPTER XV.

Liddy Gives the Alarm.

The next day, Friday, Gertrude broke the news of her stepfather's death to Louise. She did it as gently as she could, telling her first that he was very ill, and finally that he was dead. Louise received the news in the most unexpected manner, and when Gertrude came out to tell me how she had stood it, I think she was almost shocked.

She Lay Limp and White.

"She just lay and stared at me, Aunt Ray," she said. "Do you know, I believe she is glad, glad! And she is too honest to pretend anything else. What sort of a man was Mr. Paul Armstrong, anyhow?"

"He was a bully as well as a rascal, Gertrude," I said. "But I am convinced of one thing; Louise will send for Halsey now, and they will make it all up."

For Louise had steadily refused to see Halsey all that day, and the boy was frantic.

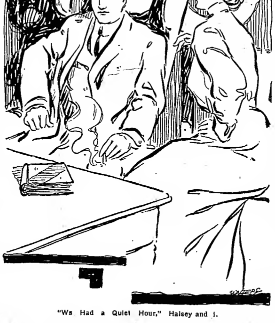
We had a quiet hour, Halsey and I, that evening, and I told him several things; about the request that we give up the lease to Sunnyside, about the telegram to Louise, about the rumors of an approaching marriage between the girl and Dr. Walker, and, last of all, my own interview with her the day before.

He sat back in a big chair, with his face in the shadow, and my heart fairly ached for him. He was so big and boyish! When I had finished he drew a long breath.

"Whatever Louise does," he said, "nothing will convince me, Aunt Ray, that she doesn't care for me. And up to two months ago, when she and her mother went west, I was the happiest fellow on earth. Then something made a difference; she wrote me that her people were opposed to the marriage; that her feeling for me was what it had always been, but that something had happened which had changed her ideas as to the future. I was not to write until she wrote me, and whatever occurred, I was to think the best I could of her. It sounded like a puzzle. When I saw her yesterday, it was the same thing, only, perhaps, worse."

"Halsey," I asked, "have you any idea of the nature of the interview between Louise Armstrong and Arnold the night he was murdered?"

"It was stormy. Thomas says once or twice he almost broke into the room, he was so alarmed for Louise."



"We Had a Quiet Hour," Halsey and I.

"Another thing, Halsey," I said, "have you ever heard Louise mention a woman named Carrington, Nina Carrington?"

"Never," he said positively.

For try as we would, our thoughts always came back to that fatal Saturday night, and the murder. Every conversational path led to it, and we all felt that Jamieson was tightening the threads of evidence around John Bailey. The detective's absence was hardly reassuring; he must have had something to work on in town or he would have returned.

The papers reported that the cashier of the Traders' bank was ill in his apartments at the Knickerbocker—a condition not surprising, considering everything. The guilt of the defunct president was no longer in doubt; the missing bonds had been advertised and some of them discovered. In every instance they had been used as collateral for large loans, and the belief was current that not less than a million and a half dollars had been realized. Every one connected with the bank had been placed under arrest, and released on heavy bond.

Was he alone in his guilt, or was the cashier his accomplice? Where was the money? The estate of the dead man was comparatively small—a city house on a fashionable street, Sunnyside, a large estate largely mortgaged, an insurance of $50,000, and some personal property—this was all. The rest lost in speculation probably, the papers said. There was one thing which looked uncomfortable for Jack Bailey: He and Paul Armstrong together had promoted a railroad company in New Mexico, and it was rumored that together they had sunk large sums of money there. The business alliance between the two men added to the belief that Bailey knew something of the looting. His unexplained absence from the bank on Monday lent color to the suspicion against him. The strange thing seemed to be his surrendering himself on the point of departure. To me, it seemed the shrewd calculation of a clever rascal. I was not actively antagonistic to Gertrude's lover, but I meant to be convinced, one way or the other. I took no one on faith.

That night the Sunnyside ghost began to walk again. Liddy had been sleeping in Louise's dressing room on a couch, and the approach of dusk was a signal for her to barricade the entire suite. Situated as it was, beyond the circular staircase, nothing but an extremity of excitement would have made her pass it after dark. I confess myself that the place seemed to me to have a sinister appearance, but we kept that wing well lighted, and until the lights went out at midnight it was really cheerful, if one did not know its history.

On Friday night, then, I had gone to bed, resolved to go at once to sleep. Thoughts that insisted on obtruding themselves I pushed resolutely to the back of my mind, and I systematically relaxed every muscle. I fell asleep soon, and was dreaming that Dr. Walker was building his new house immediately in front of my windows; I could hear the thump-thump of the hammers, and then I waked to a knowledge that somebody was pounding on my door.

I was up at once, and with the sound of my footstep on the floor the low knocking ceased, to be followed immediately by sibilant whispering through the keyhole.

"Miss Rachel! Miss Rachel!" somebody was saying, over and over.

"Is that you, Liddy?" I asked, my hand on the knob.

"For the love of mercy, let me in!" she said in a low tone.

She was leaning against the door, for when I opened it, she fell in. She was greenish-white, and she had a red and black barred flannel petticoat over her shoulders.

"Listen," she said, standing in the middle of the floor and holding on to me. "Oh, Miss Rachel, it's the ghost of that dead man hammering to get in!"

Sure enough, there was a dull thud—thud—thud—it came apparently from the wall.

"It's not a ghost," I said decidedly. "If it was a ghost it wouldn't rap; it would come through the keyhole." Liddy looked at the keyhole. "But it sounds very much as though some one is trying to break into the house."

Liddy was shivering violently. I told her to get me my slippers and she brought me a pair of kid gloves, so I found my things myself and prepared to call Halsey. As before, the night alarm had found the electric lights gone; the hall, save for its night lamp, was in darkness, as I went across to Halsey's room. I hardly know what I feared, but it was a relief to find him there, very sound asleep, and with his door unlocked.

"Wake up, Halsey," I said, shaking him.

He stirred a little. Liddy was half in and half out of the door, afraid as usual to be left alone, and not quite daring to enter. Her scruples seemed to fade, however, all at once. She gave a suppressed yell, bolted into the room and stood tightly clutching the foot-board of the bed. Halsey was gradually waking.

"I've seen it," Liddy wailed. "A woman in white down the hall!"

I paid no attention.

"Halsey," I persevered, "some one is breaking into the house. Get up, won't you?"

"It isn't our house," he said sleepily. And then he roused to the exigency of the occasion. "All right, Aunt Ray," he said, still yawning. "If you'll let me get into something—"

It was all I could do to get Liddy out of the room. The demands of the occasion had no influence on her; she had seen the ghost, she persisted, and she wasn't going into the hall. But I got her over to my room at last, more dead than alive, and made her lie down on the bed.

The tappings, which seemed to have ceased for a while, had commenced again, but they were fainter. Halsey came over in a few minutes, and stood listening and trying to locate the sound.

"Give me my revolver, Aunt Ray," he said; and I got it—the one I had found in the tulip bed—and gave it to him. He saw Liddy there and divined at once that Louise was alone.

"You let me attend to this fellow, whoever it is, Aunt Ray, and go to Louise, will you? She may be awake and alarmed."

So in spite of her protests, I left Liddy alone and went back to the east wing. Perhaps I went a little faster past the yawning blackness of the circular staircase; and I could hear Halsey creaking cautiously down the main staircase. The rapping, or pounding, had ceased, and the silence was almost painful. And then suddenly, from apparently under my very feet, there rose a woman's scream, a cry of terror that broke off as suddenly as it came. I stood frozen and still. Every drop of blood in my body seemed to leave the surface and gather around my heart. In the dead silence that followed it throbbed as if it would burst. More dead than alive, I stumbled into Louise's bedroom. She was not there!

CHAPTER XVI.

In the Early Morning.

I stood looking at the empty bed. The coverings had been thrown back, and Louise's pink silk dressing-gown was gone from the foot, where it had lain. The night lamp burned dimly, revealing the emptiness of the place. I picked it up, but my hand shook so that I put it down again, and got somehow to the door.

There were voices in the hall and Gertrude came running toward me.

"What is it?" she cried. "What was that sound? Where is Louise?"

"She is not in her room," I said stupidly. "I think—it was she—who screamed."

Liddy had joined us now, carrying a light. We stood huddled together at the head of the circular staircase, looking down into its shadows. There was nothing to be seen, and it was absolutely quiet down there. Then we heard Halsey running up the main staircase. He came quickly down the hall to where we were standing.

"There's no one trying to get in. I thought I heard some one shriek. Who was it?"

Our stricken faces told him the truth.

"Some one screamed down there," I said. "And—and Louise is not in her room."

With a jerk Halsey took the light from Liddy and ran down the circular staircase. I followed him, more slowly. My nerves seemed to be in a state of paralysis; I could scarcely step. At the foot of the stairs Halsey gave an exclamation and put down the light.

"Aunt Ray," he called sharply.

At the foot of the staircase, huddled in a heap, her head on the lower stair, was Louise Armstrong. She lay limp and white, her dressing-gown dragging loose from one sleeve of her night-dress, and the heavy braid of her dark hair stretching its length a couple of steps above her head, as if she had slipped down.

She was not dead; Halsey put her down on the floor and began to rub her cold hands, while Gertrude and Liddy ran for stimulants. As for me, I sat there at the foot of that ghostly staircase—sat, because my knees wouldn't hold me—and wondered where it would all end. Louise was still unconscious, but she was breathing better, and I suggested that we get her back to bed before she came to. There was something grisly and horrible to me, seeing her there in almost the same attitude and in the same place where we had found her brother's body. And to add to the similarity, just then the hall clock, far off, struck faintly three o'clock.

It was four before Louise was able to talk, and the first rays of dawn were coming through her windows, which faced the east, before she could tell us coherently what had occurred. I give it as she told it. She lay propped in bed, and Halsey sat beside her, unrebuffed, and held her hand while she talked.

London Mulberry Trees

Finbury Circus gardens, which have just furnished fruit for the lord mayor, are by no means the sole city haunt of the mulberry tree, says the London Daily News. The "wisest of trees," as Pliny termed it, evidently "likes London," and flourishes even at the Charterhouse in murky Smithfield. A thriving little sapling has recently been planted in the picturesque northern corner of St. Paul's churchyard hard by the spot where once stood the famous Paul's cross. Asked how the prospective fruit would be protected from marauding street arabs, chapter gardener replied: "I hope he won't never hear no harries in my time."

London mulberry trees are supposed to derive their descent from an attempt of James I. to found a silk growing industry, but seem really to have been introduced by the Romans. Another unlikely tree which appears to do well in the heart of London is the fig, numerous specimens of which can be seen flourishing under the most depressing conditions.

The Only Kind.

RAW ECZEMA ON HANDS

"I had eczema on my hands for ten years. I had three good doctors but none of them did any good. I then used one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent and was completely cured. My hands were raw all over, inside and out, and the eczema was spreading all over my body and limbs. Before I had used one bottle, together with the Cuticura Ointment, my sores were nearly healed over, and by the time I had used the third bottle, I was entirely well. To any one who has any skin or blood disease I would honestly advise them to fool with nothing else, but get Cuticura and get well. My hands have never given me the least bit of trouble up to now.

"My daughter's hands this summer became perfectly raw with eczema. She could get nothing that would do them any good until she tried Cuticura. AUDITOR LATENDRESSE DECIDES TO RUN

Filed Yesterday—Two Others After Nomination For County Auditor.

Several Others Filed Yesterday Three Candidates for Judge of Probate.

County Auditor—A. A. Latendresse, Andrew Hanson, Nels K. Nelson, all Republicans.

County Treasurer—Harry E. Ives, G. G. Kindseth, both Republicans.

County Attorney—Wilhelm Michelet, Republican, Chas. E. Boughton, Democrat.

Register of Deeds—Frank Jeffers, Democrat, Olaf Tande, Republican.

Sheriff L. A. Nelson, Charles J. Fedman, both Republicans.

Clerk of Court C. W. Johnson, Republican.

Judge of Probate—Ira C. Richardson, Ben Christianson, Wm. Holberg, all Republicans.

Superintendent of Schools—H. F. Anderson, Republican.

County Surveyor C. H. Martz, Republican.

Court Commissioner—Simon Paul, Republican.

Coroner Jos. Belair, Republican.

Commissioner 3rd. District—Ed. A. Aubol, Republican.

Commissioner 5th. District—Joseph Pigeon, Republican.

Yesterday was the last day for candidates to file before the primary election and above is given a list of all of the candidates.

There were a number of filings yesterday and a number of surprises are sprung. Eleven candidates got into the race on the last day.

Auditor Latendresse filed at the eleventh hour and so did Nels K. Nelson and there will be a three-cornered fight for the Republican nomination for auditor.

Chas. E. Boughton filed for the Democratic nomination for attorney. Wm. Michelet is the candidate for the Republican nomination and it is probable that these two will fight it out in the general election.

Wm. Holberg filed for the Republican nomination for Judge of Probate and that means that the contest for that nomination is going to be three-cornered.

There are three candidates for commissioner in the First district. For the Republican nomination the contest will be between C. A. Lindquist and Gust Naplin. The winner in the primary election will be opposed by Herman Schulz in the general election, Mr. Schulz having filed yesterday for the Democratic nomination.

Others who filed yesterday are Frank Jeffers for the Democratic nomination for register of deeds and Olof Tande for the Republican nomination, and Simon Paul, court commissioner, Jos. Belair, coroner, Ed. A. Aubol, commissioner 3rd District, all Republicans.

Only three have filed for Democratic nominations and none of them will have contests until the general election.

Girl Badly Burned.

Serena Offerdahl, a seventeen year old girl employed in the laundry of the Soo Cafe, was severely burned last Friday morning and for a time it was thought she could not recover, but is now past all danger and her recovery is certain but will require many months.

The girl was in the laundry, which is in the basement of the Grundy building, alone and in filling the tank of the gasoline mangle spilled considerable gasoline on her breast. She then struck a match to light the burner and it ignited her clothes. She ran in a high wind to the kitchen of the Soo Cafe, a distance of half a block, where the fire on her clothing was extinguished, but not until all of the skin on her breast was entirely burned to the flesh. She was at once taken to the hospital, and little hopes were at first entertained that she could withstand the shock. She is now getting along nicely and, although suffering a great deal, will recover, although it will probably be several months before she will be able to be about.

The girl's parents reside up near Holt, and are recent arrivals from the old country, being unable to talk English.—Thief River News.

JUDGES FILE.

Judges Grindeland and Watts Candidates for Reelection.

Judges Grindeland and Watts of the district court of the Fourteenth judicial district have filed as candidates for re-election. The bar associations of nearly every county in the district endorsed the judges and they were formally requested to become candidates for re-election to the offices they hold.

It is probable that there will be no opposition and the judges will be re-elected without a partizan contest.

DAYS AT THE FAIR

Special Features Announced for Each Day of the Big Show.

The six days of the state fair, beginning September 5 and ending September 11, will have particular events of special interest to designate them.

Monday will be known as Taft and Labor day. President Taft will arrive at the state fair grounds about 2:15, and, after being shown through the various buildings will address his fellow citizens at 2:30. There will be a tremendous crowd on hand to welcome the chief executive. For the Labor Day features, the remarkable exhibits that have been installed by the unions among the Liberal Arts display in the grand stand should be enough, but there will be other appropriate events to make the day memorable.

Tuesday will be Roosevelt and St. Paul day. This announcement will be enough to pack the fair grounds to the limit. Our great and popular former president is now just a plain citizen like any of the rest of us. That is what he himself declares, but you can't make the American public take it that way. They are bound, individually and collectively, to glorify the aggressive colonel, author and still owner of the "big stick," above any other being on earth. His merest word or act is watched with interest, for he remains a vital and significant factor in every feature of our American life. The welcome he will receive at the state fair grounds Tuesday, Sept. 6, will be expressive of the high regard Minnesota has for him, and some tens of thousands of her sons and daughters will be on hand to shout acclaim. Col. Roosevelt will deliver a short address at 2:30 in the afternoon.

The other special days as announced will be Wednesday, Derby Day; Thursday, Territorial Pioneer's and Conservation Day; Friday, Minneapolis Day; Saturday, Automobile Day, with many big races and half a dozen speed kings of the automobile racing world.

DELORME A CANDIDATE

Local Man Files for the Republican Nomination For Representative.

Just at the hour of going to press the information reaches the Gazette that Noel Delorme of this city has filed for the Republican nomination for Representative from the 61st district.

Mr. Delorme is a strong man and there is no doubt that, even though there is little time to canvass the district before the primary election, the other candidates will find that he has been in the race.

Fr. Ambrose to Europe.

Rev. Fr. Ambrose of St. Mary's church has been granted a leave of absence for one year and he expects to spend the time in Europe. He is now in New York and will embark for the old world trip this week. Fr. Ambrose has been in ill health for a number of months and his friends here hope that the travel and change will result in the hoped for improvement. During the absence of Fr. Ambrose, Rev. Fr. Conrad of St. Johns will have charge of the work of St. Mary's church.

Announcement.

If you need anything in the hosiery line, I am ready to receive orders for any grade or color. Also have a fine stock of fall and winter hose on hand. The good wearing quality of these Racine goods surpasses all others. Thanking the citizens of Red Lake Falls and vicinity for their past patronage, I solicit a continuance of the same. Respectfully,—Miss Carter,

FARMERS OF RED LAKE COUNTY!

The Fight to Defeat the Division of Red Lake County is Your Fight.----Organize.----It is Time For You To Do Something On Your Own Account.

Isn't it about time you woke up to the fact that this county division fight is YOUR FIGHT?

When the county seat fight was begun, we of Red Lake Falls realized that it was our special fight even more than it was yours, to protect our county seat, and we put our men in the field, hired lawyers, spent our own money, without asking aid from you, and put up a long, hard fight at great expense, that lasted nearly five years.

We won out and protected our rights to the county seat, so that it cannot be taken from us.

Now, the people of Thief River Falls who are bound to "rule or ruin," have determined to divide the county at your expense, so that they may have a county seat of their own. You are going to be the losers. Whether the county is divided or not, Red Lake Falls will still have the county seat of Red Lake county.

But, if the county is divided, you gain nothing, and YOUR TAXES will be increased, YOU will be called on to pay, and to pay EVERY YEAR for the pleasure of giving Thief River Falls a county seat, a new county for a plaything.

When they seek to divide the county and increase expenses, they do not think or care for what it is going to cost you farmers; they only think of their own unsatisfied ambitions.

ISN'T IT TIME FOR YOU TO DO SOME THINKING, ON YOUR OWN ACCOUNT.

Don't wait for Red Lake Falls to do your fighting for you. We are willing to help and advise you, and our own people will vote right.

But if the Thief River Falls scheme to divide Red Lake county is to be defeated, it will require YOUR VOTES to do it.

It is down to a question of votes and you have them.

If you farmers really want to divide Red Lake county we do not wish to stand in your way.

But, if you don't want Red Lake county divided, it is up to you TO GET BUSY.

GET OUT AND ORGANIZE. Talk with your neighbors. Find out who is for and who is against county division and show them why they should vote against it. PROTECT YOURSELVES. If you don't help yourselves, you cannot expect us to help you.

If you want to beat county division, line up your towns against it

IT'S YOUR FIGHT. GET BUSY.

MORE ABOUT CONSERVATION CONGRESS

How Certain Interests are Fighting Against National Conservation.

Tawney's Troubles—Ed. Smith at His Crooked Tricks.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Minn., August 30.—While oblivious to the fact that the state administration and the St. Paul crowd in this matter of conservaton have been acting under instructions from the Hill interests, it has been borne in upon the occasionally obtuse St. Paul papers that the governor of the state of Washington has been taking his orders from the same authority. This is not denied. Indeed the only denial to date comes from Howard Elliot, president of the Northern Pacific railroad, as to himself. Naturally Mr. Elliot would be too busy to bother with politics when there were others to attend to the job.

The Great Northern View.

Mr. Lewis Hill, it appears, is not so circumscribed. He was assigned the task of looking after the conservation congress and in his naive way he tells how he went about it in the case of the governor of Washingon. "Certainly," said he to an inquiring reporter, "I wrote to Governor Hay of Washington, urging him to come to the congress. I explained how the meeting was lined up and advised him that the people of the west ought to come here to take care of themselves. I told my western friends that the program was not a representative western program and that the attendance at the congress ought to be representative if the program was not. That was the ground on which I urged him to come." Possibly it was not necessary to go into particulars in St. Paul. It was likely enough to issue his orders to make the politicians jump.

A Fight on His Hands.

Frank Nye, representing the Fifth District in congress is fighting with his back to the wall. He is finding that standing by Cannon through thick and thin isn't so pleasant a job in Minneapolis as it was in Washington. Indeed so far as Cannon himself is concerned Frank has crawfished and is now willing to let Uncle Joe shift for himself. But when it comes to Cannonism, Mr. Nye is doing business at the old stand. The thing to do in congress is to stick to the majority of the party, he says in effect, no matter what the majority does. "We can have no better laws than the majority can give," he says. That is the creed of the party hack. Incidentally it doesn't have to be true. Whatever of good legislation has been accomplished during the session just closed has been brought about in defiance of the congressional reactionary majority. When it comes to a showdown they didn't dare insist on carrying out the administration program. The majority led by Aldrich and Cannon laid down when Cummins and other insurgent leaders, relying on the Democrats to support the reform movement, put the screws to them. If everybody like Frank Nye insisted that "obedience to the will of the majority is essential to orderly government," there would have been no change in the house rules. It is the creed of the party tool who hasn't a mind of his own. They have out-grown it apparently in Minneapolis. Possibly Mr. Nye may beat out his progressive opponent, Mr. Hall. A majority of the Republicans may still be joined to their idol. That's only the beginning, however. In the Fifth as in the First District the Democrats will have a canidate to carry the battle to the ballot box. It will be settled there and settled right.

Minnesota Insurgents.

A pretty kettle of fish is brewing nationally. Roosevelt is on the war path booted and spurred. He is after Vice-President Sherman and the Old Guard in New York state and appears to intend to fight it out on that line if it takes all summer. He will be in St. Paul next week. Possibly he may put some spirit into Minnesota insurgents, many of whom, like Clapp, have laid down and let the machine roll them out. Possibly, however, the surrender may only be apparent. Minnesota independent Republicans have acquired the habit of demonstrating when it comes to the election that the bosses can't always order them about. I understand that Ed. Smith is bragging that he's got them going.

Monday September 6, is to be the First Day of School.

St. Joseph's school is to open Monday, Sept. 6, for the school year of 1910-11. Fr. Fayollo urges all those who are to attend the school to be on hand the first day. To insure the best results students should be on hand the first day and be regular in attendance.

FOUND QUEER STONE.

Mat Steele Made Interesting Discovery on His Farm.

Mat Steele recently picked up in a field where he was plowing a stone upon which some characters are plainly to be seen. He has been unable to wash the marks off and he has come to the conclusion that the stone may have been marked by some one long ago and left for the purpose of exciting the curiosity of people in after years or for some other inexplainable reason.

ARE LAYING FOR CROOKSTON

Indian Agents and Breeds Are Nosing About the Polk County City.

Intimation That Crookston Wet Goods Dealers Have Not Been Good.

The fact that N. A. Way, special agent of the Indian department, and a half breed deputy have been spending a considerable portion of their time in and about Crookston of late and the further fact that the half breed has been seen watching the express shipments from Crookston, coupled with the further fact that Way went from here to Beltrami and followed some of the shipments of wet goods consigned to that place and hauled from there to points in the country, some of it to country included in the Indian territory, is the foundation upon which is based the belief that it is the intention of the Indian department to extend the closing order to Crookston and East Grand Forks as the two men have been nosing around that place also within the past two weeks.

That the county optionists have favored the closing of Crookston and East Grand Forks is an open secret, but just what pressure they have brought to bear cannot be stated at this time with authority. The dealers have been warned repeatedly, but some of them have not heeded the warning sufficiently, it is stated, and have shipped goods rather indiscriminately when good judgement should have told them that the liquor or beer would reach Indians or breeds perhaps, and would certainly find its way on forbidden territory.

Whether intentional violations have occurred or not, the fact remains that there is a feeling of apprehension in Crookston today that trouble is brewing and that the federal authorities will be heard from. Just what condition of affairs the spies have found will not be known until something drops from Pussyfoot Johnson, but in the meantime a sufficient scare has been received by dealers here to make them more cautious than ever before. For some time past none of them would ship directly in violation of the order, but shipments, it is alleged, have been made to points where the shippers should know the local demand would not require such large quantities and that the liquor was being hauled overland to some unknown destination where trouble might result.

The nervousness felt will result in a movement at once on the part of the business interests of the city which will put a sudden stop to any further shipments of the kind, as it is believed that such methods are necessary to protect the city from being included in the territory in which the inhabitants are treated as wards of the government.—Crookston Times.

HUNTING SEASON

Chickens, Ducks and Geese Ripe Next Wednesday.

After next Wednesday, Sept. 7, it will be lawful to kill chickens, ducks and geese in limited numbers and many local nimrods are planning for trips into the country bright and early Wednesday morning. Of course they are getting very impatient, but they are going to be very, very good, Mr. Munch, and not a soul will start off for the tall grass until Wednesday morning.

NEW TOWN OF OKLEE

Lot Sale Monday—Many Places of Business to be Opened.

The sale of town lots at the new Soo town of Oklee in eastern Red Lake county occurred on Monday and twenty lots were sold.

Many buildings are to go up this fall and there is every promise that the new town will be a thriving place. There will be five general stores, two hardware stores, lumber yard, two restaurants and a hotel all doing business in a short time.

The First State Bank of Oklee, recently organized, will open up for business next week. A number of local people are interested in the bank. J. L. Cruzen of Wylie has been elected cashier and will be in charge of the bank.

MISSION FESTIVAL.

Will be held at the Sortedahl Farm Sunday.

There will be a mission festival at the home of Nelson Alfson on the Sortedahl farm Sunday. In the morning Rev. S. T. Palm of St. Hilaire will speak in Norwegian and in the afternoon the well known Norwegian author, Per Stromme, of Grand Forks will speak in English. The customary offering for missions will be taken up. All are invited.

E. A. Mittwer was fortunate enough to get a number in a land drawing at Aberdeen last fall and he has this week been notified to report at the land office and make his filing. He expects to make his filing next month.

SCHOOL OPENS NEXT TUESDAY

New Courses of Manual Training, Domestic Science and Agriculture.

All Pupils Should Enroll on the Morning of the Open-Day.

Owing to the fact that Monday next is Labor Day, a legal holiday, the city schools will not open until the following day, Tuesday, September 6.

The teaching corps for the present year will be as follows;

Superintendent—Leonard V. Koos.

High School—Miss Sarah Marshall, principal and teacher of English; Miss Helen Whitney, Mathematics and Science; Miss Genevieve Backensote, Latin and German; Miss Emma S. Weld, Domestic Science; Mr. Jasper Swedberg, Manual Training and Agriculture.

Grades in Lafayette School—Miss Edna Crawford, Eighth Grade; Miss Helen Clark, Fifth and Sixth Grades; Miss Clara Thompson, Third and Fourth Grades; Mrs. J.J. Doe, Second Grade; Miss Lillian A. Nelson, First Grade.

Grades in Washington School—Miss Emma J. Auby, Seventh Grade; Miss Mattie Murphy, Fifth and Sixth Grades; Miss Katherine Malan, Third and Fourth Grades; Miss Grace M. Aldich, First and Second Grades.

It will be noted that this year as last year, the entire seventh grade will be accomodated in the north side school.

The industrial subjects which are this year to be installed and concerning the introduction of which the Gazette has devoted considerable space in earlier numbers will begin on the opening day with a full equipment for the accomodation of classes. For the shop work the board of education has obtained a lease of the old Gazette office near the Robertson Lumber company's yard, as well as the small building adjoining it. This smaller building will be used this year as a lumber stockroom, but the following year as a shop for iron work, for which the boys who have done one year's work in wood will be prepared. Woodwork is this year to be required for all boys from the sixth grade up through the high school and each boy will spend from two to three hours per week in the shop under the care of Mr. Swedberg. Mr. Swedberg will also have charge of the class in Agriculture which will be offered the boys in the first year of their high school work. This class will be conducted in the high school building.

The classes in cooking and sewing are to be conducted by Miss Weld in a room set apart for it in the high school building and which has been fitted up with a complete equipment for efficient work. The plans are to require sewing for all girls in fifth, sixth and seventh grades, and also in the second and third year high school. Eighth grade and first and last year high school girls attend classes in cooking. The time spent by the girls will be the same as for the boys in their shop work—from two to three hours per week depending upon the grade. Girls from the fifth, sixth and seventh grades on the north side will make two trips weekly to the high school building.

Naturally, board members and teachers desire that all pupils enroll the morning of the day of opening. It is very much an inconvenience to both teacher and pupils to have pupils sent in one day, one week, or one month after school has begun. Parents who have given the matter serious consideration always make an earnest endeavor to send their children opening day and every other day throughout the school year. They recognize the importance of early and regular attendance. They have come to know, sometimes through uncomfortable experience, such as failure of promotion, that the child can not do nine months' work in six, seven or eight months. Moreover, the new work which is this year being installed, makes it more imperative than ever that all pupils attend on the day of opening. As has been said above, accomodations in this work are for classes of fair size. When these classes have been filled, late comers may be forced to do without the benefits of this addition to the course of study.

Dan Linnihan went to Grand Forks Saturday and on his return Monday was accompanied by Mrs. Linnihan who had been at Grand Forks since Miss Mayma Linnihan had been taken to the hospital for an operation for appendicitis. Miss Linnihan's condition is much improved and she will be able to be brought to her home in a few days,

G.O.P. SEEK PEACE

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE HEARS CONGRESSMAN NYE APPEAL FOR HARMONY.

GOV. PREDICTS VICTORY

Confidence Voiced in Party Principles —Eberhart Campaign Button Appears—Doctrine Book to be Issued.

St. Paul. — Congressman Frank Nye outlined his campaign speech at the meeting of the Republican state central committee in St. Paul. It was an expression of loyalty to Republicanism, which he regards as progressive without the necessity of description, and an appeal to Republicans to cease their bickerings and quarrelings.

Mr. Nye's address was the feature of the meeting, aside from the large number of the committee present with the exception of E. J. Jones of Morris, who was detained by illness. Many of the congressional candidates were on hand and all of the state candidates with the exception of the judicial officers, and they were represented by Judge David F. Simpson of Minneapolis.

Campaign Formally Opened.

As the initial meeting of the committee, it marked the formal opening of the Republican campaign and the confidence of the leaders was voiced in the brief address by Governor Eberhart.

Reported opposition to the chairmanship of Edward E. Smith, lieutenant governor, did not make its appearance. Harmony prevailed everywhere. Governor Eberhart expressed his confidence in the high character of the campaign committee and S. Y. Gordon, candidate for lieutenant governor, who followed immediately, said he "approved every remark made by the governor."

FRANK M. NYE.
Congressman from Fifth District of Minnesota.

Chairman Smith refused to make a speech, but in the executive session which followed the open meeting he outlined the character of the campaign. He called attention to the fact that there were probably some 100,000 voters who never went to the polls and urged that every effort be made to bring them out.

Republican doctrine will be set forth in a campaign book. Credit will be claimed for the progressive legislation which has been put on the statute books. The records of the offices of the different state departments and the achievements of the Republican legislatures will be set forth as a claim for consideration.

An Eberhart campaign button made its appearance with the inscription over the picture of the governor, "He has made good," which will be used as a campaign slogan.

In addition to the addresses made by the chairman and by the candidates for state offices, brief speeches were made by Congressman Tawney and Steenerson and a more extended address by Mr. Nye.

INDIANS ARE AFTER MONEY.

White Earth.—Attorney E. P. Henderson of Washington, D. C., is in conference with members of the Chippewa band here regarding their claim against the government for swamp lands claimed by the state and recently awarded to Minnesota by the interior department, notwithstanding the claim of the Indians.

The land involves 190,000 acres, and is composed of swamp property given to the Chippewas in return for their relinquishment of other lands in Minnesota.

The government has expressed no intention to make good the loss suffered by the Indians, and the latter are consulting with Henderson regarding a plan of action looking to a just and equitable compensation for the loss of their land.

ST. PAUL'S POPULATION 214,744

St. Paul.—The population of St. Paul, according to the federal census of 1910, is 214,744. This is an increase of 51,679 over the federal census of 1909, when St. Paul was given a population figure of 163,065. This is a gain of 31.7 per cent.

The state census in 1905 gave St. Paul a population of 197,025 and the result of the federal canvass announced today shows a gain of 17,719 during the last five years.

Plan New Warroad Hotel.

Crookston.—Bids were opened by Architect B. D. Keck of Crookston, for the construction of the new hotel at Warroad. There were many bids and the general contract has not yet been awarded, but will probably go to a Bemidji firm. The plumbing and heating was awarded to V. E. Beaudry of the Crookston Plumbing and Heating Company, and the contract amounts to $9,000. The hotel will cost complete about $51,000 and will be one of the finest in northern Minnesota.

MINNESOTA'S CROPS ARE FAIR.

Maximum Yield of Wheat 41 Bushels to the Acre.

Winona. — The past week has been favorable to crops along the line of the Northwestern in southern Minnesota and South Dakota. The harvest is well progressed and some threshing has been done.

The report of General Agent T. J. Wagea, issued Saturday read:

"The weather since our last report has been excellent for harvest. The temperature has ranged from 60 to 80 degrees with a 30 minute rain between Winona and Sanborn on Aug. 1 and heavy rain from Waseca to Watertown Aug. 2. The additional moisture has been very beneficial to corn and vegetables. The harvest of small grains is about completed and will be in stack within the next ten days. Some threshing from the shock has been done and reports indicate a fine quality of all grains.

"We have received the following reports of individual yields of threshing for the past week:

Elgin.—Barley, 15, 20, 25, 26 and 45 bushels to the acre; oats, 59; wheat 25.

Viola.—Barley 20, 25 and 30; oats 25.

Kassoa.—Barley, 21 and 28; wheat, 25.

Eagle Lake.—Wheat 27 and 29.

Mankato.—Oats, 60; wheat, 26, 29, 27 and 41.

Kasson.—Wheat, 28 and 30.

Courtland.—Wheat, 20.

New Ulm.—Wheat, 23.

Springfield.—Wheat, 25.

Sleepy Eye.—Wheat, 20.

Lamberton.—Barley, 30; oats, 60.

Vesta.—Barley, 32; oats, 40.

Rovers.—Wheat, 29 and 30.

Walnut Grove.—Barley, 25; oats, 45.

Marshall.—Barley, 40; oats, 50 and 55; wheat, 30 and 31.

Minneota.—Barley, 43; wheat, 32."

MURDER LAID TO FATHER.

Montgomery Farmer Said to Have Killed Two Step Children.

Montgomery.—Martin O'Malley, a farmer residing in the western part of this county, who was released from custody two weeks ago on a charge of poisoning his two step children, there not being sufficient evidence, was again arrested by Pinkerton men, who worked two days and nights on the case.

O'Malley finally confessed, after which he was lodged in the county jail to await a hearing to be held the latter part of August. O'Malley, who is a widower, 42 years old, with seven children, married Mrs. Pragel of this city, a widow with three children.

Two of her children were taken sick. In his confession he admitted giving them medicine in which he mixed a quantity of poison, increasing the dose each time. Suspicion was aroused after the children were buried. The bodies were exhumed and the stomachs sent to the state chemist for analysis. He found poison in them. The only motive suggested is that O'Malley wanted to get the children out of the way. He does not say why. The work of County Attorney F. J. Hanzel and the Pinkerton men resulted in the arrest. His wife has not lived with him since the death of the children. She was not aware of the fact that he had poisoned her children until their bodies were exhumed. A doctor at Le Sueur diagnosed the cases as infantile paralysis.

BOOZE AT THE CAPITAL!

Prohibitionist Finds a Real Blind Pig On State Grounds.

St. Paul. — Declaring that a real blind pig is being operated on the grounds of the state capitol at St. Paul in connection with the North Central Commercial club carnival and that minors of both sexes have bought beer at this alleged "joint," J. D. Engle, Prohibition candidate for lieutenant governor and member of the Prohibition state committee, held a conference with Governor Eberhart with a view of having the temporary refreshment booth put out of commission.

Governor Eberhart, after the conference, announced that he would request the mayor of St. Paul to take immediate action to have the refreshment booth closed at once. The governor was much incensed at the condition of affairs reported by the Prohibitionist representative and stated that if the mayor did not act at once in the matter he would take it up with the city's executive and see that the alleged saloon was put out of business.

Mr Roosevelt Comes Sept. 6.

Minneapolis, Aug. 15. — Theodore Roosevelt will have breakfast in Minneapolis Sept. 6. He will be met by a committee of business men and taken to the Hotel Radisson, for the breakfast. Those accompanying the former president are W. B. Holland, treasurer of the Outlook company; Ernest H. Abbott, son of Lyman Abbott; H. J. Howland and Frank Harper, secretary to Mr. Roosevelt. After the breakfast the party will be taken to St. Paul, where Mr. Roosevelt will address the conservation congress.

Fairfax Mill Is Burned.

New Ulm.—The Eagle Roller Mill Company's 25,000 bushel elevator at Fairfax burned, entailing a loss of $5,400 on building and $10,000 on grain contained in it. The insurance on building was $3,500, and the loss on grain was fully covered. The building is thought to have been set on fire by tramps. The engine house alone was saved, being constructed of brick. The company will endeavor to purchase the elevator at Fairfax now owned by the Great Western Elevator Company.

Mr. Lyon's Necklaces Gone.

New York, N. Y.—William Loeb, Jr., collector of the port, received word from United States Marshal Alcott at Trenton, N. J., that two pearl necklaces, taken by customs inspectors from H. R. Lyons, a miller of Minneapolis, on his arrival here on the steamer Amerika, on May 28, have been forfeited to the government and will be sold in Trenton on Aug. 16. Appraiser Wanamaker places the valuation of the jewels at $9,109. In addition to forfeiting the gems, Lyons paid a fine of $5,000.

GIFT OF VIRGINIA

STATUE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON IS PRESENTED TO THE FRENCH REPUBLIC.

NOTABLE PRESENTATION

State of Virginia Is the Donor and James Mann, Chairman of Commission, Makes Brilliant Speech.

Versailles, France, Aug. 18.—In Napoleon hall of the chateau of Versailles in the presence of the French minister of war, General Brun; the French ambassador to the United States, M. Jesserand, and his wife; and the American ambassador, Robert Bacon, and Mrs. Bacon, the bronze copy of Houdon's celebrated statue of Washington in the state house at Richmond, Va., presented by the state of Virginia to the French republic, was today dedicated.

Among those present were: The Marquis de Lafayette, member of the French mission which presented to America the statue of Rochambeau, now at Washington, and former United States Senator Nathan R. Scott of West Virginia. General Brun, who presided, spoke of the statue as the greatest work of the greatest French sculptor of the eighteenth century. Col. James Mann, chairman of the Virginia commission, delivered the speech of presentation. State Senators Don P. Halsey and F. W. King of Virginia also made addresses on behalf of the state of Virginia.

"The grandest name in all the history of America is that of George Washington and the history of all the nations gives us none that is grander," said James Mann, chairman of the Virgina commission, in the course of his address at Versailles today in presenting to the people of France on behalf of Virginia a bronze copy of Houden's statue of Washington. The original of the statue stands in the state capitol at Richmond.

Mr. Mann recounted the splendid deeds of the "father of his country" both in war and in peace and paid fitting tribute to the illustrious Frenchmen who aided America in its struggle for liberty. "We remember always," he said, "that but for the aid of France that we have come in their name as the bearers of this token of their affection."

The statue was accepted in behalf of the French government by M. Pinchon, secretary of foreign affairs.

Asiatic Cholera in Italy.

Bari, Italy, Aug. 18.—The latest report of the outbreak of the Asiatic cholera, which has begun in the province of Bardielle, Pugile, shows that there have been in all thirty-three deaths.

Rome, Aug. 18.—The cause of the epidemic of cholera which is now prevailing in some of the towns and villages of the province of Bardielle Pugile, has not been officially determined. By some its origin is attributed to a tribe of Gypsies who have been wandering through the district, by others to a party of Russians from Odessa, who went to Bari to visit the relics of their patron saint, Saint Nicholas and afterwards camped about the province sight seeing.

Suffers Fractured Skull.

Grafton, N. D., Aug. 18.—With his skull fractured by a blow from a pulley, Dan McMahon, 30 years old, walked from the scene of the accident into the livery barn at which he was employed and later walked to the office of a local physician two blocks distant. A surgical examination showed that his head near the right ear had been literally ground up, and in the operation that followed several pieces of the bone were removed.

Later McMahon regained consciousness. He may recover.

Forest Fires Shifted.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 18.—New forest fires in Oregon and Washington called forth today by the direction of the war department a shifting of the troops now in the northwest in order to give the most service in fighting the fires. The forest fire situation in Glacier National Park in Montana, is well in hand, according to a telegram received today by Acting Secretary Pierce of the interior department from Chief Clerk Ucker, who arrived in the new park to assist in directing the fighting of the flames.

Business Says McMurray.

Sulphur, Okla., Aug. 18.—J. F. McMurray, whose contracts with the Indians allowed him ten per cent attorney's fees on the sale of $30,000,000 worth of land, is the subject of an investigation by congress, went on the stand before the special congressional committee today. McMurray described his contracts as a "plain business deal."

Killed Wife With Hammer.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 18.—Philip Ashby last night sought the sheriff of Benton county to Camden and confessed to murdering his wife and burning the body with their home in this county. He says he brained his wife with a hammer, and claims he was demented at the time. Neighbors had believed his story that she was unable to escape from the burning house.

ORDER IN COLUMBUS.

Governor Harmon Expresses Satisfaction With the Situation.

Columbus, O., Aug. 17.—Governor Harmon, expressed himself today as well pleased with the good order that has prevailed since the calling of troops in the street car strike. General Manager Stewart of the street railway company said that he maintained order long his lines last night while the cars were running without either the assistance of the national guard or the city police.

He has a force of detectives from Cleveland.

Manufactures Show Gain.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The value of the annual product of the manufacturers of Delaware, the first given out by the census bureau as the result of its investigations in connection with the thirteenth census, is $52,871,041. This is a gain of more than 28 per cent since 1904, when the value was $41,160,276.

There was a 29 per cent gain in salaries and wages of 17 per cent in the number of establishments and of almost 20 per cent in the capital employed. More than 2,000 officials and clerks and more than 21,000,000 laborers are employed.

SHERMAN NONCOMMITAL

ROOSEVELT'S TURN DOWN NOT CLOSED INCIDENT.

Convention Will Have Final Decision of Chairmanship and Griscom Will Finish Fight There.

New York, Aug. 17.—There was a marked calm today over the troubled waters of the republican political seas following the storm yesterday when the "old guard" in the republican state committee voted down Theodore Roosevelt's name for temporary chairman of the coming state convention.

No one was prepared to say how things would shape themselves in the day's preliminary to the state convention where the delegates, after all will finally determine who shall be the temporary presiding officer.

New York County Chairman Griscom, who presented Colonel Roosevelt's name says the fight will be carried to the primaries and to the convention.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 17.—Vice President Sherman arrived in Beverly shortly before noon today and proceeded at once to the executive offices where he had a long conference with Secretary Norton prior to going to Burgess Point to spend the afternoon with the president.

The selection of Sherman as temporary chairman of the New York republican convention and the defeat of Colonel Roosevelt lent an added interest to the vice president's visit.

Sherman, however, would not discuss the New York situation in any way. He indicated that there might be something to talk about after his interview with President Taft but he doubted it.

CHILEAN PRESIDENT DEAD.

Dies Unexpectedly in Bremen After Arrival From United States.

Bremen, Aug. 17.—The death of President Pedro Montt of Chili in this city last night was unexpected. He was preparing for bed when he was seized with cramps of the heart and died almost instantly. His wife was with him at the time. It was a few minutes before 12.

Almost all of the members of the presidential party were still up, engaged in conversation with Senor Jesa, secretary of the Chilean legation at Berlin and other attaches who had met the President and Mrs. Montt here on the arrival of the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse from New York.

As soon as it was seen that Senor Montt's condition was serious a physician was summoned, but it was too late. President Montt passed away almost instantly.

The body of Senor Montt has been embalmed and probably will be taken to the Catholic church of St. Johannes, where it will rest until its final disposition has been decided upon. Members of the late president's suite are of the opinion that the Chilean government will send a warship here to convey the remains back to Chili.

SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT.

Paris Interested In Long Distance Race of Aeroplanes.

Paris, Aug. 17.—Half Paris forsook their beds last night and remained in the streets until morning to watch the conclusion of the great cross-country aviation race, which was won by Leblanc in a Bleriot monoplane.

Auburn, also in a Bleriot, was second finishing twenty minutes behind the winner, although his total time in completing the course was somewhat longer.

Lebrane left Amiens at 503 and descended at Issy in the suburbs of Paris one hour and twenty-eight minutes later, making the total time for the 485 miles of the entire flight eleven hours, fifty-five minutes and fifty-nine seconds, an average of forty miles an hour.

On the field at Issy, where the aviators finished 200,000 spectators had gathered, the crowd including Prince Roland Bonaparte, General Dalstein, the military governor of Paris and hundreds of distinguished men and women.

Get Thirty Day's Grace.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—Saloons and liquor interests affected by the recent order of the bureau of Indian affairs, extending prohibition on ceded Indian lands in Minnesota, have been given until Oct. 15 to comply with its provisions. The original date set for its enforcement was Sept. 15. The order gave rise to numerous protests, coupled with requests for its revocation or modification, and Acting Secretary Pierce of the interior department postponed the date of its operation.

The order refers to lands adjacent to the Leech Lake and White Earth reservations, forbidding the introduction of intoxicating liquors, in order to protect the Indians. The principal protests have been received from Moorread, Minn.

Shot In Street Fight.

Hot Springs, Ark., Aug. 17.—In a desperate street battle between two alleged horse thieves and several sheriff's officers here today, George Chitwood, one of the thieves was instantly killed by a deputy sheriff and Sheriff Houpe was probably fatally wounded.

Frost at Medora.

Medora, N. D., Aug. 17.—A killing frost visited this section last night, doing considerable damage to late corn and garden truck. Cool weather is predicted for tonight again.

Store Burglarized.

Jamestown, N. D., Aug. 18.—Word was received in this city Tuesday that the general store managed by J. E. Tirney at Eckelson was burglarized Monday night and cash and goods to the amount of about $100 taken.

The manager says that the store must have been entered between midnight and 5 o'clock Tuesday morning. Thirty-five dollars were missing from the cash drawer and a large quantity of razors, pocket knives and similar merchandise had disappeared.

Every effort is being made to locate the thieves, but at noon Tuesday nothing had been found.

Took Poison by Mistake.

Casselton, N. D., Aug. 18.—Wm. F. Markey of this city died suddenly near Erie at noon today, supposedly from the effects of strychnine, which he is said to have taken by mistake. He was a young man and less than a week ago took out a policy in the Independent Order of Foresters.

Earth Tremors Recorded.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 18.—The seismograph at Georgetown university recorded slight earth tremors today. They lasted thirty-four minutes. The disturbance was so slight that the location was indefinite.

AGAIN IN CONTROL

COLUMBUS, OHIO, PROTECTED FOR SECOND TIME BY STATE SOLDIERY.

FIRE MUTINOUS POLICE

No Serious Disorders Have Occurred Since Announcement of Return Was Made—Street Cars Are Now Running.

Columbus, O., Aug. 16.—The state house yard holds many tents of privates of the 1st regiment Cincinnati, O., national guard who arrived here early today on a call by Governor Harmon for strike duty. There has been little rioting or serious disorder since the announcement that the troops would return to Columbus and the street cars are running on something like schedule time.

The militia is in absolute control of the situation, although martial law has not been proclaimed. The soldiers cook their meals on the state house grounds.

Director of Public Safety McCune today formally discharged the thirty-three mutinous policemen who refused to go on the cars when ordered by Mayor Marshall. Adjutant General Weybrecht has made a request for $100,000 to cover expenses.

May Not Use Pass Books.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Postmaster General Hitchcock has received a report that the committees on organization of the postal savings bank systems are in favor of the use of certificates of deposits instead of passbooks as previously decided upon by the committee in framing its tentative plan. The system proposed contemplates a mechanical method for keeping the records of the postal savings banks which would render unnecessary a great part of the bookkeeping that would be involved in the passbook system.

Under this plan every depositor of amounts from $1 to $9 will be given a certificate punched in duplicate to show the amount of the deposit. He will be required to sign this certificate in duplicate, the postmaster retaining one of the certificates. On the back of this evidence of the deposit will be engraved interest computations showing exactly the amount of interest due at the end of any interest period.

Ballinger Defines Conservation.

Klamath Falls, Ore., Aug. 16.—In a speech at a dinner given in his honor at Eagle Ridge yesterday, Secretary of the Interior Ballinger said that fidelity and economy in the conduct of business, and common sense in the handling of the country's resources, constituted conservation.

Mr. Ballinger said in part:

"Every acre of agricultural land in the United States is bound to be needed to raise food products for our own people. The time is here in this country when we can skim the cream and ignore a system for making the best use of everything we have.

"While in the past we may have seemed wasteful, we have also been progressive. The time has now come when we have got to be economical, and we must use common sense in the handling of the resources we have. That is all there is in conservation."

Roosevelt Turned Down.

New York, Aug. 16.—Colonel Roosevelt suffered sharp defeat in his home state today, when the republican state committee by a vote of 20 to 15 rejected the resolution naming his as temporary chairman of the republican state convention to be held at Saratoga on Sept. 27.

The "old guard" led by State Chairman Woodruff and Wm. Barnes, jr., of Albany encompassed the defeat of Colonel Roosevelt, whom several of the state leaders charged with attempting to dictate the fortunes of the republican party in the state.

Crookston Man Suicides.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 16.—With the ceiling of his bedroom spattered with his brains and pieces of his skull driven into the ceiling and walls and scattered about the floor, the dead body of Arvid Peterson was found at his home last evening, two minutes after the report of a shot came from the house in front of which the father and wife of the dead man were standing.

It was a plain case of suicide, the shot gun with which the deed had been committed, being found at his side. He literally blew the whole top of his head off.

Few Negro Delegates.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 16.—The republican state convention will meet today to nominate a candidate for governor in opposition to Malcolm R. Patterson, the democratic nominee and to name a candidate for railroad commissioner for West Tennessee. The notable feature of the convention is the scarcity of negroes as delegates.

Struck by Lightning.

Ardoch, N. D., Aug. 16.—While driving a coal wagon, two miles south of here tonight, Clarence Vold, employed with a threshing crew, was struck by lightning, being rendered unconscious. The team which Vold was driving was killed outright.

ORDER IN COLUMBUS.

Governor Harmon Expresses Satisfaction With the Situation.

Columbus, O., Aug. 17.—Governor Harmon, expressed himself today as well pleased with the good order that has prevailed since the calling of troops in the street car strike. General Manager Stewart of the street railway company said that he maintained order long his lines last night while the cars were running without either the assistance of the national guard or the city police.

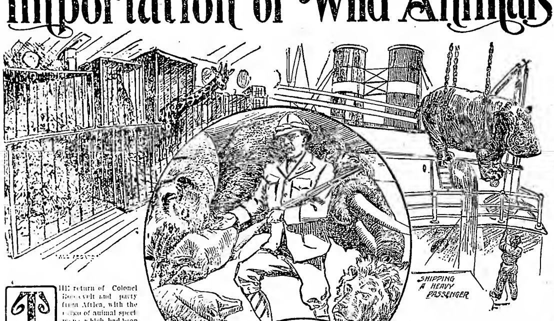
He has a force of detectives from Cleveland.

Manufactures Show Gain.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The value of the annual product of the manufacturers of Delaware, the first given out by the census bureau as the result of its investigations in connection with the thirteenth census, is $52,871,041. This is a gain of more than 28 per cent since 1904, when the value was $41,160,276.

There was a 29 per cent gain in salaries and wages of 17 per cent in the number of establishments and of almost 20 per cent in the capital employed. More than 2,000 officials and clerks and more than 21,000,000 laborers are employed.

Importation of Wild Animals



SHIPPING A HEAVY PASSENGER

CAPTURING A HERD OF WILD ELEPHANTS

THE return of Colonel Roosevelt and party from Africa, with the cargo of animal specimens which had been killed during their invasion of the jungle, caused a New York dealer in wild beasts to talk interestingly of the business in which his firm is engaged. There are nearly a dozen firms in New York city that carry on an immense business in the transportation of animals fresh from the jungle. And this number, of course, does not include such immense foreign animal firms as the Hagenbeck's. It is a paying business, as indeed, are all businesses where the demand exceeds the supply. The demand for wild beasts is far greater than the supply, and as a consequence prices are good, and the dealers men of wealth. The extent of the demand may be appreciated when one considers that most of the great cities in the United States have zoological parks or menageries, and that the animals are constantly being purchased by them. Then there are private collectors and circuses and the like, that are ever ready to pay the highest prices for desirable animals. The animal dealer who could secure and bring to this country three or four gorillas would make a small fortune. But no dealer has ever succeeded in doing this. The gorillas die in a few weeks in captivity, they could not stand an ocean trip for a [illegible]

A rusty old German liner lumbers noisily into Quarantine, and then lies motionless on the tide. An officer, with broad, red, bewhiskered face, stands at the head of the companion ladder, and he smiles a peculiar smile, as a husky screaming ululation rises from below. "The animals are getting hungry," he explains; "you know we have several hundred of them on the 'tween decks. Want to see them? All right." In another minute probably the most competent animal man in the world is at our side. He is not a trainer, or even a tamer; he is more. He is a sort of animal cook, and his special business is the personal management of wild animal tours. He receives them—lions, tigers, leopards, elephants, everything else—at Hamburg, where they have been brought fresh from their native wilds, and not only superintends their shipment aboard a vessel bound for New York, but he sails with them to make sure that they arrive safely and in good health. And to make sure that if the tiger gets off on his diet and needs a nice fresh live rabbit to tone up his system, this man will be aware of the fact almost before the tiger is—and, ergo, a nice big jumping bunny is sacrificed in accordance with the precepts of wild beast materia medica. Then, too, one can never tell just when the big boa is going to rouse from his last gorge; when he does he wants a toothsome young goat, and he wants it quick. It is a part of the animal man's duties to anticipate the boa's appetite with all possible expedition.

He is a quiet, unassuming man, with stoop shoulders and bushy whiskers, and he leads the way to the 'tween decks without a word. Perhaps the uninitiated may believe that a tour through the animal section of a freight-carrying vessel is an unimpressive experience. Well, let them try it and see! This can be said at the outset—it is somewhat different from a menagerie. It is something to come into close proximity to a hundred and odd wild animals that have been ruthlessly snatched from their lairs in Africa or Asia, or elsewhere, and clapped into little barred boxes, not as large as dry goods cases; slammed in and out of dark holes in the vessels of several lines on the way to Hamburg; then finally placed in the stygian 'tween decks of a German hooker.

The swinging cross seas of the North Atlantic have not improved their tempers, or their nervous systems, and the visitor at Quarantine is quickly impressed with that fact. The howls and whines and the barks cease abruptly as the stranger enters. For they bring the smell of land, and the great beasts sniff inquiringly, and hungrily, too.

The cages lined both sides of the gloomy space, with a little passageway between the boxes. Perhaps this passageway was three feet wide, not more. The cages were piled two and sometimes three deep. In the bottom cage, for instance, would be a tiger; in the next above a smaller animal, say, a leopard or a lynx, and above that a parrot, or a bunch of meerkats. Think of it! A three foot passageway, with ferocious animals, stretching along for 100 feet on all sides. Talk about nightmares! The reporter's hair stiffened out like so many pieces of wire, and he wished most fervently that he had not come. It was more agreeable, he felt, to see these animals in a menagerie where the cages are ample and the bars an inch thick.

"Better keep in the middle of the aisle," says one of the animal men; "these fellows sometimes reach out for you."

Words such as these, of course, hardly tended to reassure.

It really was too dark to see much. One caught a view of the cages stretching away in gloomy perspective until lost in the darkness, of rows of glowing green eyes and great teeth with the flash of red tongue writhing between. A zebra switched the reporter with his tail and he turned, only to jump almost out of his skin as an elephant touched him on the other shoulder with his trunk. He was hardly over his scare when, zip! a leopard reached out after his coat tail.

In one way this lower deck section was a good place to visit; the joy and relief in being able to leave it furnished the biggest and most absorbing sensations that this monotonous world has held for the reporter in the last few months at least.

Bartels & Co., are the largest dealers in wild beasts in this country.

"A large wild animal dealer," said our informant, "imports considerably more than a hundred large wild animals each year. For instance, our record for one year which I happen to have at hand, shows that we imported in that period 20 elephants, 35 camels, 20 tigers, 5 lions, 45 leopards, 20 pumas, 18 panthers and hundreds of birds and monkeys and small things. Cubs—lion and tiger and bear cubs—are in special demand by wealthy families. They are reared and petted like kittens, but in the end they outgrow their playfulness and the families who bought them from us are only too willing to pay us to come and take them away when they attain any sort of growth. We have received many orders for hippopotami, but the beasts are hard to capture and ninety-nine times out of a hundred they do not live through the voyage. In fact, menageries throughout the country have to depend of late years upon the progeny of the hippopotami in Central Park, New York, for specimens.

"Like all animal dealers, we maintain expert animal catchers in all parts of the world, and it is these men who fill the ships which arrive here.

The Hagenbecks have two collecting stations, one in Calcutta and the other in Aden, Arabia. From this point the animal catchers go forth and spend months in the wilds, returning to the stations with their catch. We ourselves send catchers direct from this country—at present we have men in South America, on the hot sands of Africa, in the Himalayas, and elsewhere, filling our orders. One of them was recently in Arabia on a camel hunt, two are now in the East Indies trapping tigers, and so they are spread about in places where wild beasts abide.

"Sometimes we receive an order for a large number of elephants. We telegraph this order to our catchers in the elephant country, who, after organizing the natives into a hunting band, proceed to collect the desired number. A huge inclosure is built in one of the main elephant paths, and at night when the big animals come to feed they are driven into the inclosure or keddah by means of fires and shouts and the firing of guns. Beaters on tame elephants then ride into the inclosure and rope the beasts, and in a short time they become accustomed to being led about. Elephants are naturally mild, and were this not the case they never could be captured, because of their great, hulking strength.

"The natives also captured elephants in pits, a barbarously cruel method in which more than 50 per cent. are killed by the fall. The animal catchers take tigers and lions in pits also. They dig a hole, cover it with matting and place on this matting a dead goat. At night the lion or tiger steals from his lair, sees the goat and springs upon it. The matting, of course, gives way and down into the pit goes the roaring beast. Then the catchers run up and throw nets into the pit and the struggling animal soon becomes hopelessly entangled. Nooses are then lowered into the pit and the beast is dragged out to the cage. Six out of every ten are killed in this process. Leopards and jaguars and the smaller animals are caught in traps just as mice are caught, and monkeys are also trapped. Such great beasts as the rhinoceros and the like are not captured by the animal men, but are secured from native potentates, who give them away as a mark of special esteem or barter them for brass and other trifling but showy gewgaws.

"We take comparatively few lions from the wilds now. It is cheaper to buy them in captivity. Polar, grizzly and Russian bears also are mainly bought and sold in captivity; but other wild beasts are taken in their lairs."

FOOD IN LONDON IS CHEAPER

"For many years," said a man who came back from a European tour the other day, according to an exchange, "I have been in the habit of getting into an argument with friends after my return about the prices of food in the best restaurants in New York and London. I have been contending that New York restaurants were putting up their prices all the time and some of my friends have tried to convince me that you could get a meal cheaper at the higher priced restaurants in New York than in London.

"I determined this time to collect some real data for comparison and as a result I have kept the bills of many meals I had in London. It is my intention to duplicate the meals I had over there at some of the restaurants here, item for item. I did this with one of them the other day and demonstrated that such a meal London is a lot cheaper than New York.

"Here is the bill for a luncheon I had at one of the most expensive hotels in London:

	s.	d.
Hors d'oeuvres varies	0	9
Pilaffe of sweetbreads	2	0
Asparagus	2	0
Cheese (Neufchatel)	0	6
Coffee	0	6
Beer	1	0
Totals	6	9

"Now, six shillings ninepence at $4.885 to the pound is $1.65. As for the dishes themselves they could not have been surpassed anywhere. For the hors d'oeuvres I had a dozen different dishes to select from.

"Did you ever find hors d'oeuvres varies on the bill of fare of a New York restaurant? Try it. Of course you may get them at a table d'hote, but I mean on the carte du jour of a restaurant where you pay separately for each thing you eat.

"In Paris there is a restaurant in the Avenue de l'Opera, where you can have about twenty different varieties of little fish and cold salads and appetizers for about 15 or 16 cents. It took me a long time to find this in a first-class house here, and then when I did so it was in a restaurant which is not usually considered among the most expensive in the city. Here hors d'oeuvres varies masqueraded under the title of 'buffet russe.' They charged me 50 cents for it, as against the 18 charged in the London restaurant.

"My pilaffe of sweetbreads tasted exactly like that I had in London and cost exactly the same, 50 cents. I ordered some asparagus. On the bill of fare they had asparagus with Hollandaise sauce for 40 cents, but I wanted it cold, with French dressing. They did not tell me it would be any more, but for it they charged me 70 cents. For the Neufchatel cheese they charged 20 cents and for the coffee 15. The robbery came on the beer.

"In London if you want a little pitcher of beer they serve you an excellent brew of Pilsener or Wurzburger in a little sealed vessel holding a pint for a shilling. I asked the waiter to bring me a small pitcher of beer on draught, knowing they did not serve the beer as in London. He brought me a pitcher and charged me 70 cents for it.

"Now my bill came to $2.65, or exactly $1 more than the same food and drink had cost me in London. I gave the New York waiter a quarter and he scarcely nodded. I gave the London waiter sixpence and he thanked me so that I could hear him."

CONDITION PRECEDENT.

"The religion of some people is too lenient," said Bishop Heslin in a recent address in Nantucket.

"Some people suggest to me, in their view of religion, a little girl whose teacher said to her:

"'Mary, what must we do first before we can expect forgiveness for our sins?'

"'We must sin first,' the little girl answered.—Nashville Banner.

TO RAISE FINEST FURS

Project to Keep $14,000,000 From Going Abroad.

Dr. C. C. Young Imports Flock of Karakule Sheep and Describes Success of Crossing Them With American Breeds.

Chicago.—A project designed to keep in the United States the $14,000,000 now going abroad annually for the Astrakhan, Persian broadtail and krimmer furs so fashionable among wealthy Americans has been launched by Dr. C. C. Young, a former Chicago physician, now commissioner of agriculture for the State of Coahuila, Mexico.

It is the breeding of Karakule sheep, the basis of all the fine furs that come from Persia and other portions of Central Asia. He has succeeded in bringing to America after great expense and much trouble, on account of the rigid laws forbidding the importation of Asiatic sheep because of the danger of importing with them Asiatic diseases, a flock of full-blood Karakules and has begun the crossing of them with American sheep at his ranch at Menor, Coahuila.

Dr. Young was born in Bessarabia, a province of south Russia, and there was familiar as a boy with the Karakule sheep which produce the beautiful furs, although he then never saw a full-blood Karakule. He came to America when sixteen years old, took up the study of medicine, was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1901, and was for a time on the advisory staff of the Cook County hospital.

When the throat infection for which he is now receiving treatment made it imperative that he give up his practice in Chicago and live an outdoor life in a southern climate his mind reverted to the Karakule sheep and he decided to occupy his time with them. He finally surmounted the difficulties in the way of importing the sheep, and he now has a growing flock of them on his Mexican ranch. Recently he described enthusiastically the proportions to which the business may grow in the United States.

"The Karakule sheep are the basis of all these fine furs," said Dr. Young, "and the value of the fur depends upon the percentage of Karakule in it. Crossing the Karakule with the common scrub sheep of Persia, we get the Persian broadtail. Crossing it with the Astrakhan long-haired sheep we get Astrakhan, and crossing it with the common merino sheep of the Crimea we get the krimmer fur.

"These sheep, however, are vastly inferior to the sheep of the United States, and I decided that by crossing the Karakule sheep with various breeds of American sheep I would get even better fur that, produced in the United States, would be marketable at a profit at a far lower price than is paid for the Persian furs. My experiments so far have more than justified this conclusion."

Dr. Young exhibited some of the pelts he has taken from the lambs resulting from the crosses between the American sheep and the imported Karakules. The crosses between the Lincolnshire and Shropshire and the Karakule have given a fur that is of a far finer texture and much more beautiful luster than the imported furs.

SNAKES IN SPORTING CLASS

Pennsylvania Reptiles Make Good at Fishing Trout—Also Attack Farmer's Pigs.

Altoona, Pa.—Two recent incidents prove the Blair county snake to be in the sporting class, though not always quite lucky in his hunting and fishing experiences.

Before returning to the city from his summer home at Royer, Postmaster George Fox of this city went down to Piney creek to look for trout.

As Fox was crossing the bridge he heard a commotion at the water's edge and, looking down, saw a water snake trying to swallow a seven-inch trout. Procuring his landing net, for he is a skilled fisherman, Fox, assisted by George D. Cook, a Harrisburg merchant, who has been his guest for several days, landed both the snake and the trout. The snake never let go of the trout until a cudgel landed on its neck. The trout later made a nice meal for an Altoona friend.

Only the day before an Altoona railroader discovered the same snake, an old inhabitant of the pool, devouring trout, but the reptile got away. Its chief diet for a long time has been trout, it being an adept at catching them.

Hearing a pig emitting unearthly squeals, Harry Jones, a farmer, near Ebensburg, hastened to his pig stys and was astounded to find one of his pigs encircled by a blacksnake and slowly being squeezed to death. Jones grabbed up a rake and killed the reptile, which measured six feet four inches in length, four inches in diameter and 12 inches in circumference.

There is always a lot of bluff and bluster about a soda fountain that doesn't really mean anything.

CATS SLAUGHTER GAME BIRDS

Semi-Wild Animals Become Serious Menace in Oregon—Plan for Extermination.

Marshfield, Ore.—Calvin Wright, one of Coos county's game wardens, gives it as his opinion that the worst enemy of the game birds in this locality is the house cat which has become wild. Mr. Wright has just returned from an extensive trip up and down the coast country, and he declares that the cats are doing away with the game birds.

Coos county is a great place for cats, both in the cities and the country districts, and they have increased with such rapidity that there are not homes sufficient for all of them. As a consequence the cats have become wild and run in the woods. Mr. Wright says that the increase of these semi-wild animals in the woods is much greater than would be imagined. He says that the cats not only break up the nests and kill or drive away the old birds, but that they devour scores of the young before they are able to protect themselves.

So great has become the menace that Deputy Wright will take up the cat matter with State Game Warden Stephenson and will advocate the paying of a bounty for the killing of cats which are not properly confined.

Chicago is an Indian word—Cheecaquo, a wild onion, wild onions having grown profusely on the river banks.

HOW TO KEEP BUTTER PURE.

London Firm Sells Microbes to Be Introduced Into Cream to Kill Decay Germs.

London.—Inoculated butter—guaranteed to keep fresh for months—into which millions of beneficial bacteria have been introduced for the purpose of preserving it, will be in common use in the near future, and the part hitherto played by boric acid in butter will henceforward be played by the active microbe.

The production of these preservative micro-organisms is the object of a new company, which has recently opened its offices at Cricklewood, and here large laboratories are being installed for the purpose of raising millions of billions of bacteria for use in the dairies of the world.

The manager of the new company said that the discovery of the preservative microbe was the result of years of scientific research.

"Its object," he said, "is to fight other microbes that are found in butter which have a harmful effect upon it—that of turning it rancid. The only way of combating these germs has hitherto been by the use of preservative chemicals, which are harmful adulterants.

"But now my firm has succeeded in finding an antidote germ to the harmful one, and by introducing it into the milk before churning butter is made which will keep fresh and pure for a long time.

"The inoculation of the milk has the effect, broadly speaking, of setting up a fight between the opposing armies of germs and the bad ones, that would destroy the freshness of the butter, are destroyed by the harmless ones which are introduced."

The microbes are sold in the form of a clear liquid, in small bottles, which is added to buttermilk and prepared in a certain way before use. When the preparation is ready one gallon of it is added to every 20 gallons of cream in the butter churn, the rest of the butter making process proceeding in the usual way.

The prices of the cultures used in these processes vary from 75 cents to $2.50 a bottle, and full instructions to dairymen are issued with each consignment. The cultures are equally effective in margarine.

King Inherits Old Shirt.

London.—Some queer royal relics have been brought to light at Windsor castle. Preparations are being made for the addition to the royal library of some exhibition cases for the display of these objects of historic interest. Among the collection is the baby linen used by Charles I. and the lace shirt the ill-fated monarch wore on the day of his execution in Whitehall as an extra garment because of the cold.

HONORS FOR PRESIDENT-ELECT OF BRAZIL

MARSHAL HERMES DA FONSECA, PRESIDENT-ELECT OF BRAZIL.

THE PALACE OF THE PRESIDENT, RIO DE JANEIRO.

WASHINGTON.—Hermes da Fonseca, president elect of Brazil, landed in New York on August 3, and the elaborate plans for his entertainment during the month he will spend in this country, are being carried out. Charge Silva of the Brazilian embassy arranged for his presentation to President Taft at Beverly, and immediately after that formality the distinguished visitor went to Valley Forge, Pa., to meet Secretary Knox. Later Gen. da Fonseca, who is an accomplished soldier, was taken to West Point and Annapolis to inspect the academies there.

SPOONING IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Adam and Eve Made Love in Eden, Therefore Their Children Should Do the Same.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Public courtship was upheld in the pulpit by Rev. G. L. Morril, pastor of the People's church. This was in answer to a popular appeal made to the city authorities to stop "spooning in the parks."

"Adam and Eve were placed in Eden to spoon, and their children have been at it ever since. Mingling winds, nodding flowers, hills that kiss the skies, creeks that mingle with rivers, and waves that clasp each other, are but a commentary on Solomon's words that 'two are better than one,'" said he.

"The rich have palatial parlors or private parks in which to make love, or they go to ocean or mountain by auto, train or ship, where they plan marriages that often end in divorce and death.

"The poor walk or go in street cars to parks and lakes, where they read books of nature and learn lessons of repose, cheer, humility, economy and beneficence, then meet and mate and make happy marriages and home. Lovemaking, which is proper in the home or parlor, is just as proper in a public park. What is wrong is wrong everywhere, in public or private."

WOULD DATE ALL HEN'S EGGS

Colorado Legislature to Be Asked to Enact Such Law at Next Regular Session.

Denver, Col.—At the next regular session of the state legislature a bill will be introduced to compel farmers to stamp eggs offered for sale with their names and the dates they are laid. The bill will be introduced by Harvey E. Garman from Denver county.

The object of the law, Mr. Garman says, is to enable the purchaser to tell just how fresh an egg is when he buys it. This will be a public benefaction, he thinks, as most of the people who come to Colorado for their health depend upon fresh eggs.

"It is not an easy thing to purchase eggs that are fresh," said Mr. Garman the other day, commenting on the proposed law. "And the consumptive seeking health knows this better than anyone else. The grocer always has on hand what he calls 'fresh' eggs, 'seconds' and 'cracks,' and some grocers have been known to keep in stock eggs which on their books are marked 'rots.' The eggs marked 'fresh' mean nothing more than that the eggs are the freshest the grocer happens to have on hand."

Odd Hard Times Tale.

Norfolk, Va.—Forty-five per cent. of the Irish potato crop in the large trucking belt adjacent to Norfolk is still in the ground and farmers say will for the most part have to rot unless present low prices in the northern markets improve so as to justify digging and shipping. The immediate outlook is for a disastrous year to the truckers hereabouts.

Hats On or Off in Church

Public Advised to Exercise Patience Until the Day of CartWheel Headgear Is No More.

Press and pulpit are still harping on the one string in the fruitless effort to diminish the size of women's hats, in other words, to regulate the fashions in women's headgear. Male correspondents are also having their innings in the endeavor to solve the knotty problem of persuading the fair sex not to follow style, but to follow man's idea of what the women of the country ought to wear. These combined efforts, however, will have as much effect upon womankind as Mrs. Partington's endeavor to keep back the ocean with a broom. Fashion rules supreme, her votaries are legion, and will follow her dictates, whether it be large hats or small hats, switches, coronets, puffs, "rats" or curls. The masculine gender might as well hold its peace. It will do the world no good to rail about women's hats; women will have their own way in this matter, let public and press scold as it will. One clergyman was foolish enough to state for publication that "big hats were a hindrance to the salvation of souls." Let him bar his paws to the fashions of the day in women's gear and he will have very few souls to his credit. The only sensible remark made by a clergyman on the subject is attributed to a New York divine who said women may wear hats as large as they desire in his church, "if necessary a woman may have a whole pew to herself." Exercise a little patience, friends, the styles will shortly change, when small hats and big sleeves will return to bother us.—Millinery Trade Review.

Even in Minnesota there is alarm in certain political quarters as to the direction Teddy's "big stick" will swing.

As the campaign waxes it seems inevitable that Speaker Cannon will be obliged to promise not to vote for himself.

Ed Smith would probably like to know whether the conservation congress is charged with soda water or dynamite.

The state fair, the conservation congress, President Taft and Teddy are to be at St. Paul next week. It will be a busy occasion for the state of Minnesota.

It is almost impossible for the governor of Minnesota to get a letter delivered to the mayor of St. Paul. The postal inspection depatment should be called to the rescue.

Bob Dunn calls attention to the fact that if the state tax levy as recommended by Governor Eberhart "the average tax-payer will reap small benefit, while the steel trust will save about $125,000."

The next meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association will be held in December. Election will be over, and the politicians can afford to give the real friends of state development a chance to be heard.

The Alexandria Post News has discovered that Frank Day is holding back John Lind's refusal in order to prevent the county optionists from putting a candidate for governor in the field. It is hard to follow the P-N's reasoning, since that paper has said that Governor Eberhart will get all of the county option votes anyway.

President Taft informs the people, through the medium of an open letter, that the tariff was recently revised with a view to the prevention of monopoly. In other words the Payne-Aldrich bill is a direct slap at the rubber trust, the woolen trust and the steel trust. How strange that these facts did not become known until this late day!

A modern dude with narrow striped clothes, saddle colored shoes, a loud necktie, hair parted over his nose and smoking a cigarette addressed his girl thus: "If you was me and i was you, what would you do?" She hesitantly smiled and said: "I would take off that hideous tie, put that cigarette in the stove, part my hair on one side, then pray to God for brains."

The merchant who spends money to advertise his business and town is deserving of much consideration and patronage by the people, and is always the store that saves the purchasers money. The advertiser not only boosts his town, by selling goods at right prices, but without exception is a liberal, progressive citizen of his town and community.

Uncle Sam is about to economize time and expenses in the issuance of a new form of money order. The new order will include the receipt for the sender and a detachable coupon to be retained by the postmaster of the receiving office, thus doing away with the sending of an advice in a separate envelope. The new blank will go into effect as soon as the present supplies of the old blanks are exhausted.

An exchange says they have invented a new kind of social amusement. It is called an avendupois party. All the girls are weighed, and the weight of each written on a piece of paper and put into a hat, and the young men must draw. The young man must go to supper with the girl whose weight he draws, and must pay for her supper at one half cent per pound. It is a case of where a girl is expected to be worth her weight in copper.

One of these day the towns in northern Minnesota will learn that they cannot obtain or hold manufacturing enterprises so long as freight rates are made with the sole object of giving to St. Paul and Minneapolis the advantage. Minnesota has but one large manufacturing center outside of the twin cities, and the natural advantage of water rates has made Duluth's position impregnable. A distance tariff is the only measure that will save the country towns. It is time that commercial clubs and boards of trade realized this fact.

A man down south convicted of stealing a cargo of hides was released by the higher courts because the indictment didn't say whether they were horse, cow or goat hides. Had that point failed the defense, we suppose, might have still saved the day on the plea that the indictment did not say whether the stealing was done with the right hand or the left, says the Winona Independent. Or whether he was a blonde or a brunette; or whether his eyes were blue, brown, gray or black.

James T. McCleary, who still has a hankering to again break into congress is out with an attack on John Lind claiming that he is seeking the presidency of the University of Minnesota. The story is being ridiculed from one end of the state to the other and is probably the worst "break" that McCleary ever made, says the St. Cloud Times. A few more such stories as that from prominent Republican politicians and there will be no question as to John Lind accepting the Democratic nomination for governor and plenty of fireworks in the campaign.

The Minnesota Experiment Station agrees with Prof. E. K. Slater, that when a dairy cow is utilized as a market for Minnesota grain, cheese factories and creameries will be abundant and contribute their full share to the prosperity and the wealth of Minnesota; that the farmers will learn to co-operate and work together for each other's mutual advantage in creamery building, in stock breeding, in marketing farm products and in buying farm supplies. When stock is the farmer's grain market, "the little brass kettle" will not affect the price; the farmer will have less stuff to haul to market over poor roads and have profitable trips to town.

It is announced that the state tax levy will be reduced one half mill, and charges are freely made that the plan was favored, it not suggested, by the steel trust and other large corporations. To the average taxpayer the reduction means little, but to the steel trust it represents an item of at least one hundred thousand dollars, says the St. Peter Herald. While Governor Johnson was in office the assessed valuation on mining property on the iron range was increased three-fold, but the first republican administration to take office destroys the effects of that work by decreasing the rate. Plainly, the state has need of a few men of force and character, like "Honest" John Lind.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Coleraine Optic: Time was not far back when the boodler was called a statesman, or, at worst, a shrewd politician. It is to the great advantage of this country that he is now known by his right name.

Northome News: The daily papers say that Lind is "undecided." That means Frank Day has got things coming his way and that Lind will accept in the end.

Walker Pilot: There appears to be too many Luther Burbanks in congress, as far as professional grafting is concerned.

Mankato Free Press: Theodore Roosevelt as publicity agent for the railroads in these United States. This is the latest piece of interesting news that has been wired from Washington. It is said that if the colonel will but signify his willingness to accept the position he can fix the size of his salary. The heads of the transportation lines recognize the bald fact that the former president is a past muster at publicity.

Perham Enterprise: There were over $4,000,000 in the state treasury when the treasurer's books were balanced last month, yet the state will be borrowing money to meet expenses before the first of the next year.

Shevlin Herald: The farmer who owns a farm in Clearwater county is the particular person who is well fixed. Banks may fail and factories close, workmen strike and mines suspend, merchants fail and cities burn, times may be panicky and even crops may be short—but the farmer who owns his acres will get along. He will live in comfort and quiet, and plenty to eat, drink and wear, and nothing to worry about. Yet there are lots of them here in this Clearwater soil who do not appreciate their situation.

Brainerd Dispatch: Potatoes are climbing up the ladder along with other necessaries of life, and the man with a good crop of tubers this fall will be able to wear diamonds or take a trip abroad.

Stillwater Gazette: The northern Minnesota Development association, with headquarters at Bemidji, is in the game, which, if carried to a successful termination, means prosperity for our state.

Foley Independent: Now is the time to go after the various legislative candidates to find out how they stand upon reapportionment. After the primaries it will be too late.

Ortonville Herald-Star: When our state university established a chair of good roads the despised office of highway overseer, or road boss, will take on new dignity and importance.

MORE ABOUT CONSERVATION CONGRESS

Possibly he may learn later that the ring isn't fastened as securely in their noses as he thinks.

Exploiting National Attractions.

Secretary Cosgrove appears to have arrived at the conclusion that he has added Taft and Roosevelt to the attractions of the state fair pike, and is already posting his barkers as to the talk put up to separate the country jakes from their coin. Taft and Roosevelt as the program is laid out, are to be at the fair grounds one afternoon during fair week. The program is to have a barker drive them around through the grounds to excite public curiosity, at the same time announcing that in a few minutes these star attractions will be in front of the grand stand to do a stunt at spellbinding. "The only chance you will ever have," the barker will announce, to see a real live president and a live ex-president in action, step up to the box office, ladies and gentlemen, and buy your tickets for the grand stand. Only 25 cents for the geatest show on earth. You can't afford to miss it", and so on. No wonder with such management Minnesota's fair leads the world as a money getter.

Tawney's Troubles.

Naturally the First District is holding its breath to catch what words may fall from Roosevelt's mouth. Roosevelt, it will be remembered, talked right out about Tawney in one of his messages and in the subsequent controversy handed him a ticket of membership to the Ananias club. Tawney retorted in effect by saying, "You're another." Subsequently Tawney brought libel suit against an Albert Lea paper, one of the points at issue being whether Roosevelt had misquoted him. To ad to the causes of friction it may be said that Tawney first cut off supplies upon which Roosevelt relied to hunt out public malefactors of wealth, and later he added to his aggravations by defeatnig the appropriation upon which the Forrestry service relied to keep the public informed about what was doing in the way of national conservation. As a result of all this what Roosevelt thinks about Tawney wouldn't look well in print, and what Tawney thinks about Roosevelt is usually couched in language which does not admit of publication. The question is: When Roosevelt comes to Minnesota and finds that a partizan of him and his policies is putting his own fight against Tawney, is he going to give him a word of encouragement? Or will Roosevelt emulate Clapp's example and let the progressives fight their own battles. At any rate if he dips in we may look to see the fur fly, and Tawney's friends are naturally on the anxious seat.

A Political Falstaff.

By the way, it's funny about Clapp, such a bold insurgent as he professes to be. Think of him supporting Tawney who is recognized in Washington as being one of the main stays of the reactionary ring. Then there's Lindbergh. Lindbergh has his work cut out for him. There isn't a reactionary politician in his district who isn't after him with a sharp stick and boosting McGarry. I am told that McGarry has countenance and substantial aid from more exalted and more powerful quarters. Lindbergh is fighting his battles alone. The congressional machine has given him the cold shoulder. Now one would think that seeing an insurgent colleague in such sore straits, so bold and fierce a Progressive as Moses Clapp would rush into the fray and lay about him lustily in defence of the good cause of which Lindbergh was the most prominent congressional exponent in the state. Not a bit of it. Clapp, who goes out of his way to boost Tawney, crawls into his hole when Lindbergh's fight calls loudly for his aid. Queer, isn't it? What's the matter with Clapp anyway? Who has cowed the bold spirit of the Black Eagle of Fergus Falls?

Ed. At His Crooked Tricks.

Ed. Smith, it appears, has already given the people of the state a sample of the style of "clean campaign" which he and Eberhart have evolved. He got some one out in the country to write to Frank Day a letter as from a friend of his on the Democratic situation. Of course Mr. Day answered in the same spirit talking candidly as to a friend. Then Ed. got the letter; got copies of it made and published simultaneously where he thought it would do the most good. Mr. Day it appears said something to the effect that the people were getting almighty tired of parties putting up Scandinavian candidates to catch the Scandinavian vote. With that Ed. thinks to work on Scandinavian prejudice and boost the prospects of the Republican Scandinavian candidate for governor. Now isn't that statesmanship for you? Of course Ed. knows how to run a campaign.

Telling a Wholesome Truth.

But what if Mr. Day did say that the people were getting tired of this Scandinavian business. Aren't they? When a man is nominated for governor who has no other recommendations, isn't it time? And if it's so, what's the harm in saying it's so? The fact is that it's high time that some one who would be listened to said precisely the thing Frank Day said. This trading on one's nationality is gone quite far enough, and the man does voters who are Americans before they are Scandinavians a service and without doubt reflects their sentiments.

The Doll of the Party Holders.

I met a party of gentlemen the other day who were debating which of the two—Taft or Roosevelt—would receive the greatest ovation when they spoke before a Minnesota audience. The majority of them were state capitol officials. I don't remember exactly how I put it off when they asked me, but I am ready now to venture the assertion that if the greater applause is apportioned according to the wishes and plans of the state capitol crowd, it will without question go to Taft.

—PAUL PRY.

She Didn't Weaken.

The desperate boarder vowed that the next time his landlady set before him a breakfast that a flea would get thin on he would make her so ashamed of herself that she would be driven to give him enough to eat out of self respect. His chance came the morning after he had registered his oath. He hastily swallowed the scant rations set before him, then telephoned to a restaurant for a breakfast of ham and eggs, wheat cakes and coffee. When the meal arrived he dispatched it hungrily. The landlady watched him with evident uneasiness, but made no comment.

The next morning the desperate boarder approached the dining room expectantly. He wondered what the landlady would do. He soon found out. The same old light breakfast was brought in from the kitchen.

"Have you had enough?" the landlady asked when he had finished.

"Indeed I haven't," said the desperate boarder.

She stepped to the telephone and called up the restaurant.

"Mr. Brown is ready for his extra breakfast of ham and eggs and coffee," she said.—New York Times.

Deeds That Bless the Doer.

Mere life is vile. I may have done
Deeds not unworthy and have won
Unwilling fame, though all men blame
This heart's unrest which makes me shun
The calm content that good men take
From good deeds done for the good deeds sake.
Deeds that in doing of the deed
Do bless the doer, who should need
No bliss beyond. But what to me
Is this—that over land and sea
My name should fly? Or what care I,
For the mere sake of climbing high,
To climb forever steps that wind
Up empty towers?

—Owen Meredith.

Forrest's Wonderful Power.

An effeminate young man, an intense admirer of Forrest, enlisted among the supers so as to be nearer his idol. At the end of Forrest's most effective speech, then on, the new actor was so overcome that he fainted. The incident so pleased the "old man" that he called him to his dressing room, where, after a few remarks, he presented him with a dollar as a memento of the occasion. On rejoining his fellow supers, five in number, the happy recipient spoke of his good fortune, dilating upon the cause thereof. At the next performance Forrest kept his eye on him to see if he could again so overcome him as to cause him to faint. When he reached the scene and climax his astonishment can be imagined when six of the supers fell over in a dead faint.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

For State Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effectively on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.—ALBERT BERG, Spooner, Minnesota.

For County Treasurer.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Treasurer of Red Lake county and solicit your support and your vote at the primary election to be held September 20, 1910.—G. G. KINDSETH.

For Sheriff.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff of Red Lake county, and respectfully solicit the support of all. If nominated and elected I will at all times do my duty.

—CHARLES J. FELLMAN.

For County Treasurer.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for county treasurer of Red Lake county and respectfully solicit the support and votes of all who believe that I will, if nominated and elected, run the office in an honest, efficient and economical manner.

If elected I hereby pledge that I will run the office to the best of my ability in an impartial and businesslike manner

A the Republicain Primaries Sept. 20th, 1910.

HARRY E. IVES.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st legislative district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all efforts to secure the redistricting of the state, a one mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'NEILL.

For Representative.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the Republican nomination for member of the house of Representatives from the 61st legislative district, comprising the counties of Red Lake, Clearwater and Beltrami. If nominated and elected I will use all honorable means to secure a just reapportionment of the state, a one mill tax for road purposes will receive my support and I will work for the needs of northern Minnesota as enumerated in Resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association.—IVER A. A Washington man took his little boy to church one Sunday morning. A missionary preached, telling about the nude heathen in the tropics, and after the sermon a missionary collection was taken up.

The little boy noticed that his father put in a suspender button.

He said to his father on the way home:

"Didn't I understand the preacher to say that those savages went naked, father?"

"Yes, my son," was the reply. "I'm glad to find you were so attentive."

"Then, father," said the boy, "why did you put a button in the plate?"

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Sometime ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S.S.S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

MRS. LUCY GOODING
Pollock, La.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Sale of Ditching Jobs.

Notice is Hereby Given, That on the 17th day of September, 1910, at 1:00 o'clock P. M., at my office in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, I will sell the jobs of digging and constructing the Ditch No. 49 of Red Lake county, established by the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, by their order bearing date July 9th, 1910, viz: For the work as one job, and also for one or more sections of 100 feet each, and also for one or more of the construction jobs, each of said sections to be known and numbered by stakes as shown by the report of the Engineer in said matter, commencing at the one including the outlet, and then thence, successively, up stream to the one including the source being Stations "0" to Stations "311" of the Main Ditch both inclusive with a yardage of 31,931.0 cubic yards and from stations "0" to stations "210" of the Branch ditch, both inclusive, with a yardage of 42,194.0 cubic yards, contemplating the total excavation and removal of 74,125.0 cubic yards of earth, the same to be placed along the sides of the ditch in such a manner as to form a uniform grade, in the time and manner prescribed in the plans, profiles, maps and specifications of the civil engineer in charge, all on file in my office, to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders, and that bids are invited for said work: said work to be completed within the time required and in the manner specified, in said Engineer's report. And no bill will be entertained which exceeds more than thirty (30) per cent. over and above the estimated cost of the construction, in any case, as stated in the said order, and the successful bidder will be required to give a satisfactory bond, to be approved by the Auditor of said County, with two freehold sureties, for the faithful performance and fulfillment of his contract, and to pay all damages that may accrue by reason of his failure to complete the job within the time required in the contract. The said order and estimate and profile are on file and may be seen at my office.

The approximate amount of work to be done in the construction of each ditch is as follows. The excavation and removal of 74,125.0 cubic yards of earth as herein above stated, at an estimated cost of Seven Thousand Four Hundred twelve & 50-100 ($7412.50) Dollars.

The estimated total cost of the work is $10,162.50 Dollars.

All bids must be accompanied by a certified check payable to the Auditor of said County, for not less than ten per cent of the amount of each bid. The right to reject any and all bids is hereby reserved.

Dated August 6th, 1910.

ALL DRUGGISTS

A SLEEPY HEADED MAN

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

It was a geologist and prospector who discovered that the Widow Carson's farm, forty miles from the recognized oil fields, was the center of another basin and so reported to the Sunshine Crude Oil Producing company, capital $1,000,000. That company had gobbled up all the best wells in a large district and was rapidly controlling production.

Moses Perkins was a young man of twenty-six. He was a farmer's son and a farmer himself, and he was not yet married. He had left his farm for a few months to help drill oil wells for the Sunshine company. Moses was hard working and honest. He would put in a long day's work, but he wasn't smart. From the day he began work at $2.50 a day until the day he was discharged, a period of twenty days, the foreman over him applied to him such terms as sleepyhead, idiot, blunderbuss, horn fool and so forth.

One day Perkins was sent for a can of nitroglycerin. On his return he was seen coming along tossing it in the air and catching it when it came down. This was too much. Perkins was discharged.

It was a geologist who differed from all the other geologists that found a new "dip" on the Widow Carson's farm. Her farm was the center of the basin. It was a stony, sterile old farm of 160 acres, and the widow herself was almost as dilapidated as the farm. She was forty years old and gaunt and homely, and she had three gaunt and homely children. The geologist staked his reputation that there was oil beneath her land, and the Sunshine company took him in on a proviso. The first thing was to get the legal privilege of sinking a well, and this was to carry with it a lease in case oil was discovered. There must be more or less beating about the bush to prevent the widow from taking the alarm. The preliminaries were intrusted to a lawyer disguised as a peddler.

When Moses Perkins had got it into his head that there was a Widow Carson somewhere on earth who was of interest to the Sunshine company he figured that it could mean only one thing. Then he began to inquire around, and after a week he lighted on a man who could tell him. Then he put a shirt, collar and a pair of socks into an old satchel and set out for the forty mile walk. In the evening of the second day he arrived at the widow's. He found her and her children as above described. It was next door to poverty. Moses had often dreamed of the wife he was to marry, and he was taken aback. He might have given up his project and retreated in good order had not a peddler arrived the same evening. He was the disguised lawyer of the Sunshine company. He seized on Moses Perkins for a dunderhead and went ahead and talked. The widow didn't catch on, but Moses did. A company wanted her farm for a quarry, and she was ready enough to sign any sort of paper the next day.

Moses had been asked to stay overnight. The peddler must go farther. This left the coast clear for a few hours. Moses had never made love to a woman, but he began while yet the peddler's coattails were fluttering through the gate. He told of his own farm, his prospects, his good health—how he looked in vain for years for the woman of his dreams, but had found her at last. He needn't have done half as much talking. The widow was ready to lease her farm, and she was also ready to marry again. Before midnight she was the promised bride of Moses Perkins. At 10 o'clock the next forenoon she was his wife and her children were calling him pop. At 11 o'clock the peddler arrived with certain documents and a witness. He found the bride sitting on the bridegroom's knee. He intimated that the papers were all ready to sign and that he had a certain sum of money to pass over, but fool Moses had something to say. He was the husband and the man of the house now. As soon as the wedding trip was over he was going to take off his coat and vest and make those 160 acres hump and hustle. The big bowlders lying around would take a roll, and the stony ground would blossom as the rose. Mrs. Carson would have been willing to sell the old place for most anything, but Mrs. Perkins didn't care to even sign a lease.

For six weeks longer Moses was taken for a chump with sawdust in his head. The lawyers and speculators and rings tried in every way to get the best of him, but what they cursed as his stupidity helped him to hold his own. Then he woke up one morning with his head all right. He had found oil exuding from a spring, and he announced the fact to the world at large; also that the farm was for lease or sale. The Sunshine people were not the only ones to rush. Three leases were made, and three companies pledged themselves to pay royalties, and inside of a year Moses Perkins was a millionaire and the Perkins family were eating square meals. The Carson basin turned out to be the greatest find in the state.

"To think that I should have taken you for a lunkhead!" sighed the peddler-lawyer one day when handing Moses a check for $50,000.

"Oh, mebbe I was!" was the good natured reply. "But, you see, I got over it. That's what some lunkheads never do."

Reasons Why Farmers Should Stand by Local Creamery and Cheese Factory.

O. A. Storvick, Inspector Dairy and Food Commission of this distict, writes an article in the Iowa Creamery Journal which we reproduce in part for the benefit of patrons of local creameries thinking that they may learn a lesson from it and that their thoughts may be brought back to the days before the existance of local creameries and how the centralized creameries at that time had the people at their mercy. Do you wish to go back to olden times?

"The present time we hear so much of the latest system of operating creameries, the one where cream is centralized no matter how. We notice these concerns are sending out the old cream wagons among patrons of successful co-operative creameries in order to break up neighbors who haul in routes to the creameries they built at the time they were forced to do something for protection, as year after year did they patronize the individual concern who operated the creamery only to reap a nice harvest from the producer. It seems as if the farmers, at least part of them, have forgotten the treatment they received years ago, or are they just making a circle and have reached the destination from which they started 20 years ago?

"The deserters of the co-operative creamery, whether they ship by rail, patronize the cream hauler sent out or furnish starter milk with which to flavor the putrid, fermented, decomposed stuff which is strong enugh in its effort to get out of the cans, to break seals and at times the can itself, had better take a Sunday afternoon visiting their parents and hold a family consultation to learn where they are at.

"Just as sure as we weaken the local creamery we strengthen the other one, and every pound taken from the local creamery will add to the cost of manufacturing the butter of our neighbor. It is said that 'there are none so blind as those who will not see,' and this must be said of the farmer who betrays not only his local creamery but his neighbors and himself as well.

"While visiting a small town the other day we learned that a cream agent was furnishing a dish of ice cream to every farmer who delivered a can of cream, the ice cream, of course, being furnished by the creamery he was buying for. Being interested in how this bait would work on the average patron I questioned some of the famers and found they did not take very kindly to this way of advertising, as they said it made friends for their creamery every day, and I have since heard the agent has abandoned this method of luring the famers. He soon learned that the average farmer can not be bribed at least with a dish of ice cream."

School of Agriculture.

The necessary expenses of a student at the Crookston School of Agriculture per year do not exceed $100 but this amount does not include traveling expenses. Write to the Superintendent, C. G. Selvig, Northwest Experiment Farm, Crookston, Minn., for catalog. It is free.

Farmers' children ought not to forget that the Crookston School of Agriculture will open on October 4th and continue till March 24th next. The expenses of board, heat, light, laundry and room is the actual cost of maintaining the table, management and use of the buildings or about 50c a day per student. It has never exceeded $3.75 a week. Separate dormitories are provided for boys and girls.

Instruction is given students at the Crookston School of Agriculture, in the work shops, laboratories, barns, fields and class rooms. The course is co-educational, and much of the work is taken in common by both sexes; the work adapted only to young men is given them exclusively, and that suitable only for young ladies is given them alone. The school is open to all young people possessing the necessary requirements for entrance, with no limitations as to residence.

The state is maintaining a large and valuable herd of animals for the purpose of instructing the young people in the Crookston Agricultural School in the type of breeds of cattle, sheep, hogs and horses suited to Minnesota conditions. In the herd are some very good individuals. Several types are represented. They are introduced in class work and students are instructed in practical methods of stock judging.

A Candid Caddy.

The contempt that the caddy feels for the playing of some of the amateurs is sometimes beyond his power to suppress. At the Philadelphia Country club they are telling a story of a swell young beginner who appeared to think the only qualification necessary for golf was a lot of staggering clothes. He started over the links with a young lady who had similar delusions. They played awhile with one of the best caddie golfers as an attendant.

"Do you think," asked the young man, turning to the caddie with a kindly air—"do you think we'll be able to get around the course before dusk?"

"If you run, sir," said the caddie grimly.—Philadelphia Times.

A Bernhardt Trick.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who is supposed to be something of an artist as well as an actress, was recently called upon in one of her marvelous creations to enact the role of a sculptor, and to model a certain bust in view of the audience. This fairly electrified the critics, but when going into rhapsodies over the technical skill in handling the clay which Mme. Bernhardt exhibited they showed that they knew little of the artistic tricks of actors and actresses; as a matter of fact, she does nothing of the kind. The bust is modeled and baked, and over it is placed damp clay of the same color. This the talented actress merely pulls off, exposing the beautifully modeled head underneath.

For Minor Heiresses.

"Have you a copy of Burke's 'Peerage' you could loan me?"

"I believe there's an old copy kicking around. What do you want with it?"

"Just a little scheme. I'm thinking of compiling a mail-order catalog of bargain dukes."

WHERE BEAUTY COUNTS.

"Good looks don't amount to anything, after all."

"They don't? Well, just come round to our boarding-house. That's the place where the fellow with side whiskers gets the biggest piece of pie."

Wooden Courtship.

'I pine for you,' the young man cried,
She took him unawares,
"Spruce up! Spruce up! ere papa comes,
He's lumbering up the stairs!"

The Immortal Sherlock.

"Any clew?"

"Only a broken window shutter," said Dr. Watson. "What do you make of that, Sherlock?"

"I can't say yet," answered the great detective. "He may have left it as a blind."

A Warning.

"So Gazzam died suddenly. Was it the heat?"

"Well—incidentally."

"What do you mean by incidentally?"

"He kept asking people if it was hot enough for them."

Driven to It.

"Johnny positively refuses to wash his ears."

"Then we must resort to heroic measures. Drop a postal for one of these vacuum-cleaning wagons to call."

Perfectly Harmless.

"A poet, writing of his lost love, says: 'I kiss your memory.'"

"Umph! I shouldn't think there would be much danger from germs in doing that."

A Complete Change.

"You need a mental rest. Stop discussing pennant prospects."

"But, doctor——"

"No argument, now. Talk golf for awhile instead of baseball."

Drastic Criticism of Today.

"How did you like the show?"

"Great. There wasn't a bad film in the bunch."

Diagnosing His Case.

"Are you going to operate on that patient of yours?"

"I have not decided yet."

"When are you going to decide?"

"As soon as I have looked him up in Bradstreet's."

I ride on the auto free.
When the risks are rash
And they scorch and smash
Right there on the job I'll be!"

The foolkiller said, said he:
"I swim in the lake or sea;
When the wight unscared
Beyond his depth has fared
I follow upon his lee."

The foolkiller said, said he:
"I bend to the oar with glee;
When the boat is rocked
And the world is shocked
I listen to no one's plea."

The foolkiller said, said he:
"Some fly without sight of me;
Drat the pesky things—
I'm afraid of wings,
And that's the truth, b'gee!"

Our Own Minstrels.

"Wot em de diff'unce, Mistuh Walkah, 'tween collectin' graft f'm a divekeeper an' detachin' de kewpons f'm a guv'ment bond?"

"I don't know, Sam; what IS the difference between collecting graft from a divekeeper and detaching the coupons from a government bond?"

"De one am a tariff fur pertection, an' de uddah am a tear-off fur rev'nue only."

Which Is Different.

The editor was trying to placate an indignant statesman.

"All we said about you in the paper, Mr. Krakajak," he assured him, "was that you seemed to have an inadequate sense of proportion."

"Not by a blamed sight!" roared the caller. "What you said about me was that I seemed to have an inadequate proportion of sense!"

Down to Facts.

"Did you ever get a diamond ring at the seashore?"

"Don't make me laugh. But I'll tell you what did happen."

"What?"

"Why are the sad sea waves moaning on the shore?"

"Probably because they realize that they will never get any closer than they are at the present moment to that girl in a swell bathing suit."

Amusement Notes.

"Anything entertaining booked in the city for the fall?"

"Oh, yes. Two successful dramas which have made a hit this season in New York and Chicago, some new vaudeville acts and the Downs trial."

Self-Sacrifice.

"I thought I told you to stop smoking," said the doctor, severely.

"I tried to," replied the patient, "but I haven't the heart to disappoint the members of my family who look to me for prize coupons and baseball pictures."

MAY RULE CANADA

Duke of Connaught Likely to Be Governor General.

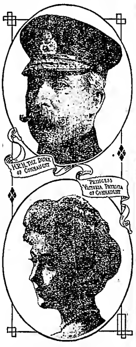
Popular Brother of the Late King Edward Is Reported to Be Slated for Head of the Dominion Government.

Ottawa, Can.—If the present program is adhered to the next governor general of Canada will be the Duke of Connaught, brother of the late King Edward. Such was the desire of the deceased monarch, and the probabilities are that the new King will not oppose the program. Canada appreciates the distinguished honor of having at the head of her government as the representative of the mother country so eminent a member of the royal family. Never before has one of the royal family occupied such a position, though Queen Victoria's daughter, a sister of the duke, was for years a resident of the Dominion when her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, now the Duke of Argyle, was governor general. At the same time the Canadians appreciate that society affairs at Rideau Hall, or Government House as it is sometimes called, the official residence of his excellency at Ottawa, will be upon a much grander scale than in the past, and that it will cost a pretty penny for those who try to be in the swim. Ottawa, more than ever, will become the social center.

The Duke of Connaught is the only surviving son of Queen Victoria and is 60 years old. Her majesty had nine children, of whom the eldest was Princess Victoria, mother of Emperor William; she died in 1901. The second child was the late King Edward. The Princess Alice Maud Mary, mother of the present Czarina of Russia, died in 1876. Alfred, Duke of Edinburg, died in 1900. Leopold, Duke of Albany, died in 1884. Beside the Duke of Connaught there survive Helena, Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein; Louise, Duchess of Argyle, and Beatrice, now Princess Henry of Battenberg.

The Duke of Connaught married Princess Louise of Prussia in 1879, and has three children. His eldest daughter is Margaret, wife of Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden. His son is Prince Arthur Patrick, and his younger daughter is the beautiful and decidedly independent Princess Victoria Patricia.

No princess in Europe has given such evidence of having a will of her own as has the Princess Patricia. Over and over again has a husband been selected for her by those wise in statecraft, but she has bundled these suitors off with slight ceremony and has repeatedly declared that she will have a husband of her own choosing or none at all. She is the most popular princess in England and was a favorite of her uncle, King Edward. Her name, which is a compliment to Ireland, alone makes her popular with the people of that part of the empire.



H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT
PRINCESS VICTORIA PATRICIA OF CONNAUGHT

The British government has a purpose in sending to Canada a prince of the royal blood. It is believed a governor general so close to the throne would tend to forward the empire movement and bring the Dominion in closer sympathy to the mother country. The governor general as a matter of fact has very little to do with the government of Canada. He has the power of veto but never exercises that right. Did he do so there would be as great a commotion as would occur if the King in England should set himself actively in opposition to the elected government. But nevertheless he has a tremendous influence, though it is operative only through social and diplomatic channels. His salary is $50,000 a year with an executive residence. Those governors general who have been most popular and influential have been those who have really come to love the Dominion and its people for themselves and have developed a deep interest in their welfare. Whether the duke and his family can forget the life in England to which he has been accustomed remains to be seen.

Caterpillars Ravage Trees.

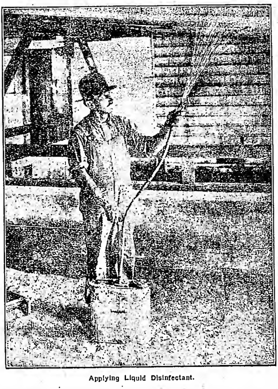
Washington.—Shade trees of Washington, famed for their number and beauty, are undergoing an attack from hordes of caterpillars. The trees are being stripped of their foliage rapidly. So numerous are the pests that they have baffled the caretakers' efforts to cope with them. Property owners have joined in the attempt to repel the invaders, but it seems that there is little chance to prevail against them. Some fear for the lives of the trees is expressed.

GENERAL SUGGESTIONS ON SELECTING DISINFECTANTS

Market Flooded With Commercial Article Put Out By Private Manufacturers—Sunlight Cannot Be Beat.

(By M. P. RAVENEL, M. D., and K. W. SMITH, University of Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The market is flooded with commercial disinfectants put out by private manufacturers. Many make absurd claims for their material. In buying these disinfectants one is apt to pay much more than their true value. It should always be remembered that no one firm has a monopoly of chemical disinfectants. All commercial disinfectants depend on well-known chemicals for their action. A few manufacturers have succeeded in preparing these chemicals so that they are easily handled and have certain advantages over the substances on which their value depends, but as a rule it is better to buy the chemicals and not some private commercial preparation of them.



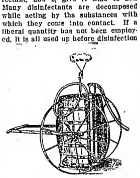
Applying Liquid Disinfectant.

The action of a disinfectant often depends largely on its solubility in water. For example, some oily substances have considerable power but do not dissolve readily in water, nor mix with it. A good example is found in the cresols, which are the basis of many commercial preparations. The general usefulness of these valuable agents is much increased by combining them with soaps as in creolin, lysol, etc., which mix readily with water in all proportions.

For complete disinfection of a room the gaseous disinfectants are the best, for the reason that the gas permeates every nook and corner, reaching places that would not be touched in any other way. It is plain that the room must be tightly sealed to prevent the escape of the gas. This is easily done with strips of heavy wrapping paper and ordinary flour paste, put on with a paint or white-wash brush. It is easily washed off and leaves no mark.

Gaseous disinfectants cannot be used in barns and stables, as a rule, on account of the open construction of such buildings. Here we must depend on thorough cleaning, airing, and the use of some spray. If there is infected forage or bedding, it should be raked out and burned. Walls must be well soaked with water, then thoroughly scraped. Burn all material removed in this way. All rotten wood in floors, feed boxes, stanchions, etc., must be taken out and burned. Thorough cleaning will often make disinfectants unnecessary, but no amount of disinfection will take the place of cleanliness. In cases of contagious diseases both cleanliness and disinfection must be employed.

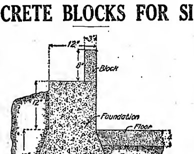
When using a disinfectant of any sort two things must be always remembered: 1, use enough of the disinfectant, and 2, give it time to act. Many disinfectants are decomposed while acting by the substances with which they come into contact. If a liberal quantity has not been employed, it is all used up before disinfection is complete. No general rule can be given for time.



Barrel-Cart Type of Hand Spray.

Medicated soaps are usually worthless and should not be trusted. Most of them are not as good as ordinary soap alone. Soaps are useful mainly in making substances soluble, and assisting in cleaning surfaces, garments, etc.

CONCRETE BLOCKS FOR SILO



A bulletin of the Michigan Experiment Station described a silo built of concrete blocks with a face 24 in. by 8 in., and a thickness of only 3 in. These blocks are laid in cement mortar (sand and cement in the proportions of 2 to 1), flush with the inner edge of the foundation as shown in the illustration. The wall which is 28 feet in height is strengthened by 2-in. bandiron hoops on the outside as are sometimes used on staves silos. The foundation of the wall extends 24 inches below ground and widens to 24 inches at the base. There is one continuous doorway about 25 inches wide, extending from the first course of blocks to roof.

With the Sow and Pigs.

In many instances, many especially if the sows are old, it will be best to take the pigs as soon as they come and remove their tusks, on both lower and upper jaws. These tusks are often very sharp and painful to the sow and will cause her to jump up quickly when they are sucking. It is also the cause of sore mouths caused by the pigs fighting for their place at the dinner table. Experience has shown that the pigs from aged sows are more likely to have sharp tusks than those from younger sows.

Pigs must have a thrifty start in life if they make good money for their owner. It requires a large amount of food to overcome the unthrifty habit in a bunch of pigs and every day they are not gaining they are losing their owner food, care and money.

Leading Dairy Breeds.

The herd at the Ontario (Canada) Experiment Farm consists of the three leading dairy breeds, the Holsteins, Ayrshires and Jerseys. The record of the breeds last year shows that the Holsteins produced the most milk, the Ayrshires the most butter and the Jerseys the richest milk. These results were obtained from the experience of two years.

New York Farmers.

It is claimed that New York state has a higher percentage of farms operated by the men who own them than any other leading agricultural state.

LEG A MASS OF HUMOR

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch it, and it began to spread until my leg from my ankle to the knee was one solid scale like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, and it was completely undermining our health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as no matter where the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, mortification, loss of sleep, both to myself and wife is simply indescribable on paper and one has to experience it to know what it is.

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry up for a little while and fill me with hope only to break out again just as had it not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. After taking the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change, and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no signs of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends. W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 13, 1909."

TUBERCULOSIS IN THE PRISON

Per Cent. of Sufferers Is Enormous and There Seems but One Remedy.

From several investigations that have been made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, it is estimated that on an average about fifteen per cent. of the prison population of the country is afflicted with tuberculosis. On this basis, out of the 80,000 prisoners housed in the penal institutions of the United States at any given time, not less than 12,000 are infected with this disease. If the Philippine Islands and other insular possessions were taken into consideration the number would be much larger. Some of the prisons of Pennsylvania, Kansas and Ohio show such shocking conditions with reference to tuberculosis that many wardens admit that these places of detention are death traps. Similar conditions could be found in almost every state, and in the majority of cases the only sure remedy is the destruction of the old buildings and the erection of new ones.

And They Wondered.

Judge Nicholas Longworth, who used to sit on Ohio's supreme bench, looked unnaturally grave, and a neighbor, in recognition of his facial depression, named a pet owl "Judge Longworth." It was the very next day that an excited maid broke up his wife's garden party. "Oh, madam," said she. "Madam! Judge Longworth has laid an egg."

Opinions Aired.

"Were the commencement exercises interesting?"

"Very. The time was divided between advice from public men on the selection of a career and suggestions from graduates on how to run the government."

The secret of life is not to do what one likes, but to try to like that which one has to do; and one does like it—in time.—D. M. Craik.

SIMPLE STATEMENT OF FACT

Mr. Johnson Unable to See Where In Any Way He Had "Put His Foot in It."

It is common to deplore the lack of humor in a person. Yet the very want of it may save a certain amount of embarrassment, as was the case on a certain occasion with President Johnson. "He was one day," says a writer in Harper's Magazine, "visiting my mother, and a friend, Mrs. Knox, a widow, came in. She had known Mr. Johnson some years before, when he was a member of the legislature, but they had not met since then.

"After mutual recognition, Mr. Johnson said, 'How is Mr. Knox? I have not seen him lately.'

"'He has been dead six years,' said Mrs. Knox.

"'I thought I hadn't seen him on the street,' said Mr. Johnson.

"When Mrs. Knox left, my mother said, laughing, 'That was a funny mistake of yours about Mr. Knox.'

"'What mistake did I make?' said Johnson. 'I said I hadn't seen him on the street, and I hadn't.'"

One Side Enough.

Senator William Alden Smith tells of an Irish justice of the peace out in Michigan. In a trial the evidence was all in and the plaintiff's attorney had made a long and very eloquent argument, when the lawyer acting for the defense arose.

"What are you doing?" asked the justice, as the lawyer began.

"Going to present our side of the case."

"I don't want to hear both sides argued. It has tendency to confuse the court."—Washingtonian.

A New Version.

Lawyers have a peculiar system of abbreviation, such words as trustees, executors being cut down to trees, exors and admors. This practise led to an amusing slip on the part of a solicitor who, somewhat late in life, abandoned his profession and entered the church. A few Sundays after his ordination he startled his congregation while reading the lesson by delivering one of the passages as follows: "I see men as trustees walking."

The Summer Girl.

"How'd you like to be engaged to a millionaire?"

"I was engaged to one all last summer, and he seldom spent a dime. I want to be engaged to a young man who is down here for two weeks with about $100 in his roll."

The lamb that plays around a mint bed tempts fate.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. Unseemly noises disturbed her during the night. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff-button in a hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff-button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson arrived. Gertrude revealed she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. Gertrude was suspected. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff-button. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey left in response to a telegram. Gertrude said she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him a loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong wrecked his own bank and could clear Bailey. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, was found at the lodge. The lodgekeeper said Louise and Arnold had a long talk the night of the murder. Louise was prostrated. Louise told Halsey that while she still loved him she was to marry another, and that he would despise her when he learned the whole story. It developed that Dr. Walker and Louise were to be married. A prowler was heard in the house. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase.

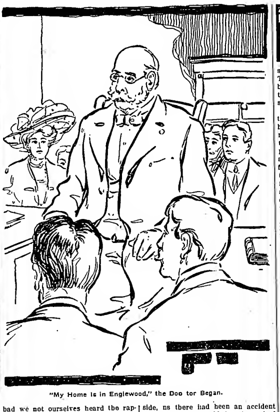
"I was not sleeping well," she began, "partly, I think, because I had slept during the afternoon. Liddy brought me some hot milk at ten o'clock and I slept until 12. Then I wakened and—I got to thinking about things, and worrying, so I could not go to sleep.

"I was wondering why I had not heard from Arnold since the—since I saw him that night at the lodge. I was afraid he was ill, because—he was to have done something for me, and he had not come back. It must have been three when I heard some one rapping. I sat up and listened, to be quite sure, and the rapping kept up. I was cautious, and I was about to call Liddy. Then suddenly I thought I knew what it was. The east entrance and circular staircase were always used by Arnold when he was out late, and sometimes, when he forgot his key, he would rap and I would go down and let him in. I thought he had come back to see me—I didn't think about the time, for his hours were always erratic. But I was afraid I was too weak to get down the stairs. The knocking kept up, and just as I was about to call Liddy, she ran through the room and out into the hall. I got up then, feeling weak and dizzy, and put on my dressing gown. If it was Arnold, I knew I must see him.

"It was very dark everywhere, but, of course, I knew my way. I felt along for the stair-rail, and went down as quickly as I could. The knocking had stopped, and I was afraid I was too late. I got to the foot of the staircase and over to the door on to the east veranda. I had never thought of anything but that it was Arnold, until I reached the door. It was unlocked and opened about an inch. Everything was black; it was perfectly dark outside. I felt very queer and shaky. Then I thought perhaps Arnold had used his key; he did—strange things sometimes, and I turned around. Just as I reached the foot of the staircase I thought I heard some one coming. My nerves were going anyhow, there in the dark, and I could scarcely stand. I got up as far as the third or fourth step; then I felt that some one was coming toward me on the staircase. The next instant a hand met mine on the stair-rail. Some one brushed past me, and I screamed. Then I must have fainted."

That was Louise's story. There could be no doubt of its truth, and the thing that made it inexpressibly awful to me was that the poor girl had crept down to answer the summons of a brother who would never need her kindly offices again. Twice, now, without apparent cause, some one had entered the house by means of the east entrance; had apparently gone his way unhindered through the house, and gone out again as he had entered. Had this unknown visitor been there a third time, the night Arnold Armstrong was murdered? Or a fourth, the time Mr. Jamieson had locked some one in the clothes chute?

Sleep was impossible, I think, for any of us. We dispersed finally to bathe and dress, leaving Louise little the worse for her experience. But I determined that before the day was over she must know the true state of affairs. Another decision I made, and I put it into execution immediately after breakfast. I had one of the unused bedrooms in the east wing, back along the small corridor, prepared for occupancy, and from that time on Alex, the gardener, slept there. One man in that barn of a house was an absurdity, with things happening all the time, and I must say that Alex was as unobjectionable as any one could possibly have been.



"My Home Is in Englewood," the Doctor Began.

The next morning, also, Halsey and I made an exhaustive examination of the circular staircase, the small entry at its foot, and the cardroom opening from it. There was no evidence of anything unusual the night before, and had we not ourselves heard the rapping noises, I should have felt that Louise's imagination had run away with her. The outer door was closed and locked, and the staircase curved above us, for all the world like any other staircase.

Halsey, who had never taken seriously my account of the night Liddy and I were there alone, was grave enough now. He examined the paneling of the wainscoting above and below the stairs, evidently looking for a secret door, and suddenly there flashed into my mind the recollection of a scrap of paper that Mr. Jamieson had found among Arnold Armstrong's effects. As nearly as possible I repeated its contents to him, while Halsey took them down in a note-book.

"I wish you had told me this before," he said, as he put the memorandum carefully away. We found nothing at all in the house, and I expected little from any examination of the porch and grounds. But as we opened the outer door something fell into the entry with a clatter. It was a cue from the billiard room.

Halsey picked it up with an exclamation.

"That's careless enough," he said. "Some of the servants have been amusing themselves."

I was far from convinced. Not one of the servants would go into that wing at night unless driven by dire necessity. And a billiard cue! As a weapon of either offense or defense it was an absurdity, unless one accepted Liddy's hypothesis of a ghost, and even then, as Halsey pointed out, a billiard-playing ghost would be a very modern evolution of an ancient institution.

That afternoon we, Gertrude, Halsey and I, attended the coroner's inquest in town. Dr. Stewart had been summoned also, it transpiring that in that early Sunday morning, when Gertrude and I had gone to our rooms, he had been called to view the body. We went, the four of us, in the machine, preferring the execrable roads to the matinee train, with half of Casanova staring at us. And on the way we decided to say nothing of Louise and her interview with her stepbrother the night he died. The girl was in trouble enough as it was.

CHAPTER XVII.

A Hint of Scandal.

In giving the gist of what happened at the inquest, I have only one excuse—to recall to the reader the events of the night of Arnold Armstrong's murder. Many things had occurred which were not brought out at the inquest and some things were told there that were new to me. Altogether, it was a gloomy affair, and the six men in the corner, who constituted the coroner's jury, were evidently the merest puppets in the hands of that all-powerful gentleman, the coroner.

Gertrude and I sat well back, with our veils down. There were a number of people I knew: Barbara Fitzhugh, in extravagant mourning—she always went into black on the slightest provocation, because it was becoming—and Mr. Jarvis, the man who had come over from the Greenwood club the night of the murder. Mr. Harton was there, too, looking impatient as the inquest dragged, but alive to every particle of evidence. From a corner Mr. Jamieson was watching the proceedings intently.

Dr. Stewart was called first. His evidence was told briefly, and amounted to this: On the Sunday morning previous, at a quarter before five, he had been called to the telephone. The message was from a Mr. Jarvis, who asked him to come at once to Sunnyside, as there had been an accident there, and Mr. Arnold Armstrong had been shot. He dressed hastily, gathered up some instruments, and drove to Sunnyside.

He was met by Mr. Jarvis, who took him at once to the east wing. There, just as he had fallen, was the body of Arnold Armstrong. There was no need of the instruments; the man was dead. In answer to the coroner's question—no, the body had not been moved, save to turn it over. It lay at the foot of the circular staircase. Yes, he believed death had been instantaneous. The body was still somewhat warm and rigor mortis had not set in. It occurred late in cases of sudden death. No, he believed the probability of suicide might be eliminated; the wounds could have been self-inflicted, but with difficulty, and there had been no weapon found.

The doctor's examination was over, but he hesitated and cleared his throat.

"Mr. Coroner," he said, "at the risk of taking up valuable time, I would like to speak of an incident that may or may not throw some light on this matter."

The audience was alert at once.

"Kindly proceed, doctor," the coroner said.

"My home is in Englewood, two miles from Casanova," the doctor began. "In the absence of Dr. Walker, a number of Casanova people have been consulting me. A month ago—five weeks, to be exact—a woman whom I had never seen came to my office. She was in deep mourning and kept her veil down, and she brought for examination a child, a boy of six. The little fellow was ill; it looked like typhoid, and the mother was frantic. She wanted a permit to admit the youngster to the Children's hospital in town here, where I am a member of the staff, and I gave her one. The incident would have escaped me, but for a curious thing. Two days before Mr. Armstrong was shot, I was sent for to go to the Country club; some one had been struck with a golf-ball that had gone wild. It was late when I left—I was on foot, and about a mile from the club, on the Clayburg road, I met two people. They were disputing violently, and I had no difficulty in recognizing Mr. Armstrong. The woman, beyond doubt, was the one who had consulted me about the child."

At this hint of scandal, Mrs. Ogden Fitzhugh sat up very straight. Jamieson was looking slightly skeptical, and the coroner made a note.

"The Children's hospital, you say, doctor?" he asked.

"Yes. But the child, who was entered as Lucien Wallace, was taken away by his mother two weeks ago. I have tried to trace them and failed."

All at once I remembered the telegram sent to Louise by some one signed F. L. W.—presumably Dr. Walker. Could the veiled woman be the Nina Carrington of the message? But it was only idle speculation. I had no way of finding out, and the inquest was proceeding.

The report of the coroner's physician came next. The post-mortem examination showed that the bullet had entered the chest in the fourth left intercostal space and had taken an oblique course downward and backward, piercing both the heart and lungs. The left lung was collapsed, and the exit point of the ball had been found in the muscles of the back to the left of the spinal column. It was improbable that such a wound had been self-inflicted, and its oblique downward course pointed to the fact that the shot had been fired from above. In other words, as the murdered man had been found dead at the foot of a staircase, it was probable that the shot had been fired by some one higher up on the stairs. There were no marks of powder. The bullet, a 38 caliber, had been found in the dead man's clothing, and was shown to the jury.

Mr. Jarvis was called next, but his testimony amounted to little. He had been summoned by telephone to Sunnyside, had come over at once with the steward and Mr. Winthrop, at present out of town. They had been admitted by the housekeeper, and had found the body lying at the foot of the staircase. He had made a search for a weapon, but there was none around. The outer entry door in the east wing had been unfastened and was open about an inch.

I had been growing more and more nervous. When the coroner called Mr. John Bailey, the room was filled with suppressed excitement. Mr. Jamieson went forward and spoke a few words to the coroner, who nodded. Then Halsey was called.

"Mr. Innes," the coroner said, "will you tell under what circumstances you saw Mr. Arnold Armstrong the night he died?"

"I saw him first at the Country club," Halsey said quietly. He was rather pale, but very composed. "I stopped there with my automobile for gasolene. Mr. Armstrong had been playing cards. When I saw him there he was coming out of the cardroom talking to Mr. John Bailey."

"The nature of the discussion—was it amicable?"

Halsey hesitated.

"They were having a dispute," he said. "I asked Mr. Bailey to leave the club with me and come to Sunnyside over Sunday."

"Isn't it a fact, Mr. Innes, that you took Mr. Bailey away from the clubhouse because you were afraid there would be blows?"

"The situation was unpleasant," Halsey said evasively.

"At that time had you any suspicion that the Traders' bank had been wrecked?"

"No."

"What occurred next?"

"Mr. Bailey and I talked in the billiard room until 2:30."

"And Mr. Arnold Armstrong came there, while you were talking?"

"Yes. He came about half-past two. He rapped at the east door, and I admitted him."

The silence in the room was intense. Mr. Jamieson's eyes never left Halsey's face.

"Will you tell us the nature of his errand?"

"He brought a telegram that had come to the club for Mr. Bailey."

"He was sober?"

"Perfectly, at that time. Not earlier."

"Was not his apparent friendliness a change from his former attitude?"

"Yes. I did not understand it."

"How long did he stay?"

"About five minutes. Then he left by the east entrance."

"What occurred then?"

"We talked for a few minutes, discussing a plan Mr. Bailey had in mind. Then I went to the stables, where I kept my car, and got it out."

"Leaving Mr. Bailey alone in the billiard room?"

"My sister was there."

Mrs. Ogden Fitzhugh had the courage to turn and eye Gertrude through her lorgnon.

"And then?"

"I took the car along the lower road, not to disturb the household. Mr. Bailey came down across the lawn, through the hedge, and got into the car on the road."

"Then you know nothing of Mr. Armstrong's movements after he left the house?"

"Nothing. I read of his death Monday evening for the first time."

"Mr. Bailey did not see him on his way across the lawn?"

"I think not. If he had seen him he would have spoken of it."

"Thank you. That is all. Miss Gertrude Innes."

Gertrude's replies were fully as concise as Halsey's. Mrs. Fitzhugh subjected her to a close inspection, commencing with her hat and ending with her shoes. I flatter myself she found nothing wrong with either her gown or her manner, but poor Gertrude's testimony was the reverse of comforting. She had been summoned, she said, by her brother, after Mr. Armstrong had gone. She had waited in the billiard room with Mr. Bailey until the automobile had been ready. Then she had locked the door at the foot of the staircase, and, taking a lamp, had accompanied Mr. Bailey to the main entrance of the house, and had watched him cross the lawn. Instead of going at once to her room, she had gone back to the billiard room for something which had been left there. The cardroom and billiard room were in darkness. She had groped around, found the article she was looking for, and was on the point of returning to her room, when she had heard some one fumbling at the lock at the east outer door. She had thought it was probably her brother, and had been about to go to the door, when she heard it open. Almost immediately there was a shot, and she had run panic-stricken through the drawing room and had roused the house.

Carried Out to the Finish

Literal Application of Husband's Idea Astonished Him at the Gates of Heaven.

Jacob A. Riis, the brilliant writer and social reformer, said the other day to a reporter in New York:

"A good New Year's resolution would be for us all to get in closer touch with the poor. A football team from Columbia, for instance, shouldn't hesitate to play with my college settlement team.

"We can't do our charity by proxy any more than our churchgoing—and, you know, the churchgoer story.

"There was once a man who never attended church, thinking that his wife's regular attendance made up for his own omission. Well, the man died and duly appeared before Saint Peter at the gate of paradise.

"'Who are you?' the saint asked, curtly.

"'Why, Saint Peter, I am John S. Nicholson of Chicago. I thought of course you knew me.'

"'No, I don't know you,' said the saint.

"'But, Saint Peter, I am Mrs. Nicholson's husband—the charitable Mrs. Nicholson, don't you know, who went regularly to church and was so kind to the poor.'

"'Why didn't you do like her?' said the saint.

"'Well, Saint Peter, I was always so worn out from business on Sunday that I had to play golf to avoid getting neuritis, and, anyhow, I understood that if Mrs. Nicholson went to church regularly it would do for both of us.'

"'Your wife,' said the saint, 'was a true, faithful Christian. She came to these gates four years ago, and she went in—for both of you.'"

Doll House Library.

A search for a child's short story, "The Griffin and the Minor Canon," in a volume all by itself revealed to a persistent city shopper the thought and money that are expended on the furnishing of dolls' houses. Book stores had not the story in a single volume, but in a department store one young woman interviewed had recently been transferred from the toy department and was able to contribute a helpful hint.

"I think," she said, "you can find it in one of the dolls' houses downstairs."

Curiosity had by that time become a sauce to literature, so the shopper hurried downstairs to inspect the doll houses. Three of the most expensive houses contained libraries consisting of a score of diminutive books and each book contained a child's story complete. One of them was "The Griffin and the Minor Canon."

Quotation Marks.

Senator Beveridge, in an after-dinner speech in Cleveland, said of a corrupt politician:

"The man's excuse is as absurd as the excuse that a certain minister offered on being convicted of plagiarism.

"'Brethren,' said this minister, 'it is true that I occasionally borrow for my sermons, but I always acknowledge the fact in the pulpit by raising two fingers at the beginning and two at the end of the borrowed matter, thus indicating that it is quoted.'"

Advice.

"Doctor," cried little Bingle, over his telephone, "my wife has lost her voice. What the dickens shall I do?"

"Why," said the doctor, gravely, "if I were you I'd remember the fact when Thanksgiving day comes around, and act accordingly."

Whereupon the doctor chuckled as he charged Bingle two dollars for professional services.—Harper's Weekly.

Included Her.

"Why did she get angry at the stranger in town?"

"She asked him if he had seen her daughter and he answered that he had seen all the sights of the place."

In the Desert.

Here is a glimpse of the horrors of a western desert, taken from the Goldfield (Nev.) News: "Another desert victim is reported, and Archie Campbell, manager of the Last Chance mining property near Death valley, came to Goldfield yesterday to endeavor to establish the identity of the unfortunate.

"Mr. Campbell encountered the unknown man on the desert in a frightful condition. He was in the last stages of desert exhaustion, devoid of clothing, sunburned, blistered and crazed, with his tongue swollen enormously, a pitiable object, and unable to speak.

"He was tenderly conveyed to camp and everything possible done for him, but kind aid came too late, for an hour after he had absorbed the first cup of water he expired."

Keeping It Dry.

An old woman of a wealthy New Jersey family was going visiting. The coachman, who had not been in this country long, had just been equipped with a new uniform and a new silk hat. Before they had gone far it began to sprinkle, and the old woman told the coachman to fasten down the side curtains of the wagonette.

He drove up to a hitching post beside the road and, dismounting, hung his new hat on the post, and began to fasten the curtains.

The old woman noticed his bare head and asked him where his hat was.

"Oi took it off me head, mum, so as it wouldn't get wet," the coachman replied.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Representative from the 61st legislative district. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to work for a just reapportionment of the state into legislative districts, for a one mill tax for good roads and for other needs of northern Minnesota as enumerated in the resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association.—NOEL DELORME.

For Judge of Probate.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Judge of Probate and solicit your support and vote at the primary election to be held Sept. 20, 1910.—WM. HOLBERG.

For County Auditor.

I fully intended entering another vocation and had no intention of filing for the office of County Auditor but have been constantly and repeatedly urged to become a candidate for the office by your township and school officials and other men throughout the county with whom I have come into close contact through my relations with them as County Auditor. I have therefore decided to enter the race for County Auditor on the Republican ticket at the primaries to be held September 20.

Having been appointed by your county board May 15, 1909, to fill the unexpired term of the late John B. O'Brien, deceased, I have conducted the affairs of the office to the best of my ability since that time.

I will appreciate the vote and support at the coming primaries of all those who believe I am worthy of filling this responsible position and promise you that if nominated and elected I will conduct the affairs of the office in an honest and impartial manner the same as I have in the past.

FINE SHOWING OF BANK DEPOSITS

$526,000.60 on Deposit in the Two Banks of Red Lake Falls.

Yet Thief River Falls Papers Say Local People Are on the Rocks.

More than half a million dollars is on deposit in the two banks of Red Lake Falls. To be exact the figures are $526,288.88 as shown by the quarterly statements published in this issue of the Gazette.

Isn't that a fine showing for a city no larger than Red Lake Falls to make and there has not been a report for the past two years that has not shown at least half a million dollars on deposit in the banks.

Every one admits that nothing indicates the prosperity of the community more accurately than the deposits of its banks.

During the past few months the Thief River papers have repeatedly referred to Red Lake Falls as the village whose people are on the verge of bankruptcy. Of course they are just knocking, but just for fun the Gazette will make a comparison. At no time have the total deposits in Thief River Falls' four banks been $800,000.00 and yet they say they have 6000 people and the "village of Red Lake Falls" has less than 2000 people.

Even if Thief River people were no more prosperous than are the people of Red Lake Falls they ought to have at least $1,500,000 in bank deposits.

The Gazette does not believe that the people of Thief River Falls are living on husks, but knocking the "village of Red Lake Falls" is a mighty poor county division argument.

A VERY GOOD REASON

Why Anton Peterson Opposes County Division.

Anton Peterson of Wyandotte was in town Saturday and called at the Gazette office because he said he wished to go on record as opposed to county division and wished to make a statement to that effect. If there is no other reason for voting against county division than that given by Mr. Peterson it is reason enough why every voter in the county, except possibly the residents of Thief River Falls, should vote against division. Mr. Peterson said:

"If the county is divided we farmers would do well to move out because taxes would be so high that we could not afford to stay. If the county is divided we will have to pay the price of Thief River Falls' fun. Our farmers are wise to the fact that the only return we would get for voting for county division is higher taxes and we are going to vote against division."

SOAKING RAIN

Heavy Rain Fell Here Monday Morning.

More rain fell on Monday than in many months during the summer. There was a heavy rain early in the morning and another heavy rain commencing at noon and continuing for more than an hour.

The rain extended over the whole of the Red River valley and will result in much benefit. The fall plowing can be handled much easier. Many surface wells have gone dry and much difficulty has been experienced in getting water for traction engines. The rains will relieve those conditions somewhat. However, a number of good rains before it freezes up would be welcomed.

Storing Seed Corn.

Seed corn must be thouroughly dry before freezinng weather. The same day seed corn is husked, put it in a room where there is a good circulation of air. Have each ear free of contact with other ears, so air can circulate about it freely. An attic over a room in which there is a fire is a good place for seed corn. During dry, warm days, leave the windows open. On wet days and as soon as the weather gets cool, close the windows.

Extension Bulletin No. 9, which may be had for the asking, describes several convenient methods for hanging up seed corn so that each ear is free of other ears and in a position to dry out rapidly.

For Extention Bulletin send name and address to Extention Division, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.

Good Country Here.

Wm. McFadden—I was up through the northern part of the state a few days ago to see about hay, and I tell you, the country up there looks good to me. The big state ditches have done good work, and I never saw as much hay anywhere as there is there. The people who think that hay is going to sell for $15 or $20 per ton this winter ought to take a trip up through that section. I was at Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls and up through Roseau county, and the country in that vicinity is going to be the finest dairy section to be found anywhere. The land produces everything that is needed for successful dairying, and produces it in abundance. I can see no reason why settlers should go further west or into Canada while the northern part of our state offers such opportunities as are to be found there.—Fergus Journal.

WILL BE A FINE CORNER

Farmers National Bank People Will Improve Their Building.

Last week the contract was let for the remodeling of the Lemieux block, the building purchased by the new Farmers National Bank for a banking house.

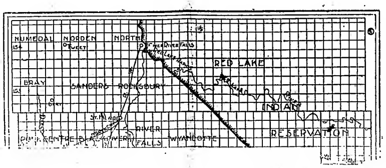
The contract was let to James Brady and it is probable that Contractor Johnson who did the brick work on the court house will do the brick work on this building.

A new pressed brick front will be put in with two oval top plate glass windows on the east front and two on the north. The interior will also be fixed up in an attractive manner with steel walls and ceiling and tiled floor in the lobby. Fine bank fixtures will be put in and a burglar alarm device will be connected with the vault.

It will take several weeks to do the work. It is probable that the new bank will open for business about the first of November.

MORE REASONS FOR OPPOSITION

The People of the Townships of Polk Centre, Black River, River Falls, Wyandotte, Mayfield and Deer Park Will Have "Trouble Enough" if the County is Divided.



There is not a farmer in Red Lake county who will not be a loser if the county is divided. They cannot afford to divide, especially at this time. Because of the limited population and property valuation of the county the land would be "taxed out of sight" and the development of the county retarded for many years to come—if the proposed county is established.

There is no getting around that propositon—and there is no comparison with small counties in the southern part of the state where there is twice as much property and twice as many people in an equal amount of territory.

Every farmer who favors division, and even the one who is neutral, is fighting himself, for this is a farmers' fight. Red Lake Falls has little to lose by the division of the county—we would still be the county seat of Red Lake county and its commercial center—and the only people to gain by division are certian property owners of the city of Thief River Falls. It's your fight, Mr. Farmer. We are with you in the fight, but don't forget that only your votes and your efforts will protect your interests.

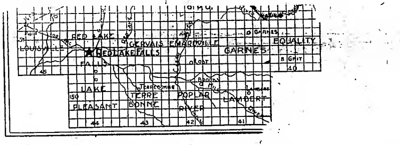
The farmers of the townships of Polk Centre, Black River, River Falls, Wyandotte, Mayfield and Deer Park, for more reasons than any others, should be opposed to division. The county line, if division should carry, will split each of these towns in two, with 24 sections north of the line and 12 south. More than that, in many places school districts will be split up.

Fractions of townships will have to be reorganized. The same applies to school districts and you fellows on that line will have a nice lot of trouble on hand if you let those Thief River fellows work you.

And on top of it all you will have your load of taxes—as if that were not enough.

The Gazette believes that every farmer in those six townships will not only be opposed to county division, but will be an aggressive campaigner against division.

If there is a single man in that territory who has not come to that way of thinking, he should do some long thinking right away quick and get onto the job.



WHAT IS AN INSURGENT? ASKS PAUL PRY

Insurgency Is a Coat that Should be Worn at Home as Well as Away.

John Lind Still Has 'Em Guessing—Other Comment.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Sept. 6—Whether there is to be a real primary contest in St. Paul or not for the Republican nomination remains to be seen. But at all events Hugh Halbert has filed in opposition to Fred Stevens. It is said that Mr. Halbert will have orators from without the state come to his aid—Pinchot, Garfield and others with whom he has been hobnobbing and love-feasting. If only the colonel could be induced to say a friendly word.

An Outspoken Progressive.

Hugh has these many moons been a thorn in the side of the St. Paul political machine. He really has both ideas and an opinion that there should be some principal in politics. Naturally this notion is scoffed at by Dar Reese and other militant leaders to whom politics presents attractions only in proportions to what there is in them. Of course, therefore, the Republican machine will be for Stevens and the brewers will be for Stevens and the railroads will be for Stevens as they always have been. And as Stevens is an "independent regular" and never too independent when the party has need for him, he will no doubt be in a position to reciprocate favors. So that, all things considered, Halbert comes pretty near going up against the real thing—the more so as Ramsey county voters have acquired the habit of letting the "boys" look after the primaries, which indeed the "boys" take great delight in doing.

Almost Too Considerate.

"When people wake" of course it will be different. Up to date they have only begun to rub their eyes and see dimly. Possibly "Teddy" may shake them up some more. But it's pretty late, and there may also be some question whether Mr. Halbert's candidacy is strenuous enough to awake enthusiasm. It's noted that in his preliminary address he goes out of his way to compliment the man he is seeking to drive out of his seat and to say in what respect he holds him. Which, of course, is very nice parlor politics; but if Fred Stevens hasn't been representing the voters of St. Paul in backing up the reactionaries and helping Cannon out, politically he is deserving of censure—not expressions of respect. This way of going into a fight with kid gloves isn't going to draw blood.

An Alternative.

Nevertheless there is no reason why any progressive Republican should despare, for after all Progressive Republicans have only adopted the policies which the Democratic party has been advocating for years—even supposing Mr. Halbert fails to land the Republican nomination. For there is Mr. John L. Gieskie who has filed on the Democratic ticket. Moreover the people would probably be much better served if Mr. Gieskie was elected than were Mr. Halbert the fortunate contestee. It is practically admitted at Washington that the next house will be Democratic and a Democrat would be more apt to have influence in shaping legislation directed by a Democratic speaker than even an insurgent Republican.

Where is Clapp At?

I understand that in Kansas, in Iowa and especially in Wisconsin Moses Clapp is posing as the anointed leader of the progressive Republicans of Minnesota. In the latter state he is boosting LaFollette to beat the band; in Iowa he is for Dolliver and the insurgent candidate for congress, and in Kansas he is patting Bristow on the back. And I was just wondering whether he will find time or will have the inclination to say a word in this campaign for Hugh Halbert who has all along been an insurgent and a progressive where it has cost something. Clapp votes here. Will he even vote here for the forward policy which he is preaching in Iowa?

Clapp has already put his foot down on progressive Republicans in the First District. There he has announced himself for Tawney, the supporter of Cannon and Aldrich and the bedfellow of Payne and "Jim" Sherman. In another district there is trouble and it is a district in which, if in any in the state, Clapp has influence and his word will go a long way. There one of staunchest Progressives in Congress, Lindbergh, is having the fight of his life against the machine politicians who have put up McGarry. It does appear to me a little singular that Lindbergh's plight does not appeal to Clapp when he has so much sympathy and support to lavish on LaFollette, on Dolliver and on Bristow, any one of whom may be confidently relied upon to look out for himself. Where help is not specially needed, however, is where Clapp is most eager to rush to the fray. Here where insurgency is in a very bad way, he turns his back upon it; here he does not stop to give the insurgent candidate a sly dig in the ribs. And no doubt he will come to St. Paul next week to bask in the smiles of the great. Leave Mose alone for getting into the spotlight.

Contrasting Messages.

President Taft has written a letter during the past week. Roosevelt has been talking. Both have broken into print. The people are making comparisons. Incidentally the people aren't doing any guessing as to where Roosevelt stands. The president still holds to the opinon that the tariff is the best ever, but is willing to admit that it might be better. Neither he or Roosevelt however have got to where they are willing to go in for a tariff that will appreciably reduce the people's burdens and give the poor man a chance to live. Even if they did no Republican Congress that could be elected could reduce the tariff appreciably. The Republican leaders are tied up to the interests—manufacturing and others—where they can't get away. And the Insurgent leaders have helped the people realize that. That is why the next congress is going to be Democratic.

Conserving Capital.

Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Hill are reported to favor a bureau in the Conservation Congress devoted to the conservation of capital, which indeed is no joke. Capital—the accumulated earnings of the poeple should be conserved. Whether or not it should be conserved in the hands of Mr. J. Pierepont Morgan, in which it now resides as agent for the associated interests, is of course another question altogether which might well be threshed out in a Conservation Congress.

Of Course he Agrees.

Governor Eberhart has this week been in town long enough to say to an inquiring reporter that he indorses every word Col. Roosevelt uttered in his Osawatomie speech. Among other things President Roosevelt said:

"One of the fundamental necessities is a representative government such as ours is to make certain that the men to whom the people delegate their power shall serve the people by whom they are selected, and not the special interestes. I believe that every national officer, elected or appointed, should be forbidden to perform any service or receive any compensation direct or indirectly from interstate corporations; and a similar provision could not fail to be useful within the states."

Possibly next week the governor may take time to explain why he insisted on turning over the Republican State organization into the hands of Ed. Smith, notorious throughout the state as being for years the special legislative agent of the interests whom Roosevelt says have no business mixing and muddling in politics.

Good Men to the Front.

The filings in the several districts indicates a keen contest for legislative positions. There hasn't been so full a filing in years and there has't in recent years been so many desireable candidates. While the Democrats of course do not expect to control in either branch there is an excellent prospect that the representation will be increased. This has resulted from the fact that men have been nominated whom the people respect. This is the right thing to do. Only the best men can serve the people effectively. For better not be represented at all than to be represented by a man who is always ready to sell out to the highest bidder.

Still in the Twilight.

There is still no special word from Lind, but nobody seems to be worrying over that. The general impression is that he will be the candidate; in which event there can be of course, no question as to the result. The same word comes from all parts of the state.

Mr. Lind has only to say the word. The call is not confined to any faction or party. It is both general and earnest. It is difficult to see how anyone with proper sense of his responsibilities as a citizen can resist such a demand.

—PAUL PRY.

INTERESTING CASE

Case of Mickelson vs. Brevig Before Judge Watts Monday.

Judge Wm. Watts was here Monday to hear arguments in the case of Mickelson vs. Brevig. However, the case was not disposed of, it being continued until the October term.

This is a case that is attracting considerable interest. The facts seem to be that Mickelson secured a judgement against Brevig for $600, but just prior to the time when the judgement was secured Brevig conveyed to his wife. Mickelson brings suit to have the conveyance declared illegal, contending it was made to defraud ceditors. If the conveyance is set aside the judgament will be lien against the land.

Old Settlers Day.

The members of the Polk county Old Settlers' association have designated October 7th as old stetlers' day and have arranged for an old settiers' meeting on that day to be one of the attractions of the Polk county fair. All old setlers are invited to meet with the with the Polk county old settlers on that day.

ARE MOVING LAMBERT

Many of the Business Places Going to New Town of Oklee.

The construction of the new Soo line gives the little inland town of Lambert a hard rap. Most of the Lambert business people will move to the new town of Oklee and some of the stores are being moved this week.

One store and a hotel will remain and there is also a good creamery and a fine church, so it will still be something of a trade center and no doubt its few people will prosper because they live in a fine country. However, it is not probable that the town will grow.

Will Do Good Work.

Having purchased the Puschinsky blacksmith shop, I wish by this means to solicit a share of your patronage. Horseshoeing and all blacksmith work will have my careful attention and I assure you that your work will be well done. Come in and see me.—J. B. Kingsley.

SOME EXCITING HUNTS FOR BEAR

Gilbert Fitzer Killed a Big One on the Abell Farm Last Week.

Hunting Party Got One Near Perrault Station Monday Morning.

There are still a number of black bears in the country. They are being seen frequently and occasionally one is killed.

Last Thursday a big one was killed on the Abell farm in Terrebonne township. Bruin had been in the neighborhood for some time. Miss Abell saw him Wednesday and reported to the men. Thursday morning when the men went into the field, Gilbert Fitzer took a rifle with him, prepared for big game, and he was rewarded for his trouble.

Bruin was seen at a distance of about half a mile headed for a cornfield where he had partaken of a hearty meal the previous day. Fitzer says that when he first saw the bear he looked like a dog, but as he got nearer he looked as big as a cow. When the bear got within range Fitzer fired, but the shot went wild. Bruin stood up and took a survey of the country and then he looked as big as several cows. Fitzer got hold of his nerve, gave it a yank, and fired again. Bruin did a bear dance and some other fancy stunts and then fell over dead. The bullet had passed through the bear's back.

It was the first real live wild bear that Fitzer had ever seen. He did not know that bears' meat is a table delicacy so after the hide had been removed bruin's remains were interred with solemn ceremony and some rejoicing.

The bear weighed three hundred pounds. He was a big, lanky fellow, the kind that would weigh five hundred pounds when ready to go into winter quarters.

Another bear was killed south of town, near Perrault station, Monday. Geo. Hanson saw the bear in his cornfield Monday morning and notified a number of the men of the neighborhood. A hunting party was organized and thirteen men engaged in the chase. The hunt continued all day. The bear was seen several times and everybody had a shot at him, but bruin kept the whole crowd on the jump until late in the afternoon. Wm. Purath got in the shot that did the business just before supper time. The bear was killed north of the grove on the Glass farm.

The members of the party divided the bear meat among themselves and traded the hide to Geo. Hanson for a pot of porridge and trimmings and celebrated bruin's capture. The bear weighed two hundred and fifty pounds.

It is reported that a bear was killed east of Brooks last week, but the Gazette has not learned the name of the mighty huntsman who bagged the big game.

Another Bear Story.

There was great excitement in town last evening when a black bear was reported seen near the slaughter house. Two of our crack shots quickly conveyed themselves to the spot and there surely enough was old bruin. They opened fire and after about thirty rounds had been fired old bruin gave up the battle and surrendered. The hunters rushed on the fallen hero with drawn knives prepared to take no chances on the bear playing possum. On arriving on the spot they gave one look and fled into the woods and returned home after dark. Some boys had made a dummy and the deception worked nicely. During the bombardment the youngsters were hid in the brush and watched the fun and say it was lots of sport.—Fertile Journal.

Puschinsky Shop Sold.

The Puschinsky blacksmith shop was this week sold to J. B. Kingsley and the new owner is already in possession. Mr. Kingsley comes from Nebraska. He has the reputation of being a first class workman and no doubt he will do a good business.

A stockbroker who had his new forty horsepower automobile delivered to him the other day decided to celebrate the occasion, the market being dull, says the New York Sun, by a run on the country roads. To be on the safe side on his gasoline supply he decided to stop at a garage to have the tank filled. As it was being measured out he turned to his son, a sturdy chap of six, who had followed him inside the garage, to impress upon him the danger of gasoline. Calling him by name, he said, "You would go straight to heaven if I put a match to that gasoline."

Looking his father straight in the eyes, the boy replied, "And where would you go, dad?"

KEEP THE NAVY EFFICIENT AND FORTIFY THE CANAL

Former President Roosevelt's Advice to the Nation in Speech at Omaha--Discusses the Magnitude and Success of the Vast Work in Panama.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 2.—Two topics, closely related, furnished the theme for a vigorous but rather brief address by Col. Theodore Roosevelt here today. These were the efficiency of our navy as demonstrated by the world tour of the battleship fleet, and the digging of the Panama canal and necessity for fortifying that great waterway. The colonel was received cordially by the people of Omaha and his audience was large and enthusiastic. His address follows:

In traveling in Europe last spring one thing which especially struck me was the fact that the two feats which made the deepest impression abroad were the cruise of the battle fleet around the world, and the digging of the Panama Canal. These were the two feats to be credited to the American people during the past decade which had most profoundly and favorably affected foreign judgment of America during that time. Such judgment depends not in the least upon what people say they can do, but what they actually do: upon their willingness to meet responsibilities, and the success of their efforts to meet them.

Must Have Efficient Navy.

Now, there is no use of a nation claiming to be a great nation unless it is prepared to play a great part. A nation such as ours cannot possibly play a great part in international affairs, cannot expect to be treated as a weight in either the Atlantic or the Pacific, or to have its voice as to the Monroe doctrine, or the management of the Panama Canal, heeded, unless it has a strong and thoroughly efficient navy. Within the last decade the American navy has been about trebled in strength, and much more than trebled in efficiency, due to its extraordinary progress in marksmanship and maneuvering. So far from this increase in naval strength representing on our part either a menace of aggression to weaker nations or a menace of war to stronger nations, it has told most powerfully for peace. Everywhere in Europe the cruise of the battle fleet around the world was accepted, not only as an extraordinary feat, reflecting the highest honor upon our navy, but as one of the movements which tended markedly to promote peaceful stability in international relations. No nation regarded the cruise as fraught with any menace of hostility to itself; and yet every nation accepted it as a proof that we were not only desirous ourselves to keep the peace, but able to prevent the peace being broken at our expense. No cruise in any way approaching it has ever been made by any fleet of any other power; and the best naval opinion abroad had been that no such feat was possible, that is, that no such cruise as that we actually made could be undertaken by a fleet of such size without innumerable breakdowns and accidents. The success of the cruise, performed as it was without a single accident, immeasurably raised the prestige, not only of our fleet, but of our Nation; and was a distinct help to the cause of international peace.

As regards the Panama Canal, I really think that outside nations have a juster idea than our own people of the magnitude and success of the work. I wish our people realized what is being done on the Isthmus. If a man of intelligence who had never left this country asked me whether I would advise him to make a short trip to Europe, or a trip to the Panama Canal, I would, without hesitation, advise him to go to the Panama Canal. He would there see in operation the completing of one of the great feats of modern times. Colonel Goethals and the men working under him are rendering a service to this country which can only be paralleled in our past history by some of the services rendered in certain wars.

Wonderful Work on the Isthmus.

Six years ago last spring the American government took possession of the Isthmus. The first two years were devoted to the sanitation of the Isthmus, to assembling the plant and working force, and providing quarters, food, and water supplies. In all these points the success was extraordinary. From one of the plague-spots of the globe, one of the most unhealthy regions in the entire world, the Isthmus has been turned into a singularly healthy place of abode, where the death-rate is small and where hundreds of children are now being raised under as favorable conditions as in most parts of the United States. The quarters, food, and water supply are excellent, and the plant the best ever gathered for such a purpose. Active excavation on a large scale did not begin until January, 1907. Three years and a half have gone by since then, and three-fifths of the total excavation has already been accomplished. The amount taken out has passed anything which previous experience warranted us in believing to be possible. In 1908 and 1909 the monthly average of rock and earth removed was three million cubic yards, notwithstanding the fact that nine months of each year constituted a season of very heavy rainfall. There remains to be excavated only about sixty million cubic yards. If we could keep up the past average of excavation, this should be done in twenty months; but it is impossible to maintain such a ratio as the depth increases; for the output necessarily diminishes as the field of operation narrows. Still, it is certain that such a rate can be maintained as will enable the workers to finish the excavation considerably in advance of the date fixed for opening the canal, January 1, 1915. Indeed, I shall be surprised if the canal cannot be opened six months, or even a year in advance of the time set.

The work has two great features: The Culebra Cut, which I have been considering, and the great dam at Gatun. The latter is to imprison the waters of the Chagres and other streams into a lake with an area of 164 square miles. This work is advancing steadily, and just as successfully as the work on the Culebra Cut. The water which is ultimately to fill the lock is now flowing through the concrete spillway in the center of the dam, the Chagres having been diverted from its bed and placed under complete control. The construction of the dam has advanced sufficiently to convince the engineers in charge of the work of its absolute stability and imperviousness. The concrete work on the lock is advancing so rapidly that the first double-set at Gatun will be completed this coming November, and the engineer in charge has announced that all the concrete in all the locks will be in place two years hence. The date of final completion and formal opening of the canal to the commerce of the world will be determined by the time consumed in placing the great steel gates, emergency dams, and all appliances for operating the docks. But those in charge of the work announce without hesitation that everything will be finished well in advance of January 1, 1915.

Next Duty Is to Fortify It.

This is a stupendous record of achievement. As a people we are rather fond of criticising ourselves, and sometimes with very great justice; but even the most pessimistic critic should sometimes think of what is to our credit. Among our assets of the past ten years will be placed the extraordinary ability, integrity, and success with which we have handled all the problems inherited as the result of the Spanish war; the way we have handled ourselves in the Philippines, in Cuba, in Porto Rico, in San Domingo, and in Panama. The cruise of the battle fleet around the world was a striking proof that we had made good with the navy; and what we have done at Panama represents the accomplishment of one of the great feats of the ages. It is a feat which reflects the highest honor upon our country, and our gratitude is due to every man who has taken an honorable part in any capacity in bringing about its performance.

We now have a further duty to perform in connection with it, and that is to fortify it. We are in honor bound to fortify it ourselves, and only by so doing can we effectively guarantee its neutrality, and, moreover, effectively guarantee that it shall not be used against us. The chief material advantage—certainly one of the chief material advantages—which we shall gain by its construction is the way in which it will, for defensive purposes, double the power of the United States navy. To refuse to fortify it, and, above all, to consider for a moment such an act of utter weakness and folly as to invite other nations to step in and guarantee the neutrality of this purely American work (and thereby really to make it certain that in the event of war we should find the canal used against us as our fleets would be forbidden to pass through it, or else our opponents' fleets permitted to), would be to incur, and quite rightfully, the contempt of the world; it would mean the complete abandonment of the Monroe doctrine; it would be a wicked blow to our prestige on the Pacific; and, moreover, it would be in its essence treason to the destiny of the Republic.

OLD THEORY IS EXPLODED

Women Do Not Want Masterful Husbands Who Will Beat Them Now and Then.

When it comes to a question of disposition, says Robert Haven Schauffler, in his series of marriage articles now running in Success Magazine, 36 per cent. of the girls in the business world, stenographers, clerks, and so on, would like their husbands easy-going rather than masterful, as compared with 75 per cent. in the factories.

Readers of the first article in this series were perhaps surprised to find nobody demanding in her future husband what seems to many one of the indispensable qualifications for married happiness; that is the capacity for comradeship. Not one factory girl mentioned this quality and only a very few girls of business. One bookkeeper in St. Louis added as an afterthought:

"He must treat me as a companion; not as a doll baby." A railroad cashier was the only one to reason from actual experience:

"Say, I had an experience once that gave me a lesson! I was working in the signal tower and there was a man worked there with me. He was a good looking enough fellah. If I'd 'a' known him anywhere else, I might 'a' took him when he asked me.

"Thank goodness I was up there with him all day long and I had a chance to find out. That's the way to learn a man. If some of those girls that got married could stay all day with a man for awhile, every day in the week, there wouldn't be so many mismates.

"Oh, there wasn't nothin' really wrong with him, only when his line o' talk played out there wasn't anything more to say. We'd sit up there silent as owls. Say, maybe I wasn't glad when I got a transfer. If we'd been married now, it wouldn't have been so easy to get a transfer."

From the Farewell Address.

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.—George Washington.

The Cost of a Soul.

A recent query sent out as to the cost of saving a soul in Chicago brought some interesting answers. It was found that the Mormons figured on spending $1,500 for every person converted, whereas the Volunteers of America set the cost as low as $5. These were the highest and lowest prices named.

Montana City Holds Record.

Miles City, Montana, holds the record for variation in temperature. The highest temperature recorded there is 111 deg., which is within 8 deg. of the highest recorded in the United States. Miles City's lowest mark has been 67 deg. below zero, which is truly arctic. The range between these two extremes is 178 deg., which is a record.

SQUARE DEAL IN TARIFF IS WANTED

Roosevelt Discusses Very Live Topic in Sioux Falls.

SHOULD BE MATERIAL ISSUE

Former President Says Present Law is Not Satisfactory and Argues for an Efficient Tariff Commission.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 3.—Colonel Roosevelt arrived here at 4:30 this afternoon on his tour of the middle west, and his schedule provided for an all night stop. He made one address, taking for his topic the tariff and arguing earnestly for the creation of a tariff commission. He said:

Whenever men "just like ourselves—probably not much better, and certainly no worse—continually fail to give us the results we have a right to expect from their efforts, we may just as well make up our minds that the fault lies, not in their personality, but in the conditions under which they work, and profit comes, not from denouncing them, but in seeing that the conditions are changed. This is especially true of tariff-making. It has been conclusively shown, by experiments repeated again and again, that the methods of tariff-making, by congress, which have now obtained for so many years, cannot, from the very nature of the case bring really satisfactory results. I think that the present tariff is better than the last, and considerably better than the one before the last; but it has certainly failed to give general satisfaction. I believe this country is fully committed to the principle of protection; but it is to protection as a principle; to protection primarily in the interest of the standard of living of the American workingman. I believe that when protection becomes, not a principle, but a privilege and a preference—or, rather, a jumble of privileges and preferences—then the American people disapprove of it. Now, to correct the trouble, it is necessary, in the first place, to get in mind clearly what we want, and, in the next place, to get in mind clearly the method by which we hope to obtain what we want. What we want is a square deal in the tariff as in everything else; a square deal for the wage-earner; a square deal for the employer; and a square deal for the general public. To obtain it we must have a thoroughly efficient and well-equipped tariff commission.

The tariff ought to be a material issue and not a moral issue; but if instead of a square deal we get a crooked deal, then it becomes very emphatically a moral issue. What we desire in a tariff is such measure of protection as will equalize the cost of production here and abroad; and as the cost of production is mainly labor cost, this means primarily a tariff sufficient to make up for the difference in labor cost here and abroad. The American public wants the American laboring man put on an equality with other citizens, so that he shall have the ability to achieve the American standard of living and the capacity to enjoy it; and to do this we must see that his wages are not lowered by improper competition with inferior wage-workers abroad—with wage-workers who are paid poorly and who live as no Americans are willing to live. But the American public does not wish to see the tariff so arranged as to benefit primarily a few wealthy men.

Commission Is the Solution.

As a means toward the attainment of its end in view we have as yet devised nothing in any way as effective as a tariff commission. There should be a commission of well-paid experts; men who should not represent any industry; who should be masters of their subjects; of the very highest character; and who should approach the matter with absolute disregard of every outside consideration. These men should take up in succession each subject with which the tariff deals and investigate the conditions of production here and abroad; they should find out the facts and not merely accept the statements of interested parties; and they should report to congress on each subject as soon as that subject has been covered. Then action can be taken at once on the particular subject concerned, while the commission immediately proceeds to investigate another. By these means log-rolling would be avoided and each subject treated on its merits, while there would be no such shock to general industry as is implied in the present custom of making sweeping changes in the whole tariff at once. Finally, it should be the duty of some governmental department or bureau to investigate the conditions in the various protected industries, and see that the laborers really are getting the benefit of the tariff supposed to be enacted in their interest. Moreover, to insure good treatment abroad we should keep the maximum and minimum provision.

For Waterway Legislation, Also.

The same principle of a first-class outside commission should be applied to river and harbor legislation. At present a river and harbor bill, like a tariff bill, tends to be settled by a squabble among a lot of big selfish interests and little selfish interests, with scant regard to the one really vital interest that of the general public. In this matter the National legislature would do well to profit by the example of Massachusetts. Formerly Massachusetts dealt with its land and harbor legislation just as at Washington tariff and river and harbor laws have been dealt with; and there was just the same pulling and hauling, the same bargaining and log-rolling, the same subordination of the general interest to various special interests. Last year Governor Draper took up the matter, and on his recommendation the legislature turned the whole business over to a commission of experts; and all trouble and scandal forthwith disappeared. Incidentally, this seems to me to be a first-class instance of progressive legislation.

Foreign Students In France.

From returns recently made to the French ministry of public instruction, it appears that there are over five thousand foreign students enrolled in the albums of the national universities. All told there are 41,044 students enrolled, so of one hundred students eighty-seven are French and thirteen foreigners. Of the foreigners, 1,797 are women and 3,444 men. There are only 2,033 French women students; Russia sends 2,556 students; Bulgaria, 254; Roumania, 330; Turkey, 232; Germany, 314; Egypt, 267; England, 177; Austria-Hungary, 132; United States, 232. Nearly all the English contingent is studying letters. Most of the foreign students go to Paris.—London Globe.

Cigar Boxes for Pepper.

Connecticut is an enterprising state. Its chief products in the good old days before the pure food laws were wooden nutmegs and basswood hams. Now she boasts a philanthropist who was recently arrested for grinding up cigar boxes and selling the result as pepper.

DAMAGE IS $100,000.00

TORNADO NEARLY WIPES TOWN OFF STATE MAP.

Nearly all Business Houses and Many Residences in Heaton are Reduced to Kindling.

Heaton, N. D., Aug. 30.—Two lives were lost and property to the value of $100,000 was demolished or damaged in a tornado which struck this village last evening at 5 o'clock.

The dead:

H. O. THORBINSON, father of Mrs. Knute Olsson.

BABY ALSSON, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Knute Alsson.

Seriously injured:

Mrs. A. R. Hulbert, wife of N. P. station agent.

Eugene Alsson, brother of babe that was killed.

O. E. Asling.

Jo. Piper.

The wind, which had been blowing a gale all afternoon, suddenly increased in volume and in a very few minutes many of the business buildings and a large number of residences were reduced to kindling. The inhabitants of the village are congratulating themselves today that more were not killed. The buildings which were almost if not entirely destroyed are as follows:

Heaton Lumber Co.'s hardware store.
Monarch elevator.
Lyons elevator.
Farmers' State bank.
Heaton State bank.
Congregational church and parsonage.
C. I. Turner residence.
Albert Alsson residence.
James Holdt residence.
Alfred Anderson residence.
Edward Banik livery.

Despite the fearful havoc wrought by the wind the only deaths were an aged man, H. O. Thorbinson, who was killed in the house of his daughter, Mrs. Alfred Anderson, and the infant daughter of Albert Alsson. There were a large number of injured people, but none was seriously hurt except A. R. Hulbert.

John Brown Memoriam.

Osawatomie, Kas., Aug. 30.—Not since that time fifty-four years ago, when John Brown's men withstood ten times their number of Missouri guerillas in the woods at the edge of the town has Osawatomie been so excited. Today the celebration of that anniversary began.

The town stretched itself and is holding thousands of visitors from all parts of the state. Perhaps twice today's crowd or at least 25,000 persons are expected here tomorrow at the second day of the celebration when Theodore Roosevelt will make the address dedicating to the state as a park, the wooded hillside where the battle was fought.

Crippen Breaks Down.

London, Eng., Aug. 30.—Hawley H. Crippen, jointly accused with Ethel Clare Leneve of the murder of his wife, has suffered a nervous collapse and was removed today to the hospital ward of Bristol jail.

Solicitor Newton says that his client has given him an explanation of the farewell message found among the prisoner's effects by Inspector Dew which will throw a different light on the matter when it is made public.

The message was read in court yesterday at the arraignment of Crippen and Miss Leneve and indicated that the writer contemplated suicide during his flight to Canada on the steamer Montrose.

Bullets Halt Jail Delivery.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 30.—A shower of bullets from three points of a triangle effectually prevented a wholesale jail delivery at the city workhouse here. Eight prisoners who made the dash for freedom sought refuge in the chapel house. A ninth, Sam Gibson, fell into a ten-foot areaway while trying to escape and sustained a fractured skull from which it is thought he will die, while a tenth, Thomas Monaghan, disappeared and has not been recaptured. The guards and police, anticipating the attempt on the part of the prisoners remained on the alert all night.

Discuss Tax Problem.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 30.—The tax problem will be treated from a scientific standpoint by delegates attending the annual convention of the International Tax association which opened a four days' session in Milwaukee today.

The first meeting was given over to addresses of welcome, responses and organization. The reading of important papers will begin with tonight's session.

Big Jewel Robbery on Vessel.

New York, Aug. 30.—Jewels to the value of $4,000, the property of Miss Ethel May Davis of Chicago, were stolen from her state room on the steamer, Kaiser Wilhelm II., early last Friday morning during the steamer's voyage from Bremen to this port. The robbery became known with the arrival of the liner here today.

Spanish War Veterans Close Session.

Denver, Col., Aug. 31.—The election of officers and selection of next year's place of meeting will mark the closing session of the United Spanish War Veterans here today. A ball tonight and an excursion into the mountains tomorrow will bring the encampment to an end.

Western Canadian Wheat.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 30.—The annual crop estimate of the Northwestern Grain Dealers' association has been issued, giving the following figures: Wheat, 8,453,200 acres at 12.6 bushels an acre, 106,510,320 bushels; oats 4,217,400 acres at 26.5 bushels an acre, 111,983,000 bushels; barley, 1,022,000 acres at 19.1 bushels an acre, 19,520,000; flax, 630,000 acres at 8.4 bushels an acre, 5,292,000. The total yield is thus placed at 243,305,320 bushels. This estimate for wheat, oats and barley is higher than that made a week ago, but the difference is accounted for by the recent favorable weather.

Slays Wife and Self.

Great Falls, Mont., Aug. 30.—Lying dead in the ranch home, several miles north of Shelby, the bodies of P. J. Hazelberg and his wife were found yesterday by neighbors. They had evidently been dead some days. The bodies were lying side by side and hand in hand, with a bullet in the head of each.

The position of the bodies and the surroundings indicated that the husband first shot his wife and then, fixing his rifle with a stick and a piece of string, he laid down beside the body, clasped his wife's hand and fired the bullet through his own body.

TAX CONVENTION

LEADING REVENUE RAISERS OF ALL NATIONS MEET AT MILWAUKEE.

FOR INTERNATIONAL MEET

Matter of Getting Equitable Value on all Property Is Declared to Be a Profession—Should Develop Experts.

Milwaukee, Aug. 31.—Allen R. Foote, president of the International Tax association today presented a lengthy paper to the fourth International conference on state and local taxation, on Taxation Work and Experience in Ohio.

To secure justice between taxpayers by an intelligent, effective and an economical administration of the general property tax it is absolutely necessary to develop into a profession the work of determining the values of property for taxation and that the appointments of tax officials should be made regardless of political affiliations, was one of the conclusions reached through his experience.

He suggested independent action for state and local governments in assigning specific subjects of taxation to jurisdiction of each classification of all corporations organized for profit and to assess each class by a law having a uniform application throughout the state. All property taxable on an ad valorem basis should be listed for taxation at its true value in money.

William A. Robinson, of Kentucky, suggested the appointment by governors of states of permanent tax commissions.

New York Situation Again.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 31.—The New York political situation loomed up again in Beverly when District Attorney Henry T. Wise of New York city, and Representative W. S. Bennett, also of the metropolis, arrived here seeking interviews with the president. Bennett has been prominently mentioned for the republican gubernatorial nomination from time to time.

President Taft's last intimation of his attitude was to the effect that he was going to leave the handling of the New York situation to the party leaders in that state, those leaders including Colonel Roosevelt, of course.

The president tried to bring about harmony, but found it impossible. He does not care to assume a dictatorial attitude in any state, believing it to be against the dignity of his office, and he will not do so in any state.

President Taft laid the cornerstone of the new Y. M. C. A. building in this city. Last year he headed a subscription list for the structure.

Banking Law Upheld.

New York, Aug. 31.—The United States circuit court today refused to grant motions which would have had the effect of interfering with the operation of recent amendments to the state banking law, taking effect tomorrow.

Judge Lacombe denied motions made by Morris Engel and Samuel Kohan for an injunction restraining Attorney General O'Malley and other state officials from enforcing the provisions of the amendments which require private banking concerns to take out licenses and furnish large bonds for the protection of the depositors.

In sustaining the demurrers interposed in the case Judge Lacombe also dismissed the bills of complaint. It was contended that the new requirements of the law imposed an unjust hardship upon private bankers.

New County of Yellowstone.

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 31.—The petition for the chance to vote on the division of McKenzie county has been circulated, signed and presented to the board of county commissioners and the question will have a place on the ballot this fall. The division line will start at the center of the stream of the Little Missouri river on the southern boundary of the county and follow up to the intersection with range 99, then west to half way between ranges 100 and 99 and then in a straight line north to the Missouri river. All of that part west of the line is to be known as Yellowstone and that east of the line will retain the old name of McKenzie.

Republicans Gain in Portugal.

Lisbon, Aug. 31.—Complete returns from the recent parliamentary election with the exceptions invalidated by fraud show the following: Ministerialists, 90; monarchists, 19; opposition, 40; republicans, 14. This is a republican gain.

Wife Dead; Daughter Stolen.

Princeton, Ky., Aug. 31.—Robbed of his wife by death and his daughter by kidnapers, Texis Allison, a prosperous farmer, has returned home after a vain search through six southern states.

Little Gladys Allison was abducted while returning from the funeral of her mother, three weeks ago at Shreveport, La., and since then the father has been unable to find a single trace of the child.

He is not a rich man and does not believe the little girl was taken in the hope of securing a reward and believes the kidnapers have given him no chance to pay a ransom.

Mystery is Uncovered.

New York, Aug. 31.—Little hope is held out today for the recovery of Vera Fitch, daughter of the late Henry Fitch of Oakland, Cal., who shot herself Monday night in the Hotel Astor. The beautiful young girl was positively identified by her mother today. Miss Fitch still tries to conceal her identity.

She lived here with her sister Grace, formerly a San Francisco belle, now the wife of Roy W. Conger, a nephew of the late E. H. Conger, formerly minister to China. Mrs. Conger admitted today that [illegible] made of her sister.

Negro Hiding in Cornfield.

Paris, Ky., Aug. 31.—James January, a negro, charged with attempting a criminal assault on a white woman, is surrounded by armed posses in a large cornfield near this city and may be lynched. January's attempt was made on Mrs. Virgie Gray, wife of a farmer.

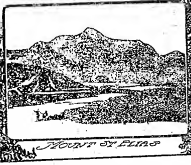
Quake Causes Panic.

Rome, Aug. 30.—A strong earthquake shock was felt throughout Calabria at 1:15 this morning. The inhabitants awakened from their sleep and fled panic stricken into the streets. No casualties have been reported.

CLIMBED and UNCLIMBED PEAKS of AMERICA

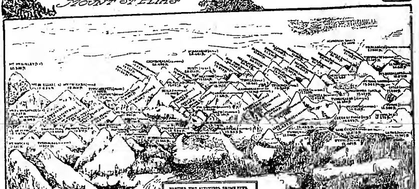
by GRANVILLE FORTESCUE

THE lure of altitude seems to have caught at the spirit of man to lead him struggling up almost unscalable peaks from earliest times. However, it may be said that only within the last half century has the fascination of mountain climbing become the romance of geography; daring scientists have conquered more mountains in that period than during any other time in their search for geological data, and many lives have been sacrificed at the shrine of science by her devotees while pitting skill and strength against enduring nature. Soon little was left to learn in this field in Europe, so these intrepid mountaineers, ever struggling to reach the top of the world, turned their eyes toward Asia, Africa and America, seeking other difficulties to overcome and hailing with joy any word of the discovery of a new gigantic elevation. In the western world was found a fertile field for their efforts. Ten thousand miles of mountain, from the Circle to the Horn, with peaks piercing the skies from the snow lands of Alaska, aslant America, through the tropical table lands of Ecuador to the wilds of Patagonia. The elevations of the southern half of this range that have since held the interest of scientist and traveler alike, were almost unknown and unnamed, and South America to the Alpine mountain climber was terra incognito indeed. A dim knowledge of the mountain majesty of the northern half of this range had come to them through the writings of the early explorers. MacKenzie's voyages, the tales of Bering's travels and the stories of Cook's voyages in the Pacific ocean contained references to high mountains often seen from their ships; but it would seem that Mount McKinley, the highest peak of the range of the Rockies, received little notice from early explorers, although in favorable weather it can be seen for a distance of 150 miles, a great white mass that dwarfs the many hills surrounding it. In fact, in 1897, when Mr. W. A. Dickey, who had ascended the Susitana river and had located and named Mount McKinley, upon returning to civilization described his discovery, his story was not believed, and the whole account of his trip was treated as a traveler's tale. However, there is reason to believe that Vancouver saw this mountain in 1795, and it was long known to the natives of the vicinity as "Tralelka," a word which means "Great mountain," and when the Russians owned Alaska they called it "Bulshaia," a word of the same significance. Even before Mr. Dickey called attention to it and named it Mount McKinley the prospectors of the Yukon knew it as Frank Densmore's peak. Mr. Dickey's estimate of its height, 20,000 feet, is interesting in view of the fact that subsequent measurements showed that he was only 300 feet out of the way in his guess. The figures now given by the geological survey, obtained by taking the mean of twenty measurements, arrived at by triangulation, places the height as 20,300. This great mountain defied all attempts to dominate its peak until the early spring of 1910, when an expedition under Thomas Lloyd made a dash for the top and after weeks of incessant toil reached their goal.



MOUNT ST ELIAS

MIGHTY ACONCAGUA



MOUNT McKINLEY

Mount Fairweather, the most imposing peak rising flush from the sea level, was so named by Cook in 1778. There are no records that it has ever been climbed, although its altitude, 15,292 feet, would not indicate that the ascent was difficult.

More interesting than Fairweather is Mount St. Elias, a peak first seen by Bering in 1741, and given its name because the day of discovery was sacred to St. Elias. Its height was for years a matter of acrimonious dispute among scientists. In the beginning of the last century M. Degeiat, a French explorer, by measuring the reciprocal distances of adjacent mountains and taking their relative angles with his sextant, determined its height as 12,672 feet above sea level and its location as eight leagues from the coast. Later, Malaspina gave the figures of elevation as 17,800 feet, but now the figures arrived at by the geological survey give the altitude as 18,024 feet. In 1886 Lieutenant Schwatte of the United States army made an attempt to ascend Mount St. Elias. He was followed by Mr. Toppam in 1888, while Professor Russell made two attempts in 1890 and 1891, and in the latter effort foiled by a very small margin. The honor of conquering this giant of the north was reserved for the duke of the Abruzzi, who solved this stubborn problem of geology in 1897, while he was making one of his voyages in search of the farthest north.

We will leave the great peaks of Alaska and consider the mountains of the Pacific slope in the United States proper. Mounts Whitney, Shasta, Hood and Rainier early caught the eye of the alpinists of our country, and the account of the climbs of Clarence King in California is a most interesting and well-written story of the first geological exploration of the Sierras. Sierra is the Spanish word that signifies a mountain range; it also means "saw" in the Castilian tongue, and was applied to certain geological formations because of the fancied resemblance of their outlines to that of this carpenter's tool.

In the Sierra Nevada mountains the most prominent peak is Mount Tyndall, named in honor of the famous English scientist. This peak is especially notable as being the object of one of the most remarkable climbs in the history of mountaineering, when it was ascended by Clarence King. He was at that time a member of the California state geological survey and had been sent out with others by Prof. Josiah Dwight Whitney to make geological investigations.

This climb was not as remarkable in point of altitude (for the mountain is but 14,386 feet in height) as in the matter of difficulties overcome and because of the curious aids used, a lasso and a bowie knife, which are probably unique in the annals of alpinism.

There are higher summits than Tyndall in the western states. Mount Whitney, named in honor of Prof. J. D. Whitney, is perhaps the highest peak in the United States proper, being 14,502 feet above the level of the sea. This height was dominated by Bengale, Lucas and Johnson in 1873. Mount Shasta, its name being derived from the Indian tribe Soste or Shastika, with its snow and silver crown shining in the clouds, is perhaps one of the most beautiful peaks of our country.

In Mexico, a land that might be called the mother of volcanoes, we find three majestic mountains of interest, both because of altitude and history. Orizaba, of almost perfect geometric form, known to the Indians as "Citlaltepetl" (Mountain of the Star), rises over 18,000 feet—a beautiful lime-white cone.

The honor of being the first up this glorious peak belongs to an American, William F. Reynolds, second lieutenant of engineers, who was attached to Scott's army in 1848. Ono Meyaards accompanied him, and the party is supposed to have included several soldiers.

Orizaba is a sacred mountain in Aztec mythology. The legend runs that Quetzelcoatl, "God of the Air," and indeed the great prophet and most important figure of the Toltec religion, corresponding to Confucius in China, Mahomet in India, and of whom the Messiah myth was also current, died at Coatzacoalcos and his body was brought to Orizaba. His royal remains were consumed by a divine fire and his spirit flew heavenward under the form of a beautiful peacock.

Ixteccihuatl, the ruin of a volcano, might be known as the despair of the American school teacher, because of its seemingly unpronounceable name. However, "white woman," for that is what the word means in the Aztec tongue, is simple of saying, and if one pronounces Ixtaccihuatl as if it were written Is-tac-see-wetl, it will be close enough in view of our meager knowledge of this ancient idiom.

This mountain is 16,200 feet high with a snow line at 14,300 feet, and Cortez was the first European to cross it when he passed to the valley of Mexico on his campaign of conquest. A German named Sonneschmidt dominated it in 1772, while almost a century later, in 1853, a party of French engineers scaled its sloping sides.

And now we come to that Vesuvius of America, Popocatepetl, "the mountain of smoke," for such is the significance of the word in the language of the Aztecs. It rises in glorious elevation 17,794 feet above the sea, and although some 50 miles from the City of Mexico seems to stand a sentinel at its very gates. Indian tradition has it that both Popocatapetl and Ixtaccihuetl were thrown up from the plain after a violent earthquake and have attained their present heights by the gradual piling up of lava and rocks after various eruptions. The last of these disturbances occurred in 1802.

To whom the honor of first surmounting Popocatapetl belongs is difficult to determine, but a distinguished congressman of the United States, Hon. William Sulzer, recently conquered the "mountain of smoke."

South of the isthmus are situated the mountain monarchs of the western world, and it is only within forty years that these geological problems have received the attention of adventurous scientists, although Humboldt made explorations and ascents in South America as early as 1802. He it was who attempted to scale Chimborazo, "the white watcher of the western seas," but failed to get beyond 19,000 feet, a most notable achievement, however, under the circumstances.

The glory of its conquest belongs to that master of the Matterhorn, Edward Whympar, who fought his way up the rugged, snow-clad sides to the top, 20,498 feet above the broad Pacific.

The great mountains Antisana and Cayamba, both over 19,000 feet elevation, also succumbed to the untiring Whymper, and the record of his deeds of danger climbing in the equatorial Andes is a classic of the annals of geological exploration. After these colossi of the Cordilleras had been conquered, the eyes of the alpinists turned southward, where still more lofty peaks of undetermined heights were known to exist. In the great tableland of Chile stood cloud-crested Aconcagua, rising grandly to the skies, while Tupungato, Illimani, and Sorata still defied the most determined to surmount their topmost heights.

Acancagua, the highest of the Andean peaks (23,080 feet), was the first to fall as a prize to daring climbers, for Mr. E. A. Fitzgerold, the English geologist, fitted out an expedition in 1897, and although personally compelled by sickness to abandon his attempt to reach the summit when within a short distance of realizing his ambition, one of his companions, Burbriggen, the guide, went to the very apex, and later Mr. S. Vines and Santi Nicolo, members of the Fitzgerald expedition, also arrived at the top. Later, in 1898, Sir Martin Conway, another intrepid English alpinist, made the ascent of Mount Acancagua and placed the peak Illimani to his credit. Conway was not, however, content with this victory, but pushed on to place Mount Sorato on his roll of first ascents.

RAISE PLUME PRICES

Advance of 50 Per Cent. in Cost of Feathers.

Ornament Becoming More Fashionable and Last Three Years Have Seen Greater Demand Both Abroad and in America.

London.—Ostrich plumes,—always an expensive item of woman's millinery—are generally growing more and more valuable. During the last three years the price of these feathers has risen 50 per cent., was the information imparted by a West end merchant. A feather that a few years ago cost only $50 is now worth $75.

"The ostrich plume is the most fashionable feather this year," he said, "and very few other varieties are worn. More ostrich feathers are being sold than ever before.

"We are making one form of feather nearly two yards long in some cases, to be arranged round the crown of a large hat. Other large plumes are sold in sets of three. The most fashionable colors are shaded grays, chinchilla, which will be worn on chinchilla toques in the winter, and blues, from royal to navy. But the feathers now sent over are of a much better quality than formerly. There has been a great increase in the supply from ostrich farms. With the demand for feathers, ostriches, too, have become more expensive, and the farmer now has to pay $5,000 a pair for birds.

"As for the reason of their popularity and increased cost, ostrich plumes have had a great vogue this summer in Paris.

"American women, too have helped to make plumes more expensive. At the April auction one-half of the whole quantity put up for sale was purchased by American buyers to take over to the United States."

Hand-painted hats are also becoming something of a fad with the "smart set." They are made in soft white felt, with beautiful flowers and foliage, feathers or any other kinds of ornamentation painted on them. Oil colors are used, and, according to Heath's, the Oxford street hatters, the headgear is to all intents and purposes indestructible.

"We have one," the manager said, "which is covered with great red decorative poppies, and they are painted so realistically that they really look like freshly gathered flowers.

"An ordinary flower trimmed hat can only be worn a short time by the well-dressed woman, because the decorations get knocked about or are ruined by the weather, but the painted hat will last for the whole season, and more, with proper care."

The married man who is wont to tremble at the tremendous collection of hat and bonnet boxes which his wife insists on taking with her when on a holiday tour regards the painted hat as a godsend, for it can be folded up and packed away like his own Panama, and, moreover, it is calculated to cut down the millinery bills by half or more. If the wife's taste does not lean to flowers or feathers, she can have lizard, snake or chanticleer designs painted on the felt, or even goldfish swimming in a shady pool.

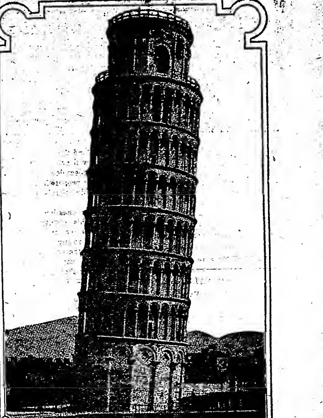
Glaciers Increase Speed.

Juneau, Alaska.—The great glacier in Rainy Hollow, near Haines, Alaska, is moving at the prodigious rate of 12 feet a day. Huge masses of ice are falling with thunderous noise over the precipice, at whose brink the glacier discharges.

This is a season of glacier advances all over Alaska. Never before has such rapid extension of the ice rivers been known. The theory is that avalanches caused by earthquakes are responsible for the increased flow.

The National Geographical society has an expedition in Alaska studying the phenomenon.

IS PISA'S FAMOUS TOWER FALLING?



LEANING TOWER OF PISA

THE world-famous Leaning Tower of Pisa has always been popularly supposed to have been built out of the perpendicular of set purpose, but that interesting legend seems now to be untrue. And, worse still, it is leaning more and more, to its assured and speedy fall, as the Campanila of St. Mark's crashed down to ruin. That is the finding of Italian royal commissioners, who state that it cannot remain upright much longer, and demand the taking of immediate measures for its safety. They have found also that the foundations of the tower are only 9 feet 9 inches below the surface, and that it originally stood bolt upright. Also they state that the base of the tower is immersed in a watery sub-soil. The tower, which was begun in 1170, is known to have been affected by earthquake shock. In 1829 the tower was 14 feet 4 inches out of the vertical line; it is now 15 feet 4 inches.

BRINGS ANT PLAGUE

Dry Summer Causes Little Insects to Thrive.

Especially Active in Attacking Flowers, and in Some Localities Invading Homes—Moisture Is Chief Foe.

Chicago.—Following in the wake of the plague of tussock moths, though not as serious in comparison to the amount of destruction wrought but more of a nuisance, the plague of ants has settled upon the city to an extent that has created a widespread inquiry for means to get rid of the pest.

Experts say that the oversupply of ants is due to the unusually dry weather which has prevailed this summer, their favorite breeding places being in dry, sandy soil. While practically every section of the city has suffered to some extent from the busy little toilers, localities adjacent to the lake along the north and south shores have been most annoyed by the visitation.

As a rule ants are not considered as a serious menace to growing things, and they have even been credited with destroying the parasites which infest plant life, but this year, according to information from many sources, the ants have fallen to eating flowers of various kinds and the tender shoots of growing vines. They have made homes in lawns hitherto free from the nuisance, establishing themselves under stone and cement sidewalks, and have even carried their invasion to back porches and into homes, to the dismay of housewives. Among the flowers to which ants seem to have been paying particular attention are asters, whose succulent petals are attractive.

Householders have resorted to numerous expedients to exterminate the colonies of ants, but in most instances without much success. Kerosene oil is said to have been found effective in some instances, but the best remedy is declared to be any of the several exterminator powders on the market.

"Yes, we have had an unusual number of calls for advice with regard to ants this summer," said the manager of a big seed house; "they seem to have been unusually prolific, and the reason for it is the dry weather. Ants thrive best and breed best in sand, and it is seldom that they care to remain in moist, loamy soil.

"Keep the ground as well soaked as possible, sprinkle the lawns plentifully and use some good ant exterminator with persistence. That would be my advice to those who are troubled with the little nuisances. By filling the crevices and runways of the bugs with exterminator they can easily be kept out of walls and away from sidewalks."

Kraut Outranks Beans.

Boston.—Sauer kraut is an ideal vegetarian diet. More people should eat it as a daily food. This is the health recipe of Dr. Samuel Wingersky, who has written extensively upon foodstuffs.

"Sauer kraut is an ideal vegetarian food," said Doctor Wingersky. "No; I should not advise every one to use this type of food, but when we are discussing a vegetarian diet there is nothing so toothsome as sauer kraut.

"It is tenfold better than any bean diet. Whatever good may be said of beans may be claimed likewise for sauer kraut."

RATS WREAK RUIN IN CANADA

Manitoba Farmers Compelled to Use Drastic Measures to Rid Province of Pest.

Gretna, Man.—The invasion of rats is becoming a serious matter, and unless strenuous efforts are made to stop their northern trek, they will reach Winnipeg before the end of the year. For miles in both directions they have crossed the boundary into Canada, and now it is no uncommon thing for a farmer to kill 20 or 30 of the rodents in a single day without going on a special hunt for their scalps.

Reports show that they are doing a vast amount of damage along their line of march, and estimates sent to the department of agriculture show that the loss already incurred through them this year will total over $5,000,000. Farmers have been supplied with liberal quantities of rat virus, but the use of this poison has proved a failure, for the farmers have not taken the pains to use it properly.

Traps which will catch the animals alive will be used and every female caught will be killed, while the males will be allowed their liberty. It is an established fact that polygamous rodents, lacking a supply of mates, vent their spleen upon their young, either eating them or killing them in large numbers. The supply of females diminishing, the males attack each other and the consequent strife proves fatal to the race and the object aimed at by those ridden by the pests is swiftly accomplished.

Instructions are now being issued broadcast by the officials of the department and it is hoped that in this way the invasion will be checked and within a year at the latest the rat will have disappeared from the province of Manitoba.

FAVORS RADIUM WATER CURE

Austrian Government Will Build Sanitarium at Joachimsthal for Treatment.

Vienna, Austria.—In consequence of successful results obtained from the radium treatment in Joachimsthal, Bohemia, the government has decided to build a first-class sanitarium there, equipped with 60 baths of radium water. The first authentic reports show that of 200 cases 169 were benefited greatly by the cure, while there was no change in the condition of the others.

The chief improvement noticed was in rheumatism, gout, neuralgia and old exudations of various kinds. The radium did not seem to have any effect on senile weakness or radical diseases of the spine and of the hearing.

Scientists are convinced that the radium cure has a great future, especially because it is easily applied, both externally and internally, with remarkably constant effect.

CHILD'S WRIST TELLS AGE

Prof. Rotch of Harvard Says It Is Best Test for Development of Mind and Body.

Cambridge, Mass.—Prof. Thomas Morgan Rotch of Harvard University is working along the lines set by Dr. Maximilian T. E. Grossman to determine the actual development of a child's mind and body, not by his or her years, but rather by different tests on a child's wrists and arms.

Dr. Rotch believes that there should be an anatomic standard set for practical use in athletics and in the schools. Dr. A. W. George has found the most practical and reliable index of development is represented by the hand and wrists.

Professor Rotch believes that young children should be classified by their anatomic age rather than their chronologic age.

"You can tell a horse's age by looking at his teeth, but in the child the truth is to be found in the wrist," he says. "The formation of the many little bones, that together make up the wrist, is the index of the development of the child. Whether his years number four or ten, the number of bones in his wrist will determine whether he is in reality a 4-year-old or a 10-year-old in strength of body and mind.

The baby's wrist shows two tiny bones in the mass of cartilages; the child that is just finishing childhood to enter upon the next period has a wrist "full of bones," so to speak.

Ban on Spooning.

Pittsburg, Pa.—By scanning city phone bills for the year the mayor's office has come to the conclusion that $12,000 paid out last year was for spooning stenographers and clerks making love to each other over the wire. Mayor William A. Magee has announced that the first city employe caught making love over the phone or permitting any outside sweetheart to hang phone tolls on the city will be discharged.

Coon Put Up Hot Fight.

Little Animal Made Things Interesting for Boy—Mother Comes to the Rescue.

The raccoon is not an animal that attacks human beings, and the following case is a singular exception. But, whether attacking or defending itself, the "coon" is by no means an agreeable beast to fight. Harry Smith of near Freeport, while fishing in Big Stillwater not long ago, had his attention attracted by a noise and, on looking around him, saw a large coon approaching stealthily, with its ears turned back.

Before the boy had time to consider the situation, the coon sprang at him, seized him by the leg and began biting and squealing at a terrible rate. The boy was being badly hurt as well as frightened, and set up a tremendous squall himself, at the same time making all the resistance possible against his unwelcome visitor. He first seized the intruder with his hands, whereupon the coon bit him severely on the arm.

The fight was kept up for some little time, during which the coon bit the boy's arms hands and legs alternately, until the boy's mother, who happened to be about one hundred yards from the interesting scene, arrived. The anxious mother, in order to relieve the boy, seized the coon with her hands, whereupon he fastened his teeth in her wrist, and for a little while the contest was lively between the three.

The desperate coon, in the meantime, seized upon the boy's arm again, whereupon the mother took from the boy's pocket his knife, and after fatally wounding the coon, it still held on firmly. Not until its throat was cut did the animal relax its hold.

One good way to keep your helpers interested is to let them share some of the credit.

It May Be Pneumonia

"A hard chill, pain through the chest, difficult breathing. Then fever, with great prostration." If this should be your experience, send for your doctor. You may have pneumonia! If your doctor cannot come at once, give Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. When he comes, tell him exactly what you have done. Then do as he says. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J.C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Keep the bowels in good condition. One of Ayer's Pills at bedtime will cause an increased flow of bile, and produce a gentle laxative effect the day following.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE COUNTY
OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$1.50 Per Year in Advance

MUCH TALK.

The Thief River Falls papers make bold statements amounting to vague accusations that Red Lake county's officials are corrupt.

They say there has been an unequal division of the road and bridge funds.

That is the substance of their arguments for the division of Red Lake county. And they talk and talk and talk about these things—and nothing else.

Why, you ask, do they conduct the campaign along such lines? It's easy. They can't give the voters of the county a single reason for division and their only hope is to get the people excited over manufactured stories of corruption and swing the election by prejudice.

If one or more of Red Lake county's officials were actually corrupt would you cure the evil by dividing the county into parts?

It's a silly proposition. If a public official is rotten it's the voter's job to get rid of the bad one.

They want to get you excited, Mr. Voter, so you will forget the real question at issue.

They talk about an unequal division of road and bridge money.

That's another reason why you should vote for county division, isn't it?

They are trying to get you excited some more.

When an application is made for road and bridge money to be expended in a certain locality the commissioners consider the needs of the locality and act accordingly. If your part of the county has not received the road money that it should you and your neighbors should place the matter before the county board and then let questions that you know the division of the county would effect decide your vote on the division proposition.

Don't you think that is the wise plan?

But there is a question, a serious question, in this county division proposition; it's the only question that is entitled to any consideration at the hands of the voters, and yet the Thief River papers avoid the subject and talk about anything to get the people excited so that they may use them.

The question is this: Is it practical to divide Red Lake county; would we gain or lose?

If there are any wrongs in Red Lake county they can be righted, but if the county is divided it will be a permanent change and you will be paying higher taxes for years to come.

The Thief River papers "point with pride" to the men who are to serve as the first board of county commissioners if the proposed new county is established and it is admitted that they are a fine bunch of fellows.

But that's something to talk about so you will forget other things. When you stop to think about it you don't consider that any reason for voting for county division. Wouldn't you feel like a plugged penny if the county were divided and at the next election Thief River Falls should vote in officials to run things with a high hand.

This much you know that more than two-third of the people of the proposed county live at Thief River Falls and in the vicinity and they will always control the board.

You know, too, that Thief River Falls is an ambitious young city and no one doubts, and the Thief River Falls people admit, that in a few years a fine court house and other building will be erected at Thief River Falls if division carries.

That will cost at least $100,000.00 and on top of that will be about two-thirds of Red Lake county's debts to be paid by the people in the new county, the cost of transcribing the records, etc. All of this will have to be paid and it will amount to more than another $100,000.00.

Don't you think, Mr. Farmer, that you'd better forget that jabber about corruption and road money and ask yourself the serious question, is it practical to divide Red Lake county at this time?

The answer to that question should determine your vote on the county division proposition.

A FAIR STATEMENT.

The following statement on the county division proposition taken from the last issue of the Sunbeam contains so much good reason that should be considered by the voters of the county that the Gazette reprints the article to give it wider circulation:

The Thief River Falls News claims that we are making a campaign of misrepresentations, on the county division proposition, when as a matter of fact we are not making any campaign at all, and if there is being any organized campaign made against division we have not heard about it, but we consider that the farmers should have the facts placed before them as they are, and not as the county division boomers are stating them.

The Red Lake county court house will be completed and already to turn over to the county November 1st, and Red Lake county on that date will pay the cash for it and it will belong to the county as it is now. Then in this same month we elect a full set of county officials to go into them and attend to the county's business for two years. Now Mr. Taxpayer, do you want to go a little farther down on the ticket and vote to establish a new county, with another new court house to build and another set of officers to pay?

We in the new county would no doubt be districted into new commissioner districts according to population which would of course be fair, but it would give three commissioners to the city of Thief River Falls and the territory surrounding it while the rest of the county would have two. Now as the people of Thief River Falls have been bending their city for public improvements, what would be more natural than that they would want to bend Pennington county to its limit to build up some grand buildings in Thief River Falls. But says one: "We have farmers for our county commissioners." Don't deceive yourself by thinking that the towns of Kratka and Highlanding will each of them have a county commissioner, for they will not after the new county is organized.

We have no particular objection to county division if the people of the north part of the county think they can afford it, but we think it would have been better to have waited a few more years, until the northern part of the county had got better settled up and improved. Of course we are aware that this argument will not have any affect on some people that are looking for office, or some other rake off out of the deal but we believe in letting the common tax payers fully understand the situation as it is.

PROCEEDINGS

Official Proceedings Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County.

Red Lake Falls, Minnesota,
August 31st, 1910.

Pursuant to call the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County, State of Minnesota, met in special session at the office of the County Auditor in the City of Red Lake Falls, Minn., at 10:00 o'clock A. M. August 31st, 1910.

Members present: Demann, Aubol, Johnson and Pigeon.

Members absent: Lindquist.

Meeting called to order by Vice Chairman Demann at 10:00 o'clock A.M.

Motion made by Commissioner Johnson, seconded by Commissioner Aubol and carried unanimously that the plat of Garden Addition to Fairfield, Red Lake county, Minnesota, be approved.

On motion duly carried a recess was taken to 1:00 o'clock P. M.

Board re-convened at 1:00 o'clock P. M. and called to order by the Vice Chairman.

Moved by Commissioner Pigeon, seconded by Commissioner Johnson and carried unanimously that Exerie Chatel be employed to level off the court house grounds, the rate of compensation to be $4.00 per day for each man and team employed on the work; Commissioner Demann to have general supervision of the work and C. H. Martz appointed Engineer in charge of the work.

The minutes of the Board's meeting of January 4th, (regular), January 22nd, (adjourned regular), February 17th (special), February 23rd, (Ditch), February 24th, (special), March 18th, (ditch), March 18th, (special,) April 9th (ditch), April 9th, (special), April 23rd (ditch), April 23rd (special), May 6th (special), May 26th (ditch), May 27th (ditch), May 26th (special), June 17th, (ditch), June 10th (special) June 17th (ditch), June 17th (special), July 1st (ditch) July 1st (special) July 11th, (regular) July 18th, (ditch), July 18th (Board of Equalization) July 21st (adjourned regular), July 29th (ditch) July 29th (special), August 5th, (ditch) and August 5th (special) were read and on motion unanimously carried were accepted and approved as read.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

For County Treasurer.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for county treasurer of Red Lake county and respectfully solicit the support and votes of all who believe that I will, if nominated and elected, run the office in an honest, efficient and economical manner.

If elected I hereby pledge that I will run the office to the best of my ability in an impartial and businesslike manner

A the Republican Primaries Sept. 20th, 1910.

-HARRY E. IVES.

For Congressman

Henry O. Bjorge, candidate for the Republican nomination for member of congress in the Ninth District, was born on a farm near Lake Park, Becker county, Minn. He is a graduate of the Moorhead State Normal and of the Law Department of the State University. At the time of his father's death he took charge of the farm where he now resides. Mr. Borge has served three terms as a member of the Minnesota legislature and is the first native born to represent Becker county in this official capacity. He is also the first candidate for member of congress born in the Ninth Congressional distict.

He stands against Cannon and Cannonism; he stands for the Roosevelt policies and for genuine progressive legislation.

For State Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effectively on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.—ALBERT BERG, Spooner, Minnesota.

For County Treasurer.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Treasurer of Red Lake county and solicit your support and your vote at the primary election to be held September 20, 1910.—G. G. KINDSETH.

For Sheriff.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff of Red Lake county, and respectfully solicit the support of all. If nominated and elected I will at all times do my duty.

—CHARLES J. FELLMAN.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Representative from the 61st legislative district. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to work for a just reapportionment of the state into legislative districts, for a one mill tax for good roads and for other needs of northern Minnesota as enumerated in the resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association.—NOEL DELORME.

For Judge of Probate.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Judge of Probate and solicit your support and vote at the primary election to be held Sept. 20, 1910.—WM. HOLBERG.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st legislative district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all efforts to secure the redistricting of the state, a one mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'NEILL.

For Representative.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the Republican nomination for member of the house of Representatives from the 61st legislative district, comprising the counties of Red Lake, Clearwater and Beltrami. If nominated and elected I will use all honorable means to secure a just reapportionment of the state, a one mill tax for road purposes will receive my support and I will work for the needs of northern Minnesota as enumerated in Resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association.—IVER A. KROHN.

For County Auditor.

I fully intended entering another vocation and had no intention of filing for the office of County Auditor but have been constantly and repeatedly urged to become a candidate for the office by your township and school officials and other men throughout the county with whom I have come into close contact through my relations with them as County Auditor. I have therefore decided to enter the race for County Auditor on the Republican ticket at the primaries to be held September 20.

Having been appointed by your county board May 15, 1909, to fill the unexpired term of the late John B. O'Brien, deceased, I have conducted the affairs of the office to the best of my ability since that time.

I will appreciate the vote and support at the coming primaries of all those who believe I am worthy of filing this responsible position and promise you that if nominated and elected I will conduct the affairs of the office in an honest and impartial manner the same as I have in the past.

Respectfully,
A. A. LATENDRESSE.

S.S.S. CURES RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a specific blood fermentation, a souring of the circulation from an excess of uric acid accumulating in the blood stream. This uratic impurity comes usually as a result of constipation, weak kidneys, indigestion and stomach disturbances. These systemic irregularities may not be of marked severity or of long duration, but each has a direct effect on the eliminative members of the body, which prevents the proper removal of the waste products. This refuse remains in the stomach and bowels, and souring forms uric acid, which the blood quickly absorbs.

Rheumatism is usually manifested in the joints and muscles. It is here its sharpest twinges of pain are felt, and stiffening of ligaments and tendons first commence. The pain of Rheumatism is caused by the contact of the sensory nerves with the gritty, acrid formation which uric acid causes to accumulate in the corpuscles of the blood about the joints. The stiffening of muscles and joints is usually gradual. Constantly the blood deposits the uric acid into the joints, and slowly the natural fluids are dried up and destroyed. Then Rheumatism becomes chronic and serious. Rheumatism is sometimes inherited, for like all blood diseases it can be transmitted to offspring. This explains why some persons are afflicted with the disease, and suffer its pains, who have otherwise been perfectly healthy.

S.S.S. cures Rheumatism and cures it permanently. It goes into the circulation, and removes the uric acid, purifies the blood, and in this way destroys the cause. S.S.S. changes the blood from a sour, acid-steeped stream to a rich, healthy fluid, which quiets the excited nerves, eases the throbbing muscles and painful joints, and filters out of the circulation the irritating matter which causes every painful symptom of the disease. When the blood has been purified and enriched by S.S.S., it nourishes the different members that have been weakened and starved because of imperfect blood. RHEUMATISM FORTY YEARS.

I suffered with lumbago for a long time, and speaking of it to a friend one day he told me to try S.S.S. I did so, and soon found it was helping me. I had rheumatism for more than forty years, having contracted it in the army, but S.S.S cured me sound and well, and have had no return of the trouble. I think S.S.S. has no equal for curing rheumatism.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Shorthand Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All Fargo banks and 685 others employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers, stenographers or cashiers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement.

Our $50.00 Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk or bookkeeper. The new $85.00 course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court, Third Judicial District and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

The D. B. C. has built a magnificent new building (30,000 square feet) is seated with roll-top desks, has 60 typewriters, adding machines, billers, money changers, etc. Pupils deal with each other and with magnificently equipped offices, using aluminum money. The work is fascinating and practical. The Northwest has "no other school like the D. B. C." For catalogue and full information about any department, address

Sale of Ditching Jobs.

Notice is Hereby Given, That on the 17th day of September, 1910, at 1:30 o'clock P. M., at my office in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, I will sell the jobs of digging and constructing the Ditch No. [illegible] of Red Lake county, established by the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, by their order bearing date July 24th, 1910. For the work as one job, and also by one or more sections of 100 feet each, and also by one or more of the construction jobs, each of said sections to be known and numbered [illegible] as shown by the report of the Engineer in said matter, commencing at the one including the outlet, and from thence, successively, up stream to the one including the source being Stations "0" to Stations "211" of the Main Ditch both inclusive with a yardage of 31,930 cubic yards and from stations "0" to stations "210" of the branch ditch, both inclusive, with a yardage of [illegible] cubic yards, contemplating the total excavation and removal of 74,125 cubic yards of earth. Its aim to be placed along the sides of the ditch in such a manner as to form a turnpike or grade in the time and manner prescribed in the plans, profiles, maps and specifications of the civil engineer in charge, all on file in my office to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders, and that bids are invited for said work: said work to be completed within the time required and in the manner specified in said Engineer's report. And no bid will be entertained which is more than thirty (30) per cent over and above the estimate cost of the construction, in any case, as stated in the said order, and the successful bidder will be required to give a satisfactory bond, to be approved by the Auditor of said County, with two freehold sureties, for the faithful performance and fulfillment of his contract, and to pay all damages that may accrue by reason of his failure to complete the job within the time required in the contract. The said order and estimates and profile are on file, and may be seen at my office.

The approximate amount of work to be done in the construction of each ditch is as follows: The excavation and removal of 74,125 cubic yards of earth as herein above stated, at an estimated cost of Seven Thousand Four Hundred Twelve & 50/100 ($7,412.50) Dollars.

The estimated total cost of the work is $10,162.50 Dollars.

All bids must be accompanied by a certified check payable to the Auditor of said County, for not less than ten per cent of the amount of each bid. The right to reject any and all bids is hereby reserved.

Dated August 6th, 1910.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. Unseemly noises disturbed her during the night. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff-button in a hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff-button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson arrived. Gertrude revealed she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. Gertrude was suspected. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff-button. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey left in response to a telegram. Gertrude said she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him a loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong wrecked his own bank and could clear Bailey. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, was found at the lodge. The lodgekeeper said Louise and Arnold had a long talk the night of the murder. Louise was prostrated. Louise told Halsey, that while she still loved him she was to marry another, and that he would despise her when he learned the whole story. It developed that Dr. Walker and Louise were to be married. A prowler was heard in the house. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Louise said she had heard a knock at the door and answered it. Something brushed past her on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder.

CHAPTER XIX.—Continued.

"Why was Mr. Bailey not present at the inquest?"

The detective's expression was peculiar.

"Because his physician testified that he is ill, and unable to leave his bed."

"Ill!" I exclaimed. "Why, neither Halsey nor Gertrude has told me that."

"There are more things than that, Miss Innes, that are puzzling. Bailey gives the impression that he knew nothing of the crash at the bank until he read it in the paper Monday night, and that he went back and surrendered himself immediately. I do not believe it. Jonas, the watchman at the Traders' bank, tells a different story. He says that on the Thursday night before, about 8:30, Bailey went back to the bank. Jonas admitted him, and he says the cashier was in a state almost of collapse. Bailey worked until midnight, then he closed the vault and went away. The occurrence was so unusual that the watchman pondered over it all the rest of the night. What did Bailey do when he went back to the Knickerbocker apartments that night? He packed a suit-case ready for instant departure. But he held off too long; he waited for something. My personal opinion is that he waited to see Miss Gertrude before flying from the country. Then, when he had shot down Arnold Armstrong that night, he had to choose between two evils. He did the thing that would immediately turn public opinion in his favor, and surrendered himself, as an innocent man. The strongest thing against him is his preparation for flight, and his deciding to come back after the murder of Arnold Armstrong. He was shrewd enough to disarm suspicion as to the graver charge."

The evening dragged along slowly. Mrs. Watson came to my bedroom before I went to bed and asked if I had any arnica. She showed me a badly swollen hand, with reddish streaks running toward the elbow; she said it was the hand she had hurt the night of the murder a week before, and that she had not slept well since. It looked to me as if it might be serious, and I told her to let Dr. Stewart see it.

The next morning Mrs. Watson went up to town on the 11 train and was admitted to the Charity hospital. She was suffering from blood-poisoning. I fully meant to go up and see her there, but other things drove her entirely from my mind. I telephoned to the hospital that day, however, and ordered a private room for her, and whatever comforts she might be allowed.

Mrs. Armstrong arrived Monday evening with her husband's body, and the services were set for the next day. The house on Chestnut street, in town, had been opened, and Tuesday morning Louise left us to go home. She sent for me before she went, and I saw she had been crying.

"How can I thank you, Miss Innes?" she said. "You have taken me on faith, and—you have not asked me any questions. Some time, perhaps, I can tell you; and when that time comes, you will all despise me—Halsey, too."

I tried to tell her how glad I was to have had her, but there was something else she wanted to say. She said it finally, when she had made a constrained good-by to Halsey and the car was waiting at the door.

"Miss Innes," she said in a low tone, "if they—if there is any attempt made to—to have you give up the house, do it, if you possibly can. I am afraid—to have you stay."

That was all. Gertrude went into town with her and saw her safely home. She reported a decided coolness in the greeting between Louise and her mother, and that Dr. Walker was there, apparently in charge of the arrangements for the funeral. Halsey disappeared shortly after Louise left and came home about nine that night, muddy and tired. As for Thomas, he went around dejected and sad, and I saw the detective watching him closely at dinner. Even now I wonder—what did Thomas know? What did he suspect?

At ten o'clock the household had settled down for the night. Liddy, who was taking Mrs. Watson's place, had finished examining the tea-towels and the corners of the shelves in the cooling-room, and had gone to bed. Alex, the gardener, had gone heavily up the circular staircase to his room, and Mr. Jamieson was examining the locks of the windows. Halsey dropped into a chair in the living room and stared moodily ahead. Once he roused.

"What sort of a looking chap is that Walker, Gertrude?" he asked.

"Rather tall, very dark, smooth-shaven. Not bad looking," Gertrude said, putting down the book she had been pretending to read. Halsey kicked a taboret viciously.

"Lovely place this village must be in the winter," he said irrelevantly. "A girl would be buried alive here."

It was then some one rapped at the knocker on the heavy front door. Halsey got up leisurely and opened it, admitting Warner. He was out of breath from running, and he looked half abashed.

"I am sorry to disturb you," he said. "But I didn't know what else to do. It's about Thomas."

"What about Thomas?" I asked. Mr. Jamieson had come into the hall and we all stared at Warner.

"He's acting queer," Warner explained. "He's sitting down there on the edge of the porch, and he says he has seen a ghost. The old man looks bad, too; he can scarcely speak."

"He's as full of superstition as an egg is of meat," I said. "Halsey, bring some whisky and we will all go down."

No one moved to get the whisky, from which I judged there were three pocket flasks ready for emergency. Gertrude threw a shawl around my shoulders, and we all started down over the hill; I had made so many nocturnal excursions around the place that I knew my way perfectly. But Thomas was not on the veranda, nor was he inside the house. The men exchanged significant glances, and Warner got a lantern.

"He can't have gone far," he said. "He was trembling so that he couldn't stand when I left."

Jamieson and Halsey together made the round of the lodge, occasionally calling the old man by name. But there was no response. No Thomas came, bowing and showing his white teeth through the darkness. I began to be vaguely uneasy, for the first time. Gertrude, who was never nervous in the dark, went alone down the drive to the gate, and stood there, looking along the yellowish line of the road, while I waited on the tiny veranda.

Warner was puzzled. He came around to the edge of the veranda and stood looking at it as if it ought to know and explain.

"He might have stumbled into the house," he said, "but he could not have climbed the stairs. Anyhow, he's not inside or outside, that I can see." The other members of the party had come back now, and no one had found any trace of the old man. His pipe, still warm, rested on the edge of the rail, and inside on the table his old gray hat showed that its owner had not gone far.

He was not far, after all. From the table my eyes traveled around the room, and stopped at the door of a closet. I hardly know what impulse moved me, but I went in and turned the knob. It burst open with the impetus of a weight behind it, and something fell partly forward in a heap on the floor. It was Thomas—Thomas without a mark of injury on him, and dead.

CHAPTER XX.

Dr. Walker's Warning.

Warner was on his knees in a moment, fumbling at the old man's collar to loosen it, but Halsey caught his hand.

"Let him alone," he said. "You can't help him; he is dead."

We stood there, each avoiding the other's eyes; we spoke low and reverently in the presence of death, and we tacitly avoided any mention of the suspicion that was in every mind. When Mr. Jamieson had finished his cursory examination, he got up and dusted the knees of his trousers.

"There is no sign of injury," he said, and I know I, for one, drew a long breath of relief. "From what Warner says and from his hiding in the closet, I should say he was scared to death. Fright and weak heart, together."

"But what could have done it?" Gertrude asked. "He was all right this evening at dinner. Warner, what did he say when you found him on the porch?"

Warner looked shaken; his honest, boyish face was colorless.

"Just what I told you, Miss Innes. He'd been reading the paper downstairs; I had put up the car, and, feeling sleepy, I came down to the lodge to go to bed. As I went upstairs Thomas put down the paper and taking his pipe went out on the porch. Then I heard an exclamation from him."

"Didn't he say anything you could understand?" I asked.

"He said something about the grave giving up its dead."

Mr. Jamieson was going through the old man's pockets, and Gertrude was composing his arms, folding them across his white shirt-bosom, always so spotless.

In the course of his investigations the detective had come to the inner pocket of the dead butler's black coat. Here he found some things that interested him. One was a small flat key, with a red cord tied to it, and the other was a bit of white paper, on which was written something in Thomas' cramped hand. Mr. Jamieson read it; then he gave it to me. It was an address in fresh ink:

LUCIEN WALLACE,
14 Elm Street, Richfield.

As the card went around, I think both the detective and I watched for any possible effect it might have, but, beyond perplexity, there seemed to be none.

"Richfield!" Gertrude exclaimed. "Why, Elm street is the main street; don't you remember, Halsey?"

"Lucien Wallace!" Halsey said. "That is the child Stewart spoke of at the inquest."

Warner, with his mechanic's instinct, had reached for the key. What he said was not a surprise.

"Yale lock," he said. "Probably a key to the east entry."

There was no reason why Thomas, an old and trusted servant, should not have had a key to that particular door, although the servants' entry was in the west wing. But I had not known of this key, and it opened up a new field of conjecture. Just now, however, there were many things to be attended to, and, leaving Warner with the body we all went back to the house. Mr. Jamieson walked with me, while Halsey and Gertrude followed.

"I suppose I shall have to notify the Armstrongs," I said. "They will know if Thomas had any people and how to reach them. Of course, I expect to defray the expenses of the funeral, but his relatives must be found. What do you think frightened him, Mr. Jamieson?"

"It is hard to say," he replied slowly, "but I think we may be certain it was fright, and that he was hiding from something. I am sorry in more than one way; I have always believed that Thomas knew something, or suspected something, that he would not tell. Do you know how much money there was in that worn-out wallet of his? Nearly $100! Almost two months' wages—and yet those darkies seldom have a penny. Well—what Thomas knew will be buried with him."

With the death of Thomas, I felt that a climax had come in affairs at Sunnyside. The night that followed was quiet enough. Halsey watched at the foot of the staircase, and a complicated system of bolts on the other doors seemed to be effectual.

Once in the night I wakened and thought I heard the tapping again. But all was quiet, and I had reached the stage where I refused to be disturbed for minor occurrences.

The Armstrongs were notified of Thomas' death, and I had my first interview with Dr. Walker as a result. He came up early the next morning, just as we finished breakfast, in a professional looking car with a black hood.

"I must make a double excuse for this early visit, Miss Innes," he said as he sat down. The chair was lower than he expected, and his dignity required collecting before he went on. "My professional duties are urgent and long neglected, and"—a fall to the every-day manner—"something must be done about that body."

"Yes," I said, sitting on the edge of my chair. "I merely wished the address of Thomas' people. You might have telephoned, if you were busy."

He smiled.

"I wished to see you about something else," he said. "As for Thomas, it is Mrs. Armstrong's wish that you allow her to attend to the expense. About his relatives, I have already notified his brother, in the village. It was heart disease, I think. Thomas always had a bad heart."

"Heart disease and fright," I said, still on the edge of my chair. But the doctor had no intention of leaving.

"I understand you have a ghost up here, and that you have the house filled with detectives to exorcise it," he said.

For some reason I felt I was being "pumped," as Halsey says. "You have been misinformed," I replied.

"What, no ghost, no detectives!" he said, still with his smile. "What a disappointment to the village!"

I resented his attempt at playfulness. It had been anything but a joke to us.

"Dr. Walker," I said tartly, "I fail to see any humor in the situation. Since I came here, one man has been shot, and another one has died from shock. There have been intruders in the house, and strange noises. If that is funny, there is something wrong with my sense of humor."

"You miss the point," he said, still good naturedly. "The thing that is funny to me is that you insist on remaining here, under the circumstances. I should think nothing would keep you."

"You are mistaken. Everything that occurs only confirms my resolution to stay until the mystery is cleared."

"I have a message for you, Miss Innes," he said, rising at last. "Mrs. Armstrong asked me to thank you for your kindness to Louise, whose whim, occurring at the time it did, put her to great inconvenience. Also—and this is a delicate matter—she asked me to appeal to your natural sympathy for her, at this time, and to ask you if you will not reconsider your decision about the house. Sunnyside is her home; she loves it dearly, and just now she wishes to retire here for quiet and peace."

"She must have had a change of heart," I said, ungraciously enough. "Louise told me her mother despised the place. Besides, this is no place for quiet and peace just now. Anyhow, doctor, while I don't care to force an issue, I shall certainly remain here, for a time at least."

"For how long?" he asked.

"My lease is for six months. I shall stay until some explanation is found for certain things. My own family is implicated now, and I shall do everything to clear the mystery of Arnold Armstrong's murder."

The doctor stood looking down, slapping his gloves thoughtfully against the palm of a well-looked-after hand.

"You say there have been intruders in the house?" he asked. "You are sure of that, Miss Innes?"

Her Happiest Time of Life

When the Dutch Housewife Sees Life with Her Own Instead of Husband's Eyes.

No, not even for the Tartjse would I care to be a Dutchwoman, unless, from the very beginning, I could be an elderly Dutch widow with a fortune.

One day I went to lunch with such a lady, and I think, when I myself am very old, and memories of earth are growing hazy in the sunset which lights the way to that other land beyond, I still shall see that tiny old Dutch Mevrouw standing in one of the rooms of her large old merchant mansion, her dress of fine black cloth, her little apron of silk with a flounce of rare old lace, her eyes bright and merry as a girl's, her face eager with the joy of living, her voice laughing out her welcome.

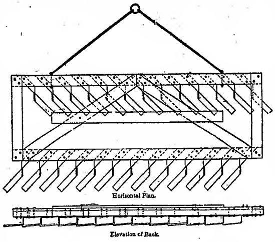
These old Dutch ladies make one marvel. They are like pears kept close that they may mellow when brought to the light. When their men, as they call their husbands, are too old or too wise with years to bother over everything as they do in their youth, or are gone to a country where for once their "ja's" and "neens" are second, these ladies seem to develop and expand, and their understanding to blossom. They are then very spontaneous. They laugh much, they chuckle over stories they could not have even whispered in their youth, they talk most entertainingly in many languages and often play the piano with skill and lively enjoyment. The dust-rags have ceased to interest them, the perambulators are empty, and they seem to be taking a joyful inspection of the world and its life which they have heretofore seen only through the eyes of a husband.—Harper's Weekly.

SUITABLE IMPLEMENT TO EXTERMINATE THE WEEDS

One of the Most Needed Utensils on Arid Farms Is One That Will Destroy Injurious Plants—Home-Made Device Shown.

In the "dry farming" movement which has taken hold in the central and western parts of Canada and the United States, summer tillage, or summer fallow, has been given a large place. This makes it an important question to have some suitable implement to keep down the weeds on the summer fallow. The accompanying illustration shows a simple device which is described by Prof. J. G. Hogenson, Agronomist, Utah Agricultural college. Speaking of it in the Dry Farming Congress Bulletin, he says:

No subject is of greater interest to the arid farmer of today than the securing of implements particularly suited to his needs, implements that will keep his soil in the best possible condition for the rapid growth of his crops.



Horizontal Plan.

Elevation of Back.

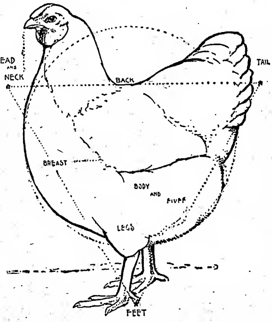
Home-Made Weed Exterminator.

One of the most needed implements, at least down our way, is the one that will, with a small amount of time and labor and a smaller amount of money, enable the farmer to destroy weeds that are so plentiful on summer fallowed lands.

One day last year while traveling through one of the most weedy districts of the state of Utah, I suddenly came upon a genuine oasis in a desert of weeds, a paradise of cleanliness and order as compared with the weedy chaos surrounding. No weary traveler in the great Sahara ever gazed upon a fertile spot in the desert with greater thanksgiving than I did upon this farm. Here in the midst of a sea of weeds was a farm where not a weed was to be seen. The grain was ripening pure and free from the encroachment of the enemy. The summer fallow, 200 acres in extent, was clean and smooth and loose, ready with its store of moisture to start the new crop successfully along its growth. I naturally stopped and made inquiries as to the methods used by the owner which brought such splendid results so vastly different from his neighbors. The owner smilingly led me out to the implement shed where he pointed to a home-made implement and said: "This is my harrow, my disc, my leveler and my weeder. It is the only thing that I use after plowing my land until I seed it the following autumn. I have used it now for eight years and you see the results. My land was just like my neighbors' when I began, now I have no trouble with weeds because my machine destroys them."

The implement, as he has it, consists of a rectangle 10 by 4 feet, made of two-inch planks eight inches wide. To the under side of the 10-foot planks are bolted nine knives made from ¼-inch steel 24 inches long. The steel is bent eight inches from one end so that it will drop down behind the plank. The knives are bolted to the plank diagonally at an angle of 45 degrees by means of two bolts. The bend is about three inches deep, which allows the knives to work that distance below the surface of the ground. The long part of the steel below the bend is sharpened on the front side so that weeds will be cut, this blade being about 13 inches long. The knives on the front plank slope to the right, while those on the rear plank slope to the left. This arrangement makes it impossible for any weeds to be missed, or any part of the ground to remain unstirred. The framework levels the land and crushes the clods, while the knives destroy the weeds and loosen the ground to the depth of three inches and form a perfect mulch.

SYMMETRY OF WYANDOTTES



The diagram illustrates the symmetry of a Wyandotte fowl by a profile view. The heavy black line shows the full, rounded shape of the ideal bird, says Farm Magazine. Some judges will not allow for symmetry, others believe this feature is as important as class, and mark a bird accordingly.

Keep Fertilizer Handy.

Have a bag of complete commercial fertilizer where you can get at it handily and keep scattering a little of it among the garden plants all summer.

A tablespoonful worked around a hill of strawberries or around a raspberry, currant or gooseberry bush will cause the plants to grow amazingly and bring them to perfection so they will be ready to produce heavy crops next year.

Long Hours for Bees.

On warm summer mornings bees are out gathering nectar almost as soon as the sun rises and if clouds and rain or wind do not interfere they will work steadily till sundown, fully fourteen hours of work for the day.

Surplus Cockerels Caponized.

It would be too much to predict that within a few years a good proportion of all the fowl owners of the country will be converting their surplus cockerels into capons because the proportion of owners who raise poultry in a small way only is very great, and as a rule such poultrymen think the operation entails too much skill and risk to undertake it where only a few fowls are concerned.

Culling Poultry Flock.

Have you culled down your flock yet to what hens you want for laying, the number of birds for breeding and show purposes? If not, don't you think it economy to convert the surplus cockerels into cash, and if you are shy on room, to cull down to the yard room you have available for a given number of birds? It saves feed bills and also time and labor for caretaking. August is even a little late for this operation; if you have not attended to it, do so at once.

Remove the Rubbish.

As fast as the boxes, frames and stakes have done their work, take them out, so that no insects will make their home about them.

Save your own tomato seeds—picking out the choicest fruit and see if you cannot improve every year.

NOTHING DOING.

Tramp—Help me, kind sir. I have seen better days dan dis—

Mr. Jinks—So have I. This weather is awful.

Why He Was Sorry.

To impress on young children just what should and what should not be done and why, is among the most trying problems of parents, as evidenced by the recent experience of a West Philadelphia mother. Last Sunday she asked her small son, aged eight, to carry a chair for her from the dining room to the parlor. He started off willingly, but in the hall he tripped and fell. Amid the crash could be heard the boy giving vent to utterances that would have done credit to a pirate of ancient days. The mother was taken by surprise and was greatly shocked. She gave the boy a long and serious talk on the subject of profanity. This apparently did not make the right impression, for when she concluded the boy added to her discomfiture by exclaiming, "I am sorry I swore, mamma, but I forgot it was Sunday."

LACK OF MONEY

Was a Godsend In This Case.

It is not always that a lack of money is a benefit.

A lady of Green Forest, Ark., owes her health to the fact that she could not pay in advance the fee demanded by a specialist to treat her for stomach trouble. In telling of her case she says:

"I had been treated by four different physicians during 10 years of stomach trouble. Lately I called on another who told me he could not cure me; that I had neuralgia of the stomach. Then I went to a specialist who told me I had catarrh of the stomach and said he could cure me in four months but would have to have his money down. I could not raise the necessary sum and in my extremity I was led to quit coffee and try Postum.

"So I stopped coffee and gave Postum a thorough trial and the results have been magical. I now sleep well at night, something I had not done for a long time; the pain in my stomach is gone and I am a different woman.

"I dreaded to quit coffee, because every time I had tried to stop it I suffered from severe headaches, so I continued to drink it although I had reason to believe it was injurious to me, and was the cause of my stomach trouble and extreme nervousness. But when I had Postum to shift to it was different.

"To my surprise I did not miss coffee when I began to drink Postum.

"Coffee had been steadily and surely killing me and I didn't fully realize what was doing it until I quit and changed to Postum."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—MRS. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

Some men are self made and some others are wife made.

Pipe Gives Cadet Typhoid.

Midshipman Smith, who was stricken with typhoid fever on the Indiana at Plymouth, England, contracted the disease, it is said, from smoking a briar used nearly a year ago by his roommate at Annapolis who had a bad case of typhoid. This theory is taken as proof that concentrated nicotine cannot destroy a typhoid germ. The medical department of the navy will examine into the theory with the result that midshipmen of the future may confine themselves to their own pipes.

There Are Reasons

Why so many people have ready-at-hand a package of

Post Toasties

The DISTINCTIVE FLAVOUR delights the palate.

The quick, easy serving right from the package—requiring only the addition of cream or good milk is an important consideration when breakfast must be ready "on time."

The sweet, crisp food is universally liked by children, and is a great help to Mothers who must give to the youngsters something wholesome that they relish.

The economical feature appeals to everyone—particularly those who wish to keep living expenses within a limit.

Post Toasties are especially pleasing served with fresh sliced peaches.

RULES SHERIFFS

POWER OF STATE'S EXECUTIVE IS ABSOLUTE, ATTORNEY-GENERAL DECIDES.

POWER IS LIKE KINGS

Removal From Office Is Declared Proper Action.—Opinion Has Particular References to Liquor Law Cases.

St. Paul.—The sheriffs in Minnesota are the personal representatives of the governor and as such are responsible to him for the conserving of the peace not only by apprehending criminals, but by preventing the commission of any crime. In the event that he fails to perform the duties the sheriff can be removed by the governor either for malfeasance or nonfeasance.

This is the sum and substance of an opinion handed down by Attorney General Simpson in response to a letter from Governor Eberhart asking what were the powers, duties and obligations of a sheriff.

Numerous complaints have reached the office of the governor and the attorney general from all parts of the state, particularly upper Minnesota, with regard to the alleged violation of law, not only affecting the sale of liquor, but in other sections. Sheriffs and other officials in the past have refused to do anything without warrants or complaints in hand. Mayors of towns have stated positively that there was no violation of law within their limits, even though complaints have been made direct to the governor.

Many instances of violation have been reported, notable among them the case of the city of International Falls. It has been reported that the town was "wide open." Officials were unable to cope with the situation. In his opinion the attorney general states that the sheriff has with but two exceptions, the same power now that he had in the days when he acted as the personal representative of the king. In a like manner he is now responsible to the governor for all that he does.

Mr. Simpson points out that the sheriff gives bond for the faithful performance of his duties to the state of Minnesota and not to any county or other subdivision therein.

"Under the laws of this state, as under the common law, where the sheriff was a representative of the king, so is he the arm of governor in each county in the state, whose duty it is to see that the laws of this state are enforced and for his neglect or failure he may be removed from office upon proper cause being shown."

Further in his opinion, the attorney general defines the duties of the sheriff as follows: "As a conservator of the peace, it is the duty of the sheriffs of the state not only to apprehend and jail those who have committed crime and otherwise act as a server of process, but it is likewise the duty of the sheriffs to prevent the violation of the law, whether as to the sale of intoxicating liquors or otherwise is of no moment. It follows that for a failure to either serve process that is delivered to him or failure to preserve the peace is ground in a proper proceeding before you to remove such sheriff from office. It is not enough for a sheriff to state that no complaint has been made to him with regard to the alleged violation of law, and that no warrant has been placed in his hands for service. The duty of the sheriff is broader than this, for when complaints made to him that a law is about to be violated or when it is brought to his knowledge or he has reason to believe that the peace of his county is about to be broken, a duty rests upon the sheriff to conserve the peace, and for that purpose he may call to his aid as many citizens of the county as are necessary."

It is thought that with the powers thus defined for the sheriff that hereafter there will be little excuse for the violation of the liquor law in upper Minnesota. The governor will notify all sheriffs of his intention to see that they comply with the letter of the law. He has stated that action will be taken against the first who does not obey.

COTTAGES NEAR COMPLETION.

Sauk Center Industrial School Work Progressing.

Sauk Center.—Work has progressed so rapidly on the four cottages of the State Industrial Training school for girls that the roofs will be on in ample time to permit the interior work being done this winter. Mrs. Fanny French Morse, the superintendent, has been on her annual vacation, and in consultation with the Board of Control at St. Paul. The four cottages will be large enough for twenty-five girls and a matron. They are colonial in style, and it is expected that they will be ready for the transfer of the girls from Red Wing late this year or early in 1911.

NORMAL SCHOOL CLOSES.

St. Cloud Institution Ends Successful Summer Term.

St. Cloud.—The St. Cloud normal school closed and seventeen young people received diplomas for having completed the various courses of the normal. The attendance at the summer school has been the longest since the summer school has been started. For the first term it was over 500, and for the second term of six weeks the attendance was 350.

Big Gain in School Census.

Mandan.—A gain of 513 in the school population of Morton county has been made in the last year, according to the census report just made public. The present school census shows 6,660 as against 6,147 a year ago. In the number of new school buildings, the county also has made substantial gains, while the value of the school properties have also been greatly enlarged.

Special Trains for Sept. 5.

Fargo.—Special trains will be run to this city at the time of the Roosevelt meeting Sept. 6, and the railroads will make special rates for the occasion.

DROP DUCK CASE.

Charge Growing Out of "Big Feed" Dropped.

Cass Lake.—The much talked of case of the State of Minnesota vs. Ed. Warren, in which the defendant was charged with serving wild ducks at a dinner given to a number of the Cass county officials, was held here before Justice Frank Ives. By reason of the fect of County Auditor Byhre, County Treasurer McKeown, Judge of Probate Jamison and Sheriff Delury being subpoenaed as witnesses, the village court room was packed with spectators long before the case was called.

Each of the officials in answer to the questions as to what he had for dinner on the day of the party swore he had chicken and dumplings, and did not see nor taste any wild duck. After the state had rested the county attorney made a motion to dismiss the action on the ground that the state had failed to prove a cause of action and asked that the defendant be released from custody. The motion was granted.

E. L. Warren, the defendant, is proprietor of a general merchandise store at the new station of Federal Dam, and on July 25 a party of Cass County officials went to Federal Dam by boat and were furnished with dinner by Mr. Warren. Upon their return to Walker one of the party jokingly made the remark they were royally treated to a "wild duck" dinner. One of Walker's citizens hearing this informed the game and fish commission in St. Paul of the alleged duck dinner, who in turn asked Deputy Game Warden M. L. Tolle to file a complaint.

PINCHOT DATE IS SET.

Rochester to Be Scene of Deposed Forester's First Speech.

Rochester.—Gifford Pinchot, the deposed forestry chief, will wage war against Congressman James A. Tawney of the First district in an address to be given in Rochester Friday night, September 2, according to present announcements which Mr. Pinchot gives in a letter received in this city. Pinchot, who is close to Roosevelt and is supposed to echo his sentiments, will urge the candidacy of Sydney A. Anderson of Lanesboro for Congress. The progressives of the First district are wild with joy over the prospects of securing a man of national reputation to assist them in the battle now on in the First district.

Mr. Pinchot comes to Wisconsin to speak in the interests of La Follette, and then he agrees to come to the First district. The Rochester date may be the only meeting that he can hold in the district, as he will probably attend the National Conservation congress the week following in St. Paul.

Congressman Tawney visited Rochester and called upon some of the political leaders of the city. He is very optimistic over the outlook and feels that his prospects for election are bright. He was not aware that Gifford Pinchot was to visit the district until he arrived in this city, but the announcement did not appear to give him much concern.

LABOR EXHIBIT READY.

Commissioner Will Show Pictures Of Safety Devices.

St. Paul.—W. E. McEwen, state labor commissioner, has at his office a number of photographs and other material which will constitute the department's exhibit at the state fair. The prevention of accidents will be the object of display. Mr. McEwen will have 200 photographs showing the use of safety devices in factories. The pictures are large in size and the safety devices are marked in red.

A number of printed mottoes and warnings have also been prepared. Some of them are placards such as the department wants employers to post in their factories, and others are mottoes for the education of employers and the general public.

Several large cards, as big as the top of an office desk, covered with clippings from newspapers of accidents that might have been prevented, will constitute a feature of the display.

"It will cost the department $500 to make the exhibit, but if we can save one life or one limb the state will be amply paid for its expenditure," said Mr. McEwen.

PLAN BIG CEMENT PLANT.

Faribault Men Behind Proposed Monster Montana Factory.

Faribault.—D. Grant & Co. of this city are making arrangements to establish one of the largest cement plants in the country and it is being erected at the mouth of the Yellowstone park, where the company owns a vast deposit of practically pure limestone and a deposit of clay.

A tract of 600 acres of land has been purchased for the plant and equipping yards and trackage, which the Northern Pacific road is now building.

Samuel Grant, a member of the firm, has just returned from Chicago, where he has purchased machinery for the plant.

Killed While Wrestling.

Duluth.—Henry Stein of Harbors, aged 19 years, was accidentally killed in an unusual manner in that city. He was thrown down in a friendly and impromptu wrestling match by a young man named Louis Peterson. Stein in falling struck the back of his head on the edge of a box and his neck was broken. Death resulted almost instantly. Stein was an air inspector for the Duluth & Iron Range road. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Wants Milk Inspection.

Williston.—Milk inspection will soon be established in Williston if the plans now on foot are carried through. Agitation recently placed under way by the state board of health together with the showing that many deaths of children have resulted from the use of impure milk, is responsible for the contemplated action in Williston.

Threw Brick Through Window.

Fargo.—A high liver sprinkled red ink on salmon in mistake for catsup, and then threw a brick through the window because the proprietor would not set up another order.

THE BLIND SENATOR

Marvelous Career of Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma.

How He Won His Fight Against Poverty and Adversity, and Achieved His Early Ambitions in Spite of Obstacles.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—No man in public life today has had a more remarkable career than Senator Thomas Pryor Gore of Oklahoma, whose charges of attempted bribery in connection with the sale of Indian lands stirred the country and brought about investigation by a congressional committee. Marvelous almost beyond belief were the struggles of this blind man—blind from early youth—to reach the great goal of his ambition—a seat in the senate of the United States.

Senator Gore was born on a farm in Mississippi in 1870, later being taken to the village of Walthall, when the latter was created. At the age of eight one of his eyes was jabbed out by a playmate. But he still had one good eye left and his grief was forgotten when some friends told him one day that he had been appointed a page in the Mississippi legislature. This career was, however, ended three years after the first accident by a fate so cruel and unusual that it would have crushed the spirit of ninety-nine boys out of any hundred in the land. While experimenting with a toy cross-bow, he himself shot out his remaining eye.

He was now totally blind, and had to give up his pageship. For the next five years his chief diversion was to hear his sister and mother read to him. Then a normal school was opened at his home town, and he entered, his lessons being read to him at home and by his schoolmates.

A debating society was organized in this school and the blind boy joined and displayed a wonderful aptitude for debate. One day a companion found an old volume of the Congressional Record. Going to an old stable the companion would read to him the speeches of the lawmakers at Washington and then there entered Gore's breast the ambition to be a United States senator—an ambition that never left it, even in the darkest days that followed.

Senator Thomas P. Gore.

In 1891 his fame as a speaker had spread locally and he received many invitations to address farmers' picnics. The last day of 1895 he left Mississippi for Texas under a solemn vow never to return to it unless as a United States senator.

That year in Texas was a hard one. Gore threw himself into politics with passionate energy. Again and again the family was reduced to the verge of physical suffering. Yet year after year they kept up the fight for existence without complaint. Nor did the blind lawyer once despair of reaching the senate, writes James Creelman in Pearson's Magazine.

When Mr. Bryan was nominated at Kansas City in 1900 Gore found his way to the crowd that surrounded the convention. He managed to live in Kansas City for six days at a total cost of $3.50. No one who heard his voice ringing out over that scene of national enthusiasm was permitted to know, or even suspect, his poverty. Then he obtained an engagement in South Dakota to speak during the state and presidential campaigns. In this way he picked up $1,000 and with it went back to Texas and married.

The Gore's—including his father and brother—decided upon going to Oklahoma. In April, 1902, Gore managed to go as a delegate to the territorial convention that was to choose a delegate to congress from Oklahoma, and was given a seat in the territorial senate. That summer the blind man had another terrible struggle to keep alive. One day in June he had only eight cents left. He held a war council with his wife to consider what they should do with the eight cents. It was decided that the money should be spent on postage in an effort to secure speaking engagements. The political fight had to be kept up at any cost.

The fight for a seat in the United States senate was now pressed systematically. Gore spent the year 1903 in widening his acquaintance, attending picnics, barbecues and county fairs, lecturing for anything from $5 to $25, shaking hands with the crowds and smiling his way into their hearts. His friends wanted him to abandon his ambition for a time and run for congress. "It is the senate or nothing," he replied.

Gore won his fight in the primary election and was elected to the United States senate by the legislature, drawing the short term. In 1909 he was reelected.

A Mosquito Proof Steamer.

The Jonathan Holt, the first ocean going mosquito proof steamer, has arrived in the Mersey, says the London Times. She is the first ship of special design for the Liverpool West African trade. Professor Major Ronald Ross's recommendations have been carried out by the owners for mosquito proofing all living quarters. Copper gauze fittings are provided for all doors, windows, side ports, skylights, ventilators and passages to prevent the malaria bearing mosquito entering.

IN AGONY WITH ECZEMA

"No tongue can tell how I suffered for five years with itching and bleeding eczema, until I was cured by the Cuticura Remedies, and I am so grateful I want the world to know, for what helped me will help others. My body and face were covered with sores. One day it would seem to be better, and then break out again with the most terrible pain and itching. I have been sick several times, but never in my life did I experience such awful suffering as with this eczema. I had made up my mind that death was near at hand, and I longed for that time when I would be at rest. I had tried many different doctors and medicines without success, and my mother brought me the Cuticura Remedies, insisting that I try them. I began to feel better after the first bath with Cuticura Soap, and one application of Cuticura Ointment.

"I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and have taken four bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and consider myself well. This was nine years ago and I have had no return of the trouble since. Any person having any doubt about this wonderful cure by the Cuticura Remedies can write to my address. Mrs. Altie Etson, 93 Inn Road, Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 16, 1909."

Detected.

It was at a Fourth of July meeting in the little city. The mayor, William Smith, rose, and at dignified length read the Declaration of Independence. There was a pause; then from one of the mayor's old schoolmates came the loud whisper: "Bill never writ that. He ain't smart enough."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WESTERN CANADA'S 1910 CROPS

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Wheat Yield in Many Districts Will Be From 25 to 35 Bushels Per Acre

Land sales and homestead entries increasing. No cessation in numbers going from United States. Wonderful opportunities remain for those who intend making Canada their home. New districts being opened up for settlement. Many farmers will net, this year, $10 to $15 per acre from their wheat crop. All the advantages of old settled countries are there. Good schools, churches, splendid markets, excellent railway facilities. See the grain exhibit at the different State and some of the County fairs.

Letters similar to the following are received every day, testifying to satisfactory conditions; other districts are as favorably spoken of:

THEY SENT FOR THEIR SON.

Maidstone, Sask., Canada, Aug. 5th, 1910.

"My parents came here from Cedar Falls, Iowa, four years ago, and were so well pleased with this country they sent to Coeur d'Alene for me. I have taken up a homestead near them, and am perfectly satisfied to stop here." Leonard Douglas.

WANTS SETTLER'S RATE FOR HIS STOCK.

Stettler, Alberta, July 31st, 1910.

"Well I got up here from Forest City, Iowa, last Spring in good shape with the stock and everything. Now, I have got two boys back in Iowa yet, and I am going back there now soon to get them and another car up here this fall. What I would like to know is, if there is any chance to get a cheap rate back again, and when we return to Canada I will call at your office for our certificates."

Yours truly, H. A. Wik.

WILL MAKE HIS HOME IN CANADA.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 1st, 1910.

"I am going to Canada a week from today and intend to make my home there. My husband has been there six weeks and is well pleased with the country; so he wants me to come as soon as possible. He filed on a claim near Landis, Sask., and by his description of it it must be a pretty place. My brother-in-law, Mr. Frank J. Zimmer, lives there and it was through him that we decided to locate in Canada."

Yours truly,
Mrs. Richard Henry Ebinger.

Taylors Falls, Minn., Aug. 7, 1910.

"I shall go to Camrose this Fall with my cattle and household goods. I got a poor crop here this year and my brother-in-law, Axel Nordstrom in Camrose, wants me to come there. He formerly lived in Wilton, North Dakota. I am going to buy or take homestead when I get there, but I do not want to travel two times there, for I take my brother-in-law's word about the country, and want to get your low rate."

Yours truly
Peter A. Nelson.

WANTS TO RETURN TO CANADA.

Vesta, Minn., July 24th, 1910.

"I went to Canada nine years ago and took up a quarter section of railroad land and a homestead, but my boys have never taken up any land yet. I still hold the railroad land. I had to come back to the states on account of my health. Please let me know at once if I can get the cheap rates to Ponoka, Alberta."

Yours truly,
Geo. Paskewils,
Vesta, Minn.

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale people lack good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach.

A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

Get rid of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—the great Stomach Restorative, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

ALMOST ALL OVER NOW

Primary Election Next Tuesday November 20—Few Contests.

General Election Campaign Promises to be Tame Affair Also.

The period of anxiety for the candidate for office is about over. The primary election occurs next Tuesday, Sept. 20. It has not been a very exciting campaign and unless there are some independent candidates the campaign for the general election will be about as tame. This is true so far as the campaign for county offices is concerned.

However, there are two or three contests for republican nominations for county office and these will no doubt bring out a good vote at the primary election.

For county treasurer, Harry E. Ives, who has served part of a term by appointment, would like to retain the place for another term. During the time that he has been in office he has shown himself to be a competent official. It can be said also that there is no question of the ability and integrity of his opponent, G. G. Kinolseth, and the fight is becoming interesting and the result will be in doubt until some time next week.

The contest for the nomination for judge of probate promised to be just as interesting and then more interesting. It looked like a close race between Ira C. Richardson, the present incumbent who has served a few months by appointment, and Ben Christenson of Thief River Falls, and then just before the time limit for filing expired Wm. Holberg of this city got into the race and that makes the contest none the less interesting.

Before Auditor A. A. Latendresse decided to file for the nomination to succeed himself two others, Andrew Hanson of Lillo and Nels K. Nelson of Thief River Falls, decided to make a run for it. Mr. Latendresse was a clerk in the office for a number of years and has held the position by appointment since the death of the late J. B. O'Brien. Mr. Latendresse knows the work of the office so thoroughly and has given such capable service that there is little doubt that the people of the county will decide to keep him on the job.

There is an interesting contest in the first commissioner distict. Commissioner Lindquist will be opposed in the primary for the Republican nomination by Gust Naplin. The man who wins next Tuesday will have another contest in the general election for Herman Schultz filed for the Democratic nomination.

The Gazette believes that Red Lake county will give Steenerson a majority over Bjorge for the Republican congressional nomination and that Noel Delorme will get a lot of votes in southern Red Lake county and D. P. O'Neill a few at Thief River Falls, but if you want to know more about the legislative campaign please find the fellow who knows, if you can, and ask him.

Bids Wanted.

The board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, will meet at the office of the county auditor in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minn., at 10.00 o'clock in the forenoon, the 7th day of October, A. D., 1910, for the purpose of opening the bids and awarding the contract for the construction of a reinforced concrete retaining wall along the property line on the east side of the Court House in said City of Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Sealed bids are wanted for the retaining wall, for approximately 8000 feet of cement sidewalk and 400 feet of curb. Contractors are requested to bid by the cubic yard on the retaining wall, by the square foot on the sidewalks and by the lineal foot on the curb and combination curb and gutter.

Work to be begun promptly upon the award of the contract as per plans and specifications of C. H. Martz, engineer in charge, all on file in the office of the county auditor.

The estimated amount of material required: Concrete 110 cubic yards, 4000 lbs of one-half inch round iron. Approximately 200 cubic yards of excavation required.

Sealed bids will be received by the county auditor up to the time of the opening of the bids. Each bid must be accompanied with a certified check in the sum of not less than $200 payable to the order of the county auditor.

Bidders are requested to be present on the above occasion when the bids will be opened and read in their presence. The right to reject any or all bids is hereby reserved.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., Sept. 12th 1910.

A. A. LATENDRESSE,
15-29 County Auditor.
(County Auditor's Seal)

Jacobson—Lindquist.

Miss Tessie Jacobson of Black River township and Mr. Gunnard Lindquist of Polk Centre, a brother of Commissioner Lindquist, were married Tuesday, Sept. 13. The ceremony was performed in this city at 2 o'clock p. m., at the office of Judge Ira C. Richardson, the judge officiating. The bride and groom were attended by Miss Lizzie Jacobson and Mr. Philip Jacobson, sister and brother of the bride.

Mr. Lindquist and his bride are popular young people and their many friends join in offering congratulations and best wishes. They have gone to housekeeping on a farm in Polk Centre township.

WORK IN THE SCHOOLS

The New Work Attracts Pupils From the Country—Foot Ball Prospects.

School work is again in full swing. Conditions as to teaching and equipment are better at the opening of the present school year than they perhaps have ever been in Red Lake Falls. Newness and freshness of desks, walls, floors, text books, etc., have already had their influence on the pupils who almost throughout the system are filled with enthusiasm for work and with the spirit of study.

The new work along industrial lines has already attracted the attention of the country people. The high school shows a greater percentage of rural students than it has shown heretofore. More are yet to come in the course of a few weeks. There is no reason to doubt that in a few years the country pupils will make up half of the enrollment of our high school as is the case in older Minnesota towns.

The equipment for the new work is almost complete and when it is complete it will be one of the best in this section of the state. Cooking classes are now busied with the making of apple jellies, at the same time learning the principles and processes upon which preserving is based. Sewing classes are working on aprons and sewing bags. Manual training classes are occupied with drawings which are always preliminary to taking up a piece of work with tools. The class in agriculture has been making short excursions for the study of soil conditions and are experimenting in the laboratory on these soils, specimens of which have been collected.

Among the additions that have been made to the laboratory during the summer that are worthy of special note are a Bausch and Lomb microscope with a power of 500 diameters or 25,000 times, a wireless telegraphy set with sending and receiving stations, and a Babcock eight bottle milk tester.

Foot Ball Prospects.

Football prospects are at present not very promising. Although there has been an increase in the enrollment of boys in the Freshman class over former years, the new material is not all of the kind that is usually classed as "foot-ball material."

You'll

Du Chaillu's Vain Hunt.

Paul Du Chaillu was the most gallant of bachelors and always openly confessed that he was quite unable to resist the wiles of the fair sex, so much so that he had never been able to choose between them. On one occasion when he was "the lion" at a reception given by some intimate friends in New York the hostess in presenting him to one of her guests said:

"Let me present you to Mrs. ——. You must know her, Paul, because she has just written a book."

"A book, madam!" he exclaimed "Then indeed am I most delighted to meet her. I once made a book myself. But what is the title of your book?"

"The name of it is 'What One Woman Thinks,'" was the smiling response.

"Ah, indeed, and most interesting 'What One Woman Thinks!'" repeated the great explorer. And then, with a simulated excitement, he added hastily: "But where can I procure a copy of it? I must have it at once—immediately. All my life I have been trying in vain to find out what women think, and if before I die I shall succeed in finding out just what one woman thinks I shall then indeed die content."

WORKING BOTH ENDS AGAINST MIDDLE

How the Governor and His Men Fixed Things in Conservation Congress.

Tawney Has Big Fight in the First Congressional District.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Sept. 13.—No doubt a good many of the readers of this letter were at the state fair when Roosevelt spoke there. To the person in front of the grand stand it looked as though everyone in the state was there with his best girl. Those who were there at all events, will remember that when "Teddy" settled down to his work he spoke for the most part for those in front of him, and that while speaking neither those at his right nor left could catch more than an occasional word. Presently those at his left got impatient and signified by so cheering as to make further speech impossible that in their opinion they weren't getting a square deal. He took the hint and for a while addressed them directly. Those at his right saw how it worked and thereupon adopted the successful tactics of those at their left; upon which he turned to them and let fall upon them his words of wisdom. When he got through before beginning to talk again to those in front of him where he left off, he explained that the interruption of the thread of his remarks was due to the fact that he had to "work both ends against the middle," which he is quite enough of a politician to do when he finds that otherwise he is up against it.

Playing Both Ends Against the Middle

I am wondering now to what extent the Colonel was aware that Governor Eberhart had resorted to the same device in securing the "boost" which the Colonel gave him in his conservation speech, and how he will feel about it when he finds out. For while the Colonel spoke of the governor as one who had earned the right to talk of conservation, it would puzzle anyone to glean from anything the governor has been permitted to say whether he stands with Roosevelt for national conservation or with Roosevelt's opponents for states rights. It is plain only to those who are next to how Eberhart worked both ends against the middle in this conservation business what he is really up to and where he is at. And there appears to be some who thought it worth while to find out. For one "La Follette's" has got next.

Moving the Pawns.

"No sooner," says Ray Stannard Baker, the well known magazine writer, in an article in LaFollette's, "had the Congress been announced for St. Paul than the Interests began to move in it—either to destroy it utterly or to dominate it. As customary in such cases a local board of management was appointed to make the necessary arrangements, including the choice of an auditorium and the raising of money for immediate expenses. In no case formerly has a local board ever had anything to do with the arrangement of the program, the appointment of speakers or officers or with matters of publicity. But no sooner had this particular board been appointed, with Governor Eberhart of Minnesota at its head, than it began to move secretly but with determination toward the control of the Congress itself.

The Milk in the Cocoanut.

"In order to understand the reasons for this peculiar action certain underlying causes must be made plain. For years the Republican party machine in Minnesota has been the creature of the Great Northern Railroad company. Its hand upon the state government ever since the death of Governor Johnson has been heavy indeed. The real governor of Minnesota is not Eberhart but Lewis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad. Eberhart, now nominated to succeed himself as the Standpat candidate for governor, is really nothing more than a railroad errand boy."

Fixing Things

The writer goes on to charge that as a result of the interference of the Eberhart committee acting under instructions from the Great Northern railway, and of the undergound tactic adopted "every effort was made" both in Chicago and in the conference of governors at Salt Lake City to change the congress from a conservation meeting to an anti-conservation meeting. "By pressure exerted in high quarters," not only was Mr. Brandies prevented from speaking, but "they succeded in getting the names of Senator Cummins and Clapp removed from the program and of adding the names of a number of western governors known to be hostile to the national conservation of our resources." "It was found," Mr. Stannard Baker adds, "That the governor was in constant communication with President Hill."

Did Roosevelt Wink?

Evidently Roosevelt didn't know or out of consideration for party success was conveniently blind. At all events he gave Eberhart a friendly boost. Really in this matter neither the Hill interests nor the executive packing of the convention counted for much. The anti-conservationists were bowled over in the first round. Perhaps finding that he had everything his own way Roosevelt thought it best, everything considered, to throw the mantle of charity over Eberhart's shortcomings.

What Did Taft Do?

Commenting editorially on Mr. Stannard Baker's exposure of the part Governor Eberhart played in the effort to balk the work of national conservation, Senator LaFollette says: "Mr. Baker was right," and then goes on to say that everything came out as Baker predicted, and that "the old state's right theory is to be brought forward by the opponents of conservation as a means of disorganizing the movement." What will Taft do? he asks. We all know now how nicely the president has nosed himself on the fence.

Politics as It Is Played

Apparently some of the longer heads of the Republican members of the Ballinger-investigating committee have been maneuvering cleverly to unload Ballinger without having to assume the responsibility for kicking him out of the national capitol. Although the meeting of this committee in St. Paul has been advertised for months, the evidence in the meantime being all in and the final arguments made before Congress adjourned when the day for calling the meeting together arrived it was found that the Republican members nearly all had business elsewhere. The singular unanimity with which they all began with one accord to make excuses reminds one of those who were bidden to the King's feast. The Democrats were here. They waited and waited. Finally when the Conservation Congress was breaking up and everyone was anxious to get away Chairman Nelson was induced to call a meeting of the committee. The majority of those present had fully considered all the evidence and had prepared an exhaustive report. Briefly it found Ballinger guilty as charged and recommended his removal

Some Sharp Practice

Having consented to its submission the wily chairman began to play politics. There was no quorum, he said; basing this on the fact that, on the submission of the question to them the Republican members refrained from voting although their bodily presence was apparent and Speaker Reed would have counted them in. Having led them into this trap the Republicans charged the Democratic members and Insurgents members who voted with them with trying to take an undue advantage of the Republicans who found it convenient to stay away, the design began to make it appear that the Democrats attempted to secure snap judgement. Senator Nelson was especially indignant. Without any authority other than his own he adjourned the meeting and called one to be held at Chicago at which he boasted that six Republican members would be present armed with whitewash brushes.

The Object of the Play

The idea of the Republicans seem to be that Ballinger's thick hide will be pierced; and that he will hand in the resignation everyone wants to see in the hands of the president before election. It begins to look as if the game might work and that the impression for which the trick was played—namely that the Democrats are up to sharp practice will be conveyed. However, the Democratic Congressmen don't seem to be greatly alarmed. They do not think the responsibility for getting Ballinger out of the cabinet will lose them many friends among the people, even if they do have to shoulder it.

V

Know

Tawney's Troubles

The campaign in the first district is livening up. There are a lot of other people from other states: Pinchot, whose conservation methods Tawney helped to ditch; Heney, the veteran of many battles for reform in California and elsewhere to whose accounts Mr. Tawney made some reference in congress, and a regular squad from Wisconsin are reported to be going to invade the district to tell how the Chairman of the committee of appropriations appears when measured by their standards. Incidentally Mr. Anderson who is opposing Mr. Tawney is doing some talking which from this distance appears to be effective in livening things up. Tawney himself has finally come to realize that he has a fight on his hands and this week will answer Col. Roosevelt who gave him a jab at the conservation congress and his other critics. All things considered there is now an excellent prospect that Mr. Buck will represent the First district in the next congress.

CANVASSING BOARD

Appointed by Judge Watts—Will Canvass Primary Vote.

The members of the canvassing board to go over the returns of the primary election have been announced by Judge William Watts of the district court. Those to serve on the board are L. C. Cadieux of Terrebonne, Chas. Gustafson of Rocksbury, Lars Backo of Thief River Falls, Stephen Singer of Kratka and Samuel Gibeau of Red Lake Falls.

The members of the board will meet at 10 o'clock Sept. 22, and their labors must be completed by the evening of Sept. 23.

Ordinarily the canvassing board is composed of the clerk of court, county auditor and chairman of the board of county commissioners, and two justices of the peace to be named by the court, but Clerk Johnson, Auditor Latendresse and commissioner Lindquist being candidates for office they are disqualified from serving and it was necessary for the court to appoint all of the members of the board.

LINDQUIST MAKES A STATEMENT

Answer to Many Slanderous Flings of Thief River Falls Papers.

County Commissioner From First District Speaks Plainly.

The papers at Thief River Falls have on so many occasions slandered C. A. Lindquist, chairman of the board of county commissioners, repeatedly giving as wide circulation as they could to vulgar, insinuating remarks, that the Gazette has offered Mr. Lindquist space in which to make a reply.

Mr. Lindquist has paid little attention to the nasty flings. But the abuse has become so persistent that Mr. Lindquist owes it to himself to make a plain statement, just once anyhow. Following is what Mr. Lindquist has to say:

To the Voters of the First Commissioner's District:

So many lies have been told about me by the newspapers of Thief River Falls because I could not think as they did that I feel I owe it to you, my constituents, and to my family and myself to defend myself from their unjust slanders, just this once anyway. I realize that Editors Quist and Eastman can tell lies on paper faster than I can tell the truth by tongue, but I am sure that you, my friends and neighbors, who have known me for years, can distinguish the real from the unreal. I have lived among you in Polk Centre and Bray since 1883.

My life has been that of a plain, everyday farmer, and if I have prospered, it has been by hard work and small profits, the same as the rest of you. For several years after my marriage, I had to rent land, until I had saved enough to buy a quarter section in 1897. Ten years ago by saving and hard work I added another quarter to it. By working in the woods I earned the lumber for my buildings. My barn was built nine years ago and my house six years ago. Four years ago the voters of this district by a vote of nearly five to one, saw fit to honor me with the election of county commissioner, which I have since held. The editors of the Thief River Falls papers for reasons best known to themselves have charged me with having built my buildings since the election, presumably with the profits of the office, but one of them at least, ought to know better, as he accepted my hospitality and stayed at my house when he was a candidate for office four years ago and before my own election.

No doubt his present abuse is his way of making the payment for the lodging which he then received.

Since my election, I have endeavored to serve my district to the best of my ability. I have done as much for the townships in my district as any other commissioner in the county and I believe that my experience in the office will enable me to do more for the people in my district and the county if I am re-elected, than a man new to the office could do. I have been attacked and abused, not because I was not doing good service as a commissioner, but because I would not become a tool for the Thief River Falls people. When I was elected, the voters made known their wishes that the county seat remain at Red Lake Falls by a vote of nearly nearly five to one. It was clearly an issue, since my then opponent favored Thief River Falls. I have since respected the wishes of the majority which elected me by taking the stand I have on the county seat question. I have taken this stand openly, honestly, and consistantly, and have never done a thing which I thought dishonorable, but my enemies have carried their spite against me to the extent of filing charges with the governor.

After a fair hearing at which they had not manhood enough to appear and back up the charges against me, I was triumphantly acquitted of any blame. If you, my friends and neighbors, believe in such unfair tactics and believe that it is right I should be made a scape-goat for undeserved abuse, then you should vote against me. But if you who have known me practically all my life, believe in fair play, and that I have done my duty as I saw it, then I ask your votes at the primary election.

My opponent has always posed as a democrat, and has advertised himself as such, but, in order to defeat me he has this time filed as a republican.

If I am nominated to the office and re-elected at the General election, I shall endeavor to justify the confidence you have in me by doing the best I can for you who elect me, and for the county, and will stand for what I believe is right as I have always done before.

C. A. LINDQUIST.

Lindquist's Barn.

The Thief River Falls newspapers have created the impression that there is a gold mine in being county commissioner of the first district, which has stirred up a hot campaign down there. Say! How big is Lindquist's barn? We would like to know, as there has been several barns built up this way the past year and we could tell whether they were built by honest cash or "boodle" if we could just find out the size of Lindquist's barn.—Saabeam.

The barn is 28x60 feet in dimensions. It was well built for it was constructed 4 or 5 years before Mr. Lindquist was elected to the board of county commissioners and is still in good condition.

Andrew Lacrosse.

Andrew Lacrosse passed away at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, at his home in this city. Deceased was past eighty years of age and had been in feeble health for many months. Mr. Lacrosse had been a resident of Red Lake Falls for about five years, having come here from Minneapolis. His widow survives him and other relatives living here are John Lacrosse and Mrs. Marcel Patnode of this city and Mrs. Derocher of Crookston, son and daughters of the deceased. Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning from St. Joseph's church, of which deceased was a member.

IMPORTANT MEETING

Fall Meeting of Adams Presbytery and Sunday School Convention Next Week.

Two important meetings are to be held at the Presbyterian church next week. On Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 20 and 21, the district Sunday school convention will be entertained by the Presbyterian church people and on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 21 and 22 the fall meeting of Adams Presbytery will be held.

For the Sunday School convention delegates will be in attendance from Red Lake and adjoining counties. There are fourteen churches in Adams Presbytery and it is probable that most of them will be represented at the fall meeting.

Mayfield Road Fund.

One of the township officers of the town of Mayfield called at the Gazette office recently to take exception to the Gazette's statement of the road and bridge money received by the various townships of the county and said that his town did not receive some of the appropriations with which it is credited.

C

Next Week.

The Gazette will quote from the records again to show that there was no intent to make the statement misleading

Nov. 26, 1906, there was an appropriation of $250.00 for the towns of Garnes and Mayfield and this was paid by warrant No. 11081. May 27, 1907, there was an appropriation for Mayfield of $100.00, paid by warrant 11469. Jan. 8, 1908, the commissioners appropriated $1598.00 for the Mayfield bridge contract and was paid by warrant 13032. May 13, 1909. there was an appropriation made for the towns of Garnes and Mayfield for $200.00 paid by warrant No. 16607. On the same date the commissioners appropriated $125.00 for the town of Mayfield and this was paid by warrant No. 16291.

The statement in the Gazette of Aug. 25 credits Mayfield with having received $325.00 in 1909. The appropriations of May 13, 1909, of $200.00 for Garnes and Mayfield and $125.00 for Mayfield were by mistake added together and Mayfield credited with the whole amount when Garnes should have been credited with an interest in the appropriation of $200.00.

The statements made above are absolutely correct and anyone can see that the failure to credit Garnes with an interest in one of the appropriations was not made with the intention of misleading anyone, but was simply an oversight.

Civil Question, Rude Answer.

One day O'Rafferty was up before Judge Brady in New York for assaulting Patrick Murphy, and this was the examination:

"Mr. O'Rafferty," said the judge, "why did you strike Mr. Murphy?"

"Because Murphy would not give me a civil answer to a civil question, yer honor."

"What was the civil question you asked him?"

"I asked him, perlite as you plaze, 'Murphy, ain't your own brother the biggest thafe on Manhattan Island, excepting yourself and your uncle, who is absent at the penitentiary at Sing Sing?'"

"And what rude answer did he give you to such a very civil question?"

"He said to me, 'Av course, prisint company excepted.' So I said, 'Murphy, you're a liar,' and struck him wid me fist."

DEMURRER SUSTAINED.

Judge Watts Renders Decision in Ditch Lien Case.

Andrew G. Bakke recently brought action against the county commissioners to cancel certain ditch liens. Attorney F. A. Grady, for the commissioners, demurred to the complaint. In a decision rendered this week Judge Watts sustains the demurrer which means that the ditch liens are held to be valid. A. A. Miller of Crookston was attorney for Bakke.

Butter and Butter Substitutes.

The majority of people eat butter and much prefer it to any of the substitutes which have been put upon the market. However, a great many people must use a substitute on account of the high prices which prevail during certain months of the year.

Oleomargarine is the most common substitute for butter and millions of pounds of this product are consumed each year. The difference in cost of production between oleomargarine and butter is so great that when butter is retailed at forty cents a pound oleomargarine may be retailed at twenty cents per pound at as great a profit to the dealer.

The person who chooses to purchase the substitute should be allowed to do so and he should be required to pay only the price of the substitute. The difference in price between the genuine product and the substitute is so great that dealers are tempted to sell the latter for the former. Only by requiring that the consumers may differentiate between the two articles can honest traffic in the substitute be insured.

This was contemplated by Congress when the present internal revenue tax of ten cents per pound was levied upon "artificially colored oleomargarine." Many people think that all oleomargarine is taxed ten cents per pound. This is not a fact. Oleomargarine which is "artificially colored" so that the consumer cannot distinguish it from butter is the only oleomargarine that is thus taxed. When it is put upon the market in its natural color it is only taxed one fourth of one cent a pound.

It is only when the product is made to look like butter so that it may be fraudulently sold as butter that a burdensome tax is imposed upon it. The imposition of the tax is not to suppress the sale of oleomargarine, or to make it more expensive to the consumer, but to prevent fraud in its sale.

A. G. RAY, GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL AGENT, KILLS MAN WHO FIRES ON HIM.

IN G. N. GENERAL OFFICE

C. T. Welsh, Discharged Employe, Tries To Slay Chief—First Hurls Nitro-Glycerine, Then Shoots Five Times.

St. Paul. — C. T. Welsh, a former employe of the Great Northern, tried to assassinate A. G. Ray, special agent of the Great Northern, and was shot and killed by his intended victim. The attack was made in the St. Paul general offices of the Great Northern as Ray was going over his morning mail.

Welsh went into the office and inquired for mail. When told that there was none for him, he left, saying that he would return in three days. Later, Ray went to his office and started reading his morning mail. Without warning Welsh rushed in again and started shooting.

Ray, who travels armed, drew his weapon and started shooting at his would-be assassin. He shot at him four times, every bullet taking effect in the man's body. Ray was unharmed, for Welsh, evidently being nervous, was unable to hit him.

Hurls Nitro-Glycerine.

Just after he had fired the first shot, Welsh threw a pint bottle of nitroglycerine, already fused, at Ray, but the bottle went wild, the thick wrapping paper preventing its explosion. There was enough nitro-glycerine in it to destroy the entire Great Northern building. In his pockets other fuses and percussion caps were found.

Ray gave himself up to detectives at the Central station, where he is now being held.

Welsh, according to railroad officials, shot "Little Tommy," a burglar, in Duluth last fall when on duty as a watchman. He was acquitted. He was single, about 45 years old.

L. S. Hess, chief clerk in Ray's office, was present when Welsh came in the second time, and as soon as the shooting started he ran into the vault. He was the only witness.

ROCHESTER SCHOOL IS BURNED.

Queen City Without Water as Result of Fire Disaster.

Rochester.—Rochester was visited by one of the most disastrous fires in its history when the Central school building was almost totally destroyed. The fire was caused from a defective flue, as a short time previous the janitor had built a trial fire in the furnace with some old papers and the blaze originated in the roof.

The building is an old one and its ornamental roof was an easy prey to the flames, which were discovered by Superintendent C. F. Woodfield. Low water pressure at the time made fire fighting difficult and the department was given one of the battles of its life to save the building and surrounding property. The building is practically ruined, but is well covered by insurance.

The destruction of the school house, which was the main grade school of the city, places Rochester in a bad condition for the opening of the city schools Monday. The old high school building has just been torn down to make way for a new one, and it was with difficulty that the board of education was able to provide accommodations for the high school students for this year. The fire also worked havoc with the water supply. The immense amount of water used on the building completely exhausted the city supply, and river water is being run into the mains. The board of health has taken stringent measures and is warning the public to boil all water used for drinking purposes.

CUYUNA SHIPMENTS ABOUT DUE.

New Iron Range Preparing to go into the Market.

Duluth. — The new Minnesota Iron Range, the Cuyuna, will make its initial shipments in commercial quantity this fall. Fifty thousand tons of ore from the Kennedy mine, controlled by the Rogers-Brown company of Buffalo and New York, will be railed by the Soo line to Ashland, via Duluth, and from there shipped in boats to Lake Erie.

The ore movement from Cuyuna after this season will be received at Duluth and transferred from cars to boats here. The Soo Line will build an ore dock on Superior bay this winter for that purpose.

MINNESOTA PIONEER KILLED.

John Gleason, of Crookston, Meets Death in Accident.

Crookston.—John Gleason, auditor of Polk county from 1894 until 1900, during the Populistic regime, and later a member of the board of appeals of the State Railway and Warehouse Commission, was struck by an interurban car at Oregon City, Ore., and instantly killed. He was a pioneer of Polk county, and lived on a river fruit farm.

Small Boy Shoots Another.

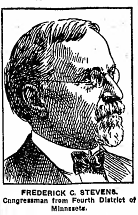
Hinckley. — Clifford McDermitt, aged ten near Finlayson, shot Elmer Anderson, aged eight, with a rifle, the ball entering the mouth. Dr. Landberg of Finlayson took the boy and started for Minneapolis on the Northern Pacific limited, but the boy died just before reaching Hinckley. The McDermitt boy, it is understood, came to Mr. Anderson's house and told the other boy he was going to shoot him and leveled the gun and fired the fatal shot

MAYOR HAYNES OPPOSED.

Hugh T. Halbert, St. Paul, Is Out for Congressman Stevens' Place.

Minneapolis. — Hon. George B. Esterman, alderman of the Seventh ward, filed for the Democratic nomination for mayor, making an entirely new alignment in the Minneapolis mayoralty situation.

The filing of Mr. Esterman for mayor is probably the most sensational event in Minneapolis politics. In the state arena, the filing of Hugh T. Halbert, of St. Paul, for congressman, in opposition to Fred C. Stevens was equally important. Mr. Halbert, as head of the Roosevelt club, has held the banner of insurgency in St. Paul and his opposition to Congressman Stevens will reproduce in St. Paul the same situation that exists in Minneapolis where Albert H. Hall is endeavoring to take the nomination away from Frank M. Nye.



FREDERICK C. STEVENS.
Congressman from Fourth District of Minnesota.

Mr. Esterman's Career.

George B. Esterman, who filed for the Democratic nomination for mayor against Mayor J. C. Haynes, is engaged in the laundry business and up to two years ago was unknown in politics. Since then he has been a prominent figure in the Democratic situation and at the time of the Democratic state convention was made a member of the committee on credentials by Chairman W. S. Hammond.

NEW ULM BREWERY FALLS.

Thousands of Barrels of Beer Are Lost From Vats.

New Ulm. — The large three-story beer storage building of the John Heuenstein Brewing company of this city, collapsed, while the men engaged in work there were eating dinner. The last man to leave the building was Frank Lamecker, who narrowly escaped being buried beneath the ruins.

The structure was substantially built of brick and reinforced concrete, 24-inch "I" beams being used in the construction. It had been enlarged and was remodeled in 1901, being 30x70 feet in size. It is believed that the concussion caused by the constant blasting of rock in the stone quarries about two miles away from the brewery caused the walls to gradually give way and finally collapse. At the time of the accident there were about 2,000 barrels of beer in the large vats. This escaped and flooded the driveway.

The loss on the building is estimated at between $18,000 and $20,000 and as no insurance was carried against an accident of this nature the brewing company must stand the entire loss. Aside from this, the value of the beer which was destroyed is placed at $12,000, making a grand total of nearly $30,000. The debris of the demolished building is being cleared away, and as soon as this work is completed, building operations will be commenced.

COTTAGES NEAR COMPLETION.

Sauk Center Industrial School Work Progressing.

Sauk Center.—Work has progressed so rapidly on the four cottages of the State Industrial Training school for girls that the roofs will be on in ample time to permit the interior work being done this winter. Mrs. Fanny French Morse, the superintendent, has been on her annual vacation, and in consultation with the Board of Control at St. Paul. The four cottages will be large enough for twenty-five girls and a matron. They are colonial in style, and it is expected that they will be ready for the transfer of the girls from Red Wing late this year or early in 1911.

Clearwater Wheat Yield Good.

Bagley.—Reports so far turned in by threshers show an average of 18½ bushels of wheat, 28 bushels of oats and 24 bushels of barley to the acre. Wheat is of the best quality and runs in weight from 61½ to 69 pounds to the measured bushel. Elevator men claim that the blue stem wheat so far brought in this season surpasses any ever marketed here in point of weight and perfect formation of the kernel. Oats and barley, while of a good quality, are a short crop.

Held for Swindling in Duluth.

Duluth. — John Q. Teatzel, who claims Detroit as his home, was bound over to the grand jury to stand trial on a charge of swindling. He says that he represents the Acme Electrical company, which manufactures a device to be used in connection with telephones. At the hearing, Teetzel was charged with selling to a local hardware concern a right which had no value, to handle the instruments. The hardware company gave Teetzel a check, but stopped payment on it after some investigation.

Killed While Wrestling.

Duluth.—Henry Stein of Harbors, aged 19 years, was accidentally killed in an unusual manner in that city. He was thrown down in a friendly and impromptu wrestling match by a young man named Louis Paterson. Stein in falling struck the back of his head on the edge of a box and his neck was broken. Death resulted almost instantly. Stein was an air inspector for the Duluth & Iron Range road. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

OPPOSING IDEAS

CLASH AT CONSERVATION CONVENTION IN ST. PAUL—HILL SPEAKS.

PINCHOT GETS OVATION

Senator Beveridge Argues for National Control of Natural Resources and J. J. Hill Says Scheme Is Impracticable.

St. Paul, Sept. 7.—Two opposing ideas of conservation of natural resources met fairly and squarely today when Senator Beveridge, in an eloquent address declared for the national control, while James J. Hill argued contrary.

Gifford Pinchot received an ovation that furnished the most dramatic moment of the congress. The former forester, the object of a wild demonstration by the audience, stood with tears streaming from his eyes until the outburst of cheers subsided and the spectators were again in their seats.

Just what Senator Beveridge was trying to say complimentary to Pinchot was drowned in the roar that rose the moment the end of his remarks became apparent.

"Gifford Pinchot!" said the speaker, and the outburst started. It grew until every one was yelling and the whole house was on its feet waving hats and handkerchiefs.

Senator Beveridge had no sooner retired than cries of "Pinchot, Pinchot," rang through the house. He was dragged forward by President Baker. His voice shook as he spoke.

"It is magnificent," he said, "to hear sound policies of conservation acclaimed as has been done here today. Conservation has won out. I thank you."

Senator Beveridge sounded his keynote in the statement that this is one nation, not forty-six nations.

Hill said that there are dangers inseparable from national control. The chins is too big and remote, he said, and its operation too slow and costly.

Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University of North Dakota, discussed Rational Taxation of Resources.

Women's Influence in National Questions was the subject of a paper by Mrs. Emmons Crocker of Massachusetts, chairman of the conservation department of the federation of women's clubs.

VOTE TO OUST BALLINGER.

Republicans Leave Claiming Full Committee Should Be Present.

Minneapolis, Sept. 7.—At an executive meeting of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation committee today Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida, democrat, introduced a resolution holding that the secretary of the interior was an unfaithful public officer and should be removed. Representative Madison, republican insurgent from Kansas, offered a resolution holding that charges which have been made by Gifford Pinchot and Louis R. Glavis, former chief of the field division of the general land office, were sustained.

Rep. Ollie M. James, democrat of Kentucky, offered an amendment to Representative Madison's substitute resolution providing for the removal of Ballinger from office and Madison accepted the amendment. The vote came upon the substitution of Madison as amended by the motion of James and the roll was called. Those voting for the substitute were: Fletcher, Purcell of North Dakota, democrat; Rep. James Graham of Illinois, democrat; Representative Madison, republican; and Representative James.

When this vote was being taken Sen. George Sutherland of Utah, republican, and Rep. Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts, republican, left the committee room insisting that the full committee should be present.

La Follette Wins Out.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 7.—United States Senator Robert La Follette carried Wisconsin at yesterday's primary election by an overwhelming majority over Samuel A. Cook of Neenah. The figures are incomplete even in Milwaukee county and will not be known perhaps for a day or two.

There is no doubt that La Follette will have control of the candidates' platform convention at Madison and that he will have the next legislature back of him. So big was his vote that it carried with it a large majority of the legislative nominees.

The "insurgent" congressmen were renominated and added to their strength by the nomination of Henry C. Cochems.

U. S. Wins Arbitration.

The Hague, Sept. 7.—The United States wins on five points out of seven points submitted to the international court of arbitration in the Newfoundland fisheries dispute with Great Britain.

Great Britain wins points 1 and 5. The decision was handed down today.

Girls' School Investigated.

Red Wing, Minn., Sept. 7.—The board of control is in Red Wing today investigating the conditions at the girls' training school and charges of insubordination made at the school. A number of persons have been subpoenaed to appear as witnesses this afternoon.

Actress Drowns.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 6.—Louis and Kittie Perle, the latter leading lady of the Manhattan Opera company, were drowned in Lake Quinsigamond last night. In changing seats in a flat-bottomed boat, Mrs. Perle fell overboard. Her husband jumped in to save her and called for help, which did not come in time.

One Drowned; One Saved.

Calumet, Mich., Sept. 6.—While on Lake Superior the small boat of John Kalp, aged 63, capsized and he was drowned. John Hartman was saved after several hours' work.

Taft in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—President Taft arrived in Chicago early this morning over the Chicago & Northwestern railroad and went immediately in an automobile to the Congress hotel, where he took breakfast. One of the president's guests at table was Henry S. Graves, chief forester of the United States.

Noted Composer Dead.

New York, Sept. 6.—Julian Edwards, the composer, died at 1:10 o'clock this morning at his home in Yonkers, of heart disease and complications. Mr. Edwards had been ill for about seven months.

ACCESSORY AFTER FACT

ETHEL LENEVE SO HELD ACCORDING TO CROWN.

Famous Murder Case Started—Poison Found in Body of Victim, Says Prosecution.

London, Sept. 6.—At the opening today of the trial of Hawley H. Crippen, who is charged with the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore, the prosecution announced that large quantities of poison had been found in the woman's body and that there were evidences that she had been subjected to an operation.

Ethel Clare Leneve, the doctor's typist, who accompanied him in his flight to Canada after the disappearance of his wife, and who has been held on the same charge, also was brought to the bar today, but the crown stated that it had been decided to confine the allegations against the girl to being an accessory after the fact.

This relieves Miss Leneve of any foreknowledge of the crime and is in line with the belief of her family and friends that she did not share Crippen's confidence up to the time that his wife dropped out of sight and was said by him to have died in California.

Interest in the Crippen case, which was intense during the search for the doctor, has by no means worn out, as was shown by the crowd which gathered in the vicinity of the Bow street police court when the trial was opened today.

ANOTHER MEMBER.

Colonel Roosevelt Makes Addition to Ananias Club.

The most sensational episode of the tour of Colonel Roosevelt through the west occured in Fargo yesterday. John Andrews, a painter employed by Andrew Nelson, the local decorator, climbed on the platform and pushed his way to the front of the stand.

A number who were standing near the ex-president and who saw the man's actions, remembering the recent Gaynor affair, interfered with the man who was not known to a single person in the crowd immediately surrounding Roosevelt.

"I have a right to ask questions," said Andrews to those who attempted to stop him, and then he said to Roosevelt:

"Tell the people who is paying your expenses on this trip and what for."

"You are an important fool," responded Roosevelt, "and it's my business, but I will tell you. The Outlook Publishing Co. is paying my expenses."

Those near Roosevelt could not hear the man's reply, but Roosevelt shouted, "You're a liar," and he took him by the arm.

Sheriff H. T. Boyle at once placed the man under arrest and took him to the county jail. This morning he was released at 9 o'clock and he immediately went back to work at the new Stone building, where he is doing work on the interior decorations.

There have been a dozen different stories of the affair all conflicting, but the above is the way that Colonel Roosevelt gave the affair to newspaper men at the Waldorf hotel last evening.

John Andrews is a small man, a painter, 30 years of age, employed by Andrew Nelson and now working on the interior decorating of the Stone building. He says he simply asked Roosevelt who was paying his expenses on the trip and what for. He says that Roosevelt replied that he was an impertinent fool and that a syndicate sent him to ask the question. He says he replied to that "Oh, No Sir!" and that it was then that Roosevelt called him a liar.

Dishonesty of Business.

New York, Sept. 6.—Clement J. Driscoll, who has conducted a vigorous crusade against short weights as New York's commissioner of weights and measures, addressed the annual labor day dinner at the Labor Lyceum last night.

"Some of the so-called reputable merchants of the great city of New York," he said, "who at a time when labor was struggling with its employer for fair play, would be the first to denounce labor, could not stand a very searching inquiry into their business methods.

"The dishonesty of the push cart peddler and the dishonesty of the small merchant is as nothing compared with the dishonesty in short weight and measures with the large corporations of this country."

"Short weighing and short measuring, in the city of New York, has grown to be a habit, and the conscience of the great army of the merchants has almost been deadened by this disease—and it will continue unless the public is willing and eager to co-operate with the municipal government to rid this city of the evil."

As it was Labor Sunday, pastors throughout the city dwelt upon some topic of labor in their sermons.

Arrest German Spy.

Portsmouth, Eng., Sept. 7.—A German army officer who was arrested yesterday while engaged in sketching the fortifications here is still detained at Fort Purbrook. The man's name is supposed to be Elmer and he is connected with the constructive division of the German land forces.

Documents found upon the alleged spy are said to include sketches of the forts all along the hills. The papers have been dispatched to the war office.

Coal Briquetting on Increase.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Coal briquetting is slowly increasing in the United States. The production in 1909, according to a compilation by E. W. Parker of the geological survey reached 139,661 short tons, valued at $452,697. The output in 1908 was 90,358 tons, worth $323,067, and in 1907, 66,524 tons, worth $258,426. The survey has an experimental briquetting plant at Pittsburg. The German press used has a capacity of ¼ to 3 tons an hour, tests having been made with lignites from California, Texas and North Dakota, which were all briquetted successfully without a binding material.

Lisbon Woman Is Heiress.

Lisbon, N. D., Sept. 7.—Mrs. E. H. Mundenhall of this county is reported to have fallen heir to one-fourth of a $2,000,000 Scotch estate.

Some time ago Mrs. Mundenhall received a letter from her brother which announced that he thought he had at last completed the evidence necessary for proof of heirship.

Today it was learned here that the estate is now in settlement and that the Ransom county woman will get $500,000.

Mrs. Mundenhall is the wife of a farmer. They live six miles from Lisbon.

BOLT KILLS FOUR

LIGHTNING STRIKES TENT IN WHICH THRESHING CREW IS SLEEPING.

ALL OCCUPANTS INJURED

Electrical Storm at an Early Hour in the Morning Near LaMoure Works Havoc—Threshers are Burned and Stunned.

LaMoure, N. D., Sept. 2.—The lives of four men were snuffed out in an instant by a bolt of lightning at the farm of Dan Quinlan, ten miles west of here, this morning.

The dead:

FRED OSBORN, prominent farmer, home near Berlin, N. D.

MURRAY ELLIS, LaMoure, N. D.

PETER M. NELSON, Fosston, Minn. said to be a student at a Fargo college.

The injured:

Paul Crawford, LaMoure man.
Jim Carey, Berlin.
Ben Waddell, transient harvester.
Unknown man, transient harvester.

Fred Osborn and Paul Crawford were owners of the threshing machine and their outfit was known as the Crawford-Osborn threshing rig. The eight men mentioned above were sleeping in a tent.

During a severe electrical storm a bolt struck the tent with a tremendous report, shaking the earth for miles. The men who were killed never knew what hit them, each one of them being killed outright.

The other four men were all burned and stunned, some of them quite seriously but all of them will recover.

Murray Ellis was a well known young man of this place, aged 22, who lived with his mother.

Peter M. Nelson attended a Fargo college last winter and had intended returning to the same institution again this year.

ENGINEER KILLS BANDIT.

Desperate Attempt to Hold Up Train on Colorado Midland.

Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 2.—In a desperate attempt to hold up westbound Colorado Midland passenger train No. 3, four miles west of Divide, early today, an unknown bandit was instantly killed by a rock thrown by Engineer Frank Stewart after he had shot the engineer in the leg.

The highwayman crawled over the tender as the train slowed up at a siding to meet the east-bound train. As he stopped the train Stewart turned to see his fireman, Paul Bachman, standing with his hands above his head and heard the robber say, "Put up your hands or I'll blow your head off."

The robber then forced both men to leave the engine and marched them before him to the express car.

"When we got to the express car," said Stewart, "my fireman dashed under the car and crawled to the other side. The robber leaned under the car to shoot at him and when he took his eyes off me I struck him with all my strength with a rock I had picked up as I jumped off the tender. As I did so he whirled and shot at me, the bullet striking me in the leg. I guess my blow finished him, for he never moved after the rock hit him.

Case of Leprosy in New York.

New York, Sept. 2.—A negro women with an advanced case of leprosy has been living in New York for more than seven years, associating constantly with the people of her own race. The nature of her ailment did not become known until late last night when she applied at Bellevue hospital for treatment.

The doctors at once diagnosed her ailment as one of the worst cases of leprosy which had ever come to their attention. They declared that she could live but a short time.

The woman told the doctors that she had come to New York from the West Indies more than seven years ago and was sick then. Five years ago she married and a year later her only child, a son was born.

Park River Girl Kills Sister.

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 2.—Lillian Chisolm, the 4-year-old daughter of Dave Chisolm, who lives three miles north of Park River, was shot and instantly killed by her 7-year-old sister, Jennie, this morning.

The little victim of the accident and the older child were playing together in the house alone. Jennie suddenly ran outside to where her parents were working and shouted that Lillian was dying.

The girls had secured a .22 calibre rifle which the boys of the family had been using to hunt gophers. The gun was loaded with a "special" bullet and during the play it was discharged, the bullet entering Lillian's mouth. Death was almost instantaneous.

Strenuous Time at Hearing.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—The tense strain of the railway rate hearing developed disorder today in the midst of which Atty. E. B. Pierce of the Rock Island called Atty. F. B. James, representing the Cincinnati shippers, a liar.

Pierce added that if Mr. James was not satisfied the matter could be continued "outside."

Judge Sees Strike.

New York, Sept. 1.—Magistrate Higginbotham of the Bedford avenue court entertained the idea that in handling the rioting cases developing at the Williamsburg refining building of the sugar trust it might be well to obtain some local color and given some first-hand information.

This morning, while he was in the strike zone, trouble broke out between the strikers and strikebreakers and two bullets whizzed uncomfortably close to Magistrate Higginbotham. So close were the missiles to the magistrate's head that the police think an attempt was made to kill him.

Sent Threatening Letters.

Stanley, N. D., Sept. 1.—Because he developed a mania for sending letters through the mail that were far from meeting the requirements of the postoffice department on the question of morality, Andrew Johnson, a homesteader, was sent to the state asylum for the insane. Johnson, against whom complaint had been made to the federal authorities, was ordered arrested by a mail inspector. The letters had been written to a law firm in Minot and were both obscene and threatening in their nature. The fact that he lived alone for several years is given as the cause of insanity.

CONSERVATION IS PATRIOTIC DUTY

Roosevelt at St. Paul Advocates New Methods.

WASTE AND MONOPOLY WRONG

Waterways and Forests Discussed—State and Federal Control—Country Life Institute Is Favored.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 6.—Theodore Roosevelt was the central figure in the conservation congress today, and delivered an address that called forth the warmest praise of those who were fortunate enough to hear it. The fact that the former president was to speak attracted to the convention hall a tremendous crowd, and the man who has made conservation one of the chief issues in the United States was given the heartiest kind of a greeting.

Taking "National Efficiency" for his general subject, Mr. Roosevelt said:

America's [illegible] for efficiency [illegible] throughout the world. [illegible] probably to the [illegible] can attain by [illegible]. There is great reason to be proud of our achievements, and [illegible] that we can [illegible] past. Through a practically unrestrained individualism, we have reached a pitch of [illegible] unexampled material prosperity, although the distribution of this prosperity leaves much to be desired from the standpoint of justice and fair dealing. But we have not only allowed the individual a free hand, which was in the main right; we have also allowed great corporations to act as though they were individuals and to exercise the rights of individuals, in addition to using the vastly [illegible] power of high organization [illegible] wealth for their own advantage. This development of corporate action, it is true, is doubtless in large part responsible for the gigantic development of our natural resources, but it is not less responsible for waste, destruction and monopoly on an equally gigantic scale.

The method of reckless and uncontrolled private use [illegible] waste has done for us all the good it ever can, and it is time to put an end to it before it does all the evil it can in any way. We have passed the time when heedless waste and destruction and arrogant monopoly are any longer permissible. Henceforth we must seek National efficiency by a new and a better way, by the way of the orderly development and use, coupled with the preservation of our natural resources by making the most of what we have for the benefit of all of us instead of leaving the sources of material prosperity open to indiscriminate exploitation. These are some of the reasons why it is wise that we should abandon the old point of view, and why conservation has become a patriotic duty.

Waterways Development.

One of the greatest of our conservation problems is the wise and prompt development and use of the waterways of this Nation. The Twin Cities, lying as they do at the headwaters of the Mississippi, are not upon the direct line of the proposed lakes to the gulf deep waterway. Yet they are deeply interested in its prompt completion as well as in the deepening and regulation of the Mississippi to the mouth of the Missouri and to the gulf. The project for a great trunk waterway, an arm of the sea, extending from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes, should not be abandoned. The lakes to the gulf deep waterway, and the development of the rivers which flow into it, should be pushed to completion vigorously and without delay.

In nearly every river city from St. Paul to the gulf the water-front is controlled by the railways. Nearly every artificial waterway in the United States, either directly or indirectly, is under the same control. It goes without saying that (unless the people prevent it in advance) the railways will attempt to take control of our waterways as fast as they are improved and completed, nor would I blame them if we, the people, are supine in the matter. We must see to it that adequate terminals are provided in every city and town on every improved waterway, terminals open under reasonable conditions to the use of every citizen, and rigidly protected against monopoly, and we must compel the railways to co-operate with the waterways continuously, effectively and under reasonable conditions. Unless we do, the railway lines will refuse to deliver freight to the boat lines, either openly or by imposing prohibitory conditions, and the waterways once improved will do comparatively little for the benefit of the people who pay the bill.

Adequate terminals properly controlled and open through lines by rail and boat are two absolutely essential conditions to the usefulness of inland waterway development. I believe furthermore that the railways should be prohibited from owning, controlling or carrying any interest in the boat lines on our rivers, unless under the strictest regulation and control of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, so that the shippers' interests may be fully protected.

The National Forests.

If any proof were needed that forest protection is a National duty, the recent destruction of forests in the west by fire would supply it. Even with the aid of the [illegible] to that of the forest service the loss has been severe. Without either it would have been vastly greater.

But the forest service does more than protect the National forests against fire. It makes them practically and increasingly useful as well. During the last year for which I have the figures the National forests were used by [illegible] cattlemen with their herds, [illegible] sheepmen with their flocks, [illegible] timbermen with their crews, and [illegible] miners. More than [illegible] persons used them for other special industries. Nearly [illegible] settlers had the free use of wood. The total resident population of the National forests is about a quarter of a million, which is larger than the population of certain states. More than [illegible] acres of agricultural land have been patented or listed for patent within the forests, and the reports of the forest officers show that more than [illegible] people a year use the forests for recreation, camping, hunting, fishing and similar purposes. All this is done, of course, without injury to the timber, which has a value of at least a thousand million dollars. Moreover, the National forests protect the water supply of a thousand cities and towns, [illegible] irrigation projects, and more than [illegible] power projects, not counting the use of water for these and other purposes by individual settlers.

Country Life Institute.

The investigations of the Country Life Commission have led the farmers of this country to realize that they have not been getting their fair share of progress and all that it brings. Some of our farming communities in the Mississippi valley and in the middle west have made marvelous progress, yet even the best of them, like communities of every other kind, are not beyond improvement, while much needs to be done in some other sections to improve country life. As yet we know comparatively little of the basic facts of rural civilization. The means for better farming we have studied with care, but to better living on the farm and to better business on the farm the farmers themselves have given scant attention. One of the most urgent needs of our civilization is that the farmers themselves should undertake to get for themselves a better knowledge along these lines, and then to apply it. Sir Horace Plunkett, for many years a Wyoming cattleman, and now devoting himself in Ireland to the country life problem there, has suggested in his recent book on the "Country Life Problem in America" the creation of a Country Life Institute as a center where the work and knowledge of the whole world concerning country life may be brought together for the use of every nation. I am strongly in sympathy with this idea, and I hope to see it carried out with the co-operation and assistance of our own people. Last spring, while visiting the capital of Hungary, Buda-Pesth, I was immensely impressed by the Museum of Country Life, containing an extraordinary series of studies in agriculture, in stock-raising, in forestry, in mining; the exhibits were of the utmost practical importance and were also intensely interesting and instructive.

As a people we have not yet learned to economize. One of the virtues we Americans most need is thrift. It is a mere truism to say that luxury and extravagance are not good for a Nation. So far as they affect character, the loss they cause may be beyond computation. But in the material sense there is a loss greater than is caused by both extravagance and luxury put together. I mean the needless, useless, and excessive loss to our people from premature death and avoidable disease. Wholly apart from the grief, the suffering, and the wretchedness which they cause, the material loss each year has been calculated at nearly twice what it costs to run the Federal government. In addition to the state and city health officers and organizations, there is urgently needed a Federal bureau of health to act, so far as the National government properly may, to relieve our people from this dreadful burden.

National Conservation Commission.

One of the most important meetings in our recent history was that of the governors in the White House in May, 1908, to consider the conservation question. By the advice of the governors the meeting was followed by the appointment of a National conservation commission. The meeting of the governors directed the attention of the country to conservation as nothing else could have done, while the work of the commission gave the movement definiteness and supplied it with a practical program. But at the moment when the commission was ready to begin the campaign for putting its program into effect an amendment to the Sundry civil service bill was introduced by a congressman from Minnesota with the purpose of putting a stop to the work so admirably begun. Congress passed the amendment. Its object was to put an end to the work of a number of commissions, which had been appointed by the president, and whose contribution to the public welfare had been simply incalculable. Among these were the commission for reorganizing the business methods of the government, the public lands commission, the country life commission, and the National conservation commission itself. When I signed the Sundry civil service bill containing this amendment, I transmitted with it as my last official act a memorandum declaring that the amendment was void, because it was an unconstitutional interference with the rights of the executive, and that if I were to remain president I would pay to it no attention whatever.

The National conservation commission thereupon became dormant. The suspension of its work came at a most unfortunate time, and there was serious danger that the progress already made would be lost. At this critical moment the National conservation association was organized. It took up the work which otherwise would not have been done, and it exercised a most useful influence in preventing bad legislation, in securing the introduction of better conservation measures at the past session of congress and in promoting the passage of wise laws. It deserves the confidence and support of every citizen interested in the wise development and preservation of our natural resources, and in preventing them from passing into the hands of uncontrolled monopolies. It joins with the National conservation congress in holding this meeting. I am here by the joint invitation of both.

Pan-American Construction.

When the government of the United States awoke to the idea of conservation and saw that it was good, it lost no time in communicating the advantages of the new point of view to its immediate neighbors among the nations. A North American conservation conference was held in Washington, and the co-operation of Canada and Mexico in the great problem of developing the resources of the continent for the benefit of its people was asked and promised. The nations upon our northern and southern boundaries wisely realized that their opportunity to conserve the natural resources was better than ours, because with them destruction and monopolization had not gone so far as they had with us. So it is with the republics of Central and South America. Obviously they are on the verge of a period of great material progress. The development of their natural resources—their forests, their mines, their water, and their soils—will create enormous wealth. It is to the mutual interest of the United States and our sister American republics that this development should be wisely done. Our manufacturing industries offer a market for more and more of their natural wealth and raw material, while they will increasingly desire to meet that demand in commercial exchange. The more we buy from them, the more we shall sell to them. Their prosperity is inseparably involved with our own. Thank heaven, we of this continent are now beginning to realize, what in the end the whole world will realize, that normally it is a good thing for a nation to have its neighbor nations prosper. We of the United States are genuinely and heartily pleased to see growth and prosperity in Canada, in Mexico, in South America.

It is clear that unless the governments of our southern neighbors take steps in the near future by wise legislation to control the development and use of their natural resources, they will probably fall into the hands of concessionaries and promoters, with single purpose, without regard to the permanent welfare of the land in which they work, will be to make the most possible money in the shortest possible time. There will be shameful waste, destructive loss, and short-sighted disregard of the future, as we have learned by bitter experience here at home.

Unless the governments of all the American republics, including our own, enact in time such laws as will both protect their natural wealth and promote their legitimate and reasonable development, future generations will owe their misfortunes to us of today. A great patriotic duty calls upon us. We owe it to ourselves and to them to give the American republics all the help we can. The cases in which we have failed should be no less instructive than the cases in which we have succeeded. With prompt action and good will the task of saving the resources for the people is full of hope for us all.

State and Federal Control.

But while we of the United States are anxious, as I believe we are able, to be of assistance to others, there are problems of our own which we must not overlook. One of the most important conservation questions of the moment relates to the control of water power monopoly in the public interest. There is apparent to the judicious observer a distinct tendency on the part of our opponents to cloud the issue by raising the question of state as against federal jurisdiction. We are ready to meet that issue if it is forced upon us. But there is no hope for the plain people in such conflicts of jurisdiction. The essential question is not one of hair-splitting legal technicalities. It is simply this: Who can best regulate the special interests for the public good? Most of the predatory corporations are interstate or have interstate affiliations. Therefore they are largely out of reach of effective state control, and fall of necessity within the federal jurisdiction. One of the prime objects of those among them that are grasping and greedy is to avoid any effective control either by state or nation; and they advocate at this time state control simply because they believe it to be the least effective. In the great fight of the people to drive the special interests from the domination of our government, the nation is stronger and its jurisdiction is more effective than that of any state. The most effective weapon against these great corporations, most of which are financed and owned on the Atlantic coast, will be federal laws and the federal executive. That is why I so strongly oppose the demand to turn these matters over to the states. It is fundamentally a demand against the interest of the plain people, of the people of small means, against the interest of our children and our children's children; and it is primarily in the interest of the great corporations which desire to escape all government control.

The Conservation Fight.

One of the difficulties in putting into practise the conservation idea is that the field to which it applies is constantly growing in the public mind. It has been no slight task to bring before 100,000,000 people a great conception like that of conservation, and convince them that it is right. This much we have accomplished. But there remains much to be cleared up, and many misunderstandings to be removed. These misunderstandings are due in part at least to direct misrepresentation by the men to whose interest it is that conservation should not prosper. For example, we find it constantly said by men who should know better that temporary withdrawals, such as the withdrawals of coal lands, will permanently check development. Yet the fact is that these withdrawals have no purpose except to prevent the coal lands from passing into private ownership until congress can pass laws to open them to development under conditions just alike to the public and to the men who will do the developing. If there is delay, the responsibility for it rests, not on the men who made the withdrawals to protect the public interest, but on those who prevent congress from passing wise legislation, and so putting an end to the need for withdrawals.

Abuses committed in the name of a just cause are familiar to all of us. Many unwise things are done and many unwise measures are advocated in the name of conservation, either through ignorance, or by those whose interest lies not in promoting the movement, but in retarding it. For example, to stop water power development by needless refusal to issue permits for water power or private irrigation works on the public lands inevitably leads many men, friendly to conservation and believers in its general principles, to assume that its practical application is necessarily a check upon progress. Nothing could be more mistaken. The idea, widely circulated of late, that conservation means locking up of the natural resources for the exclusive use of future generations, is wholly mistaken. Our purpose is to make full use of these resources, but to consider our sons and daughters as well as ourselves; just as a farmer uses his farm in ways to preserve its future usefulness. Conservation is the road to national efficiency, and it stands for ample and wise development.

But in spite of these difficulties, most of which are doubtless inevitable in any movement of this kind, conservation has made marvelous progress. I have been astounded and delighted on my return from abroad at the progress made while I was away. We have a right to congratulate ourselves on this marvelous progress; but there is no reason for believing that the fight is won. In the beginning the special interests, who are our chief opponents in the conservation fight, paid little heed to the movement, because they neither understood it, nor saw that if it won they must lose. But with the progress of conservation in the minds of our people the fight is getting sharper. The nearer we approach to victory, the bitterer the opposition that we must meet, and the greater the need for caution and watchfulness. Open opposition we can overcome, but I warn you especially against the men who come to congresses such as this, ostensibly as disinterested citizens, but actually as the paid agents of the special interests. I heartily approve the attitude of any corporation, interested in the deliberations of a meeting such as this, which comes hither to advocate, by its openly accredited agents, views which it believes the meeting should have in mind. But I condemn with equal readiness the appearance of a corporate agent before any convention who does not declare himself frankly as such.

This congress is a direct appeal to the patriotism of our whole people. The nation wisely looks to such gatherings for counsel and leadership. Let that leadership be sound, definite, practical, and on the side of all the people. It would be no small misfortune if a meeting such as this should ever fall into the hands of the open enemies or false friends of the great movement which it represents.

It is our duty and our desire to make this land of ours a better home for the race, but our duty does not stop there. We must also work for a better nation to live in this better land. The development and conservation of our national character and our free institutions must go hand in hand with the development and conservation of our natural resources, which the governor's conference so well called the foundations of our prosperity. Whatever progress we may make as a nation, whatever wealth we may accumulate, however far we may push mechanical development and production, we shall never reach a point where our welfare can depend in the last analysis on anything but honesty, courage, loyalty, and good citizenship. The homely virtues are the lasting virtues, and the road which leads to them is the road to genuine and lasting success.

What this country needs is what every free country must set before it as the great goal toward which it works—an equal oportunity for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness for every one of its citizens. To achieve this end we must put a stop to the improper political dominion, no less than to the improper economic dominion, of the great special interests. This country, its natural resources, its natural advantages, its opportunities and its institutons, belong to all its citizens. They cannot be enjoyed fully fully and freely under any governmen in which the special interests as such have a voice. The supreme political task of our day, the indispensable condition of national efficiency and national welfare, is to drive the special interests out of our public life.

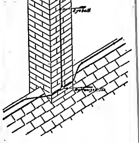
PROTECT FARM BUILDINGS FROM LIGHTNING STROKES

Every Effort Should Be Made to Guard Against Loss of Life and Property From Destructive Discharges of Electricity

(By ALFRED J. HENRY.)

If the phenomenon of lightning were better understood, perhaps the enormous toll it exacts in life and property would be less. Carefully compiled statistics show that in the United States between 700 and 800 persons are killed annually and twice that number injured by lightning. This great loss of life falls largely upon the people who live away from the great centers of population. So, too, the greater part of the annual loss of property is chargeable to farm buildings and their contents and live stock in the field.



Method of Running Conductor.

Whether or not to install lightning conductors on one's property is a question, after all, of individual judgment. If the property is insured against loss by lightning there would be little incentive toward incurring additional expense for lightning conductors. In case of an isolated farm building standing apart from trees it would seem that the conservative course would be to erect an inexpensive system of lightning conductors.

The ordinary farm building is not difficult to protect from lightning flashes in the great majority of cases.

Any farmer can construct a comparatively inexpensive yet effective lightning conductor with materials that can be purchased from the larger electric supply houses.

The earth connections require great care in their construction. The essential thing is to reach permanently moist earth in the shortest distance from the main conductors. The ground ends of the vertical wires should be coiled in a spiral having a diameter of about a foot. These spirals should be buried in moist earth at whatever depth the latter is found. If there are no down rain spouts on the building the ground connection should be placed in the line of the drip from the roof, since the latter has a tendency to keep the earth moist. This construction has the advantage of an unbroken run of wire from the ground to the roof of the building.

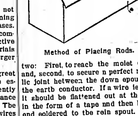
Two Types of T Connections.

When the main conductors run from the roof of the building to the base only there is often trouble in making a perfect joint between them and the materials used for ground wires.

One method is to take a galvanized water pipe, say an inch and a quarter in diameter, and drive it into the ground at the foot of the main conductors. Secure a cap for the top of the pipe and bore a hole through it so that the conducting wire can be passed through; then insert the wire into the iron pipe, fill the interstices with powdered charcoal, and place the cap on the pipe. The hole in the cap should be large enough to permit the conducting wire to pass easily through and at the same time allow water to pass down the wire into the interior of the pipe.

A metallic roof properly connected to the earth affords a reasonably good protection to the building from lightning. In suburban districts where frame buildings with tin roofs prevail there is little destruction by lightning; most of the buildings have down rain spouts, which serve to conduct the discharge to the earth. In the case of an isolated building with a tin roof care should be taken to see that the down rain spouts are connected with the ground. It will not do to stop them within a few inches of the ground; there should be an unbroken metallic path from the ridge of the roof into the ground.

In providing a ground wire to connect the lower end of a rain spout with moist earth, a wire cable or a piece of galvanized pipe may be used. The vital points of the connection are two: First, to reach the moist earth, and, second, to secure a perfect metallic joint between the down spout and the earth conductor. If a wire is used it should be flattened out at the end in the form of a tape and then bolted and soldered to the rain spout. This form of a joint is not very durable, since the tin is apt to oxidize unless it is kept well painted.

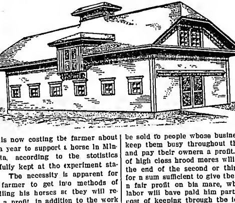


Method of Placing Rods.

In the case of a building with a metal roof, but no down spouts, it is desirable, in order to obtain protection from lightning, to run a wire conductor from each of the four corners of the roof to the earth. If the overhang of the roof is excessive, a hole should be bored through it to let the wire pass close to the wall of the building.

All objects on a building higher than the ridge of the roof should be protected by short terminal wires, and the latter should be joined to the main conductor provided the distance is not over 10 or 15 feet. If the distance is greater it would be better to run a conductor direct to the ground, the usual precautions as to reaching permanently moist earth being observed.

BROOD MARES MAKE PROFIT



It is now costing the farmer about $90 a year to support a horse in Minnesota, according to the statistics carefully kept at the experiment station. The necessity is apparent for the farmer to get into methods of handling his horses so they will return a profit, in addition to the work they do, "to pay for their board." It has been suggested by the secretary of the Minnesota stallion registration board that the present average farm horses be at once converted into high-class brood mares capable of raising a colt annually. The geldings should be sold to people whose business will keep them busy throughout the year and pay their owners a profit. Colts of high class brood mares will sell at the end of the second or third year for a sum sufficient to give the farmer a fair profit on his mare, while her labor will have paid him part of the cost of keeping through the idle season. The farmer needs a horse that will pay him a profit every day in the year.

The fact should not be overlooked that the horse, like other animals, requires adequate shelter. An attractive barn is shown in the illustration.

NITRATE SODA FOR POTATOES

Better Results Obtained if Applied in Small Quantities Two or Three Times During Growth of Plants.

Nitrate of soda is also known as Chile saltpetre. As put upon the market it is quite uniform in composition, containing about 16 pounds of nitrogen to each 100 pounds of nitrate of soda. It usually retails from $40 to $50 per ton.

It should not be applied much before crops are able to use it, and better results are obtained if it is applied in small amounts at two or three different times during the growth of the plants, rather than all at once.

It should be applied to the surface soil and lightly cultivated in. It is one of the most effective nitrogenous fertilizers when properly handled. It should seldom be used in excess of 300 pounds per acre, and one-half this amount is usually sufficient.

The nitrate of soda should not come in direct contact with the seed part of the potatoes.

Professor Voorhies, director of the New Jersey experiment station at New Brunswick, N. J., has made some valuable experiments with nitrate of soda, and he will send you a bulletin if you will write for them.

Maine Potato Crops.

From 80 acres of land an Aroostook county farmer last year raised 10,000 barrels of potatoes. It is said, however, that even this fine record has been exceeded in that county.

No Use for Mongrel Bull.

When the heifer calves are to be raised for dairy calves there is absolutely no business or reason on earth for a dairy farmer to keep a mongrel bull.

Paying for Bad Roads.

America pays more for bad roads than good roads would cost.

INDEPENDENCE ON THE FARM

SPLENDID RESULTS FOLLOW FARMING IN THE CANADIAN WEST.

Americans in Canada Not Asked to Forget That They Were Born Americans.

Farm produce today is remunerative, and this helps to make farm life agreeable. Those who are studying the economics of the day tell us that the strength of the nation lies in the cultivation of the soil. Farming is no longer a hand-to-mouth existence. It means independence, often affluence, but certainly independence.

Calling at a farm house, near one of the numerous thriving towns of Alberta, in Western Canada, the writer was given a definition of "independence" that was accepted as quite original. The broad acres of the farmer's land had a crop—and a splendid one, too, by the way—ripening for the reapers' work. The evenness of the crop, covering field after field, attracted attention, as did also the neatness of the surroundings; the well-built substantial story-and-a-half log house, and the well-rounded sides of the cattle. His broken English—he was a French Canadian—was easily understandable and pleasant to listen to. He had come there from Montreal a year ago, had paid $20 an acre for the 320-acre farm, with the little improvement it had. He had never farmed before, yet his crop was excellent, giving evidence as to the quality of the soil, and the good judgment that had been used in its preparation. And brains count in farming as well as "braw." Asked how he liked it there, he straightened his broad shoulders, and with hand outstretched towards the waving fields of grain, this young French Canadian, model of symmetrical build, replied: "Be gosh, yes, we like him—the farmin'—well, don't we, Jeannette?" as he smilingly turned to the young wife standing near. She had accompanied him from Montreal to his far-west home, to assist him by her wifely help and companionship, in making a new home in this new land. "Yes, we come here wan year ago, and we never farm before. Near Montreal, me father, he kep de gris' mill, an' de cardin' mill, an' be gosh! he run de cheese factor' too. He work, an' me work, an' us work tarn har', be gosh! Ue work for de farmer; well 'den, sometin' go not always w'at you call de' right, an' de farmer he say de' mean t'ing, be gosh! and tell us go to —well, anyway be tarn mad. Now," and then he waved his hand again towards the fields, "I 'ave no bodder, no cardin' mill, no gris' mill, no cheese factor'. I am now de farmer man an' when me want to, me can say to de oder fellow! you go——! Well, we like him—the farmin'." And that was a good definition of independence.

RANG THE BELL, ALL RIGHT

Estimates of Yield of Wheat in Western Canada for 1910 More Than One Hundred Million Bushels.

Throughout a trip of several hundred miles in the agricultural district of Western Canada, the writer found the farmers in excellent spirits, an optimistic feeling being prevalent everywhere. It will be interesting to the thousands on the American side of the line to know that their relatives and friends are doing well there, that they have made their home in a country that stands up so splendidly under what has been trying conditions in most of the northwestern part of the farming districts of the continent. With the exception of some portions of Southern Alberta, and also a portion of Manitoba and Southern Saskatchewan the grain crops could be described as fair, good and excellent. The same drought that affected North and South Dakota, Montana, Minnesota, Wisconsin and other of the northern central states extended over into a portion of Canada just mentioned. But in these portions the crops for the past four or five years were splendid and the yields good.

The great province of Saskatchewan has suffered less from drought in proportion to her area under cultivation than either of the other provinces. On the other hand, instead of the drought being confined very largely to the south of the main line of the C. P. R. it is to be found in patches right through the center of northern Saskatchewan also. In spite of this, however, Saskatchewan has a splendid crop. A careful checking of the averages of yield, with the acreages in the different districts, gives an average yield of 15½ bushels to the acre.

In Southern Alberta one-fifth of the winter wheat will not be cut, or has been re-sown to feed. There are individual crops which will run as high as 45 bushels on acres of 500 and 1,000 acres, but there are others which will drop as low as 15. A safe average for winter wheat will be 19 bushels. The sample is exceptionally fine, excepting in a few cases where it has been wrinkled by extreme heat.

The northern section of Alberta has been naturally anxious to impress the world with the fact that it has not suffered from drought, and this is quite true. Wheat crops run from 20 to 30 bushels to an acre, but in a report such as this it is really only possible to deal with the province as a whole and while the estimate may seem very low to the people of Alberta, it is fair to the province throughout.

When the very light rainfall and other eccentricities of the past season are taken into account, it seems nothing short of a miracle that the Canadian West should have produced 102 million bushels of wheat, which is less than 18 million bushels short of the crop of 1909. It is for the West generally a paying crop and perhaps the best advertisement the country has ever had, as it shows that no matter how dry the year, with thorough tillage, good seed and proper methods of conserving the moisture, a crop can always be produced.

As some evidence of the feeling of the farmers, are submitted letters written by farmers but a few days ago, and they offer the best proof that can be given.

Maidstone, Sask., Aug. 4, '10.

I came to Maidstone from Menominee, Wis., four years ago, with my parents and two brothers. We all located homesteads at that time and now have our patents. The soil is a rich black loam as good as I have ever seen. We have had good crops each year and in 1909 they were exceedingly good. Wheat yielding from 22 to 40 bushels per acre and oats from 40 to 80. We are well pleased with the country and do not care to return to our native state. I certainly believe that Saskatchewan is just the place for a hustler to get a start and make himself a home. Wages here for farm labor range from $35 to $45 per month.

Tofield, Alberta, July 10, 1910.

I am a native of Texas, the largest and one of the very best states of the Union. I have been here three years and have not one desire to return to the States to live. There is no place I know of that offers such splendid inducements for capital, brain and brawn. I would like to say to all who are not satisfied where you are, make a trip to Western Canada; if you do not like it you will feel well repaid for your trip. Take this from one who's on the ground. We enjoy splendid government, laws, school, railway facilities, health, and last, but not least, an ideal climate, and this from a Texan.
O. L. Pughs.

James Normur of Porter, Wisconsin, after visiting Dauphin, Manitoba, says: "I have been in Wisconsin 25 years, coming out from Norway. Never have I seen better land and the crops in East Dauphin are better than I have ever seen, especially the oats. There is more straw and it has heavier heads than ours in Wisconsin.

"This is just the kind of land we are looking for. We are all used to mixed farming and the land we have seen is finely adapted to that sort of work. Cattle, hogs, horses and grain will be my products, and for the live stock, prospects could not be better. I have never seen such cattle as are raised here on the wild prairie grasses and the vetch that stands three or four feet high in the groves and on the open prairie.

Sir Wilfred Laurier Talks to Americans.

Sir Wilfred Laurier, Premier of Canada, is now making a tour of Western Canada and in the course of his tour he has visited many of the districts in which Americans have settled. He expresses himself as highly pleased with them. At Craig, Saskatchewan, the American settlers joined with the others in an address of welcome. In replying Sir Wilfred said in part:

"I understand that many of you have come from the great Republic to the south of us—a land which is akin to us by blood and tradition. I hope that in coming from a free country you realize that you come also to another free country, and that although you came from a republic you have come to what is a crowned democracy. The King, our sovereign, has perhaps not so many powers as the President of the United States, but whether we are on the one side of the line or the other, we are all brothers by blood, by kinship, by ties of relationship. In coming here as you have come and becoming naturalized citizens of this country no one desires you to forget the land of your ancestors. It would be a poor man who would not always have in his heart a fond affection for the land which he came from. The two greatest countries today are certainly the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the Republic of the United States. Let them be united together and the peace of the world will be forever assured.

"I hope that in coming here as you have, you have found liberty, justice and equality of rights. In this country, as in your own, you know nothing of separation of creed and race, for you are all Canadians here. And if I may express a wish it is that you would become as good Canadians as you have been good Americans and that you may yet remain good Americans. We do not want you to forget what you have been; but we want you to look more to the future than to the past. Let me, before we part, tender you the sincere expression of my warmest gratitude for your reception."

Serving Two Masters.

"Can a man serve two masters?" exclaimed John M. Callahan, candidate for the Democratic nomination for secretary of state, at a meeting in Eagles' hall the other night. "I say he cannot, and that reminds me of the answer I got from an Irish friend of mine when I asked him the same question.

"'Kin a man serve two masters, is it,' says my Irish friend. 'Oi only knowed wan man that could do ut, and in the ind they sent him to jail for bigamy!'"—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

The Right Way.

William Muldoon, the noted trainer, was talkin, apropos of the Jeffries-Johnson fight, of training.

"In training," he said, "the strictest obedience is required. Whenever I think of the theory of training I think of Dash, who, after 18 years of married life, is one of the best and happiest husbands in the world.

"'Dash,' I once said to him, 'well, Dash, old man, how do you take married life?'

"'According to directions,' he replied."

It is said that President Taft's Winona speech will not be used as a Republican campaign document.

Secretary Ballinger's "insurgent list" is still growing, and has reached such proportions that even Mr. Ballinger is fleeing from the wrath to come.

Since the Thief River papers have figured out that two counties can live more cheaply than one, doesn't it follow that we ought to divide into four or five counties?

The gubernatorial situation is anomalous. The Democrats have no candidate as yet, and the Republicans don't know whether their candidate is progressive or stand-pat.

Congressman Tawney has drawn the fire of a lot of big men—Roosevelt, Pinchot, Heney, Madison, and others. But all promises to be less disastrous than President Taft's praise.

Anyway it is a refreshing diversion now and then to have Colonel Roosevelt go out among the people and assure them that the golden rule and the ten commandments are safe guides of conduct.

Senator Cummins says that "Speaker Cannon and Senator Aldrich are driving the country into a socialistic form of government and industry because of their interest in promoting the cause of monopolies."

Senator Smith, more than any other person, is responsible for the defeat of the Cashman distance tariff bill. Small wonder that the railroads and other corporate interests desire a continuance of Ed Smith as the political manager of Minnesota.

Senator Nelson probably doesn't like this job as official whitewasher for Ballinger. The secretary hasn't many friends in Minnesota, and the senior senator hasn't as many friends as he had before this unpleasant business was undertaken.

There seems to be more or less controversy whether or not the state fair is "an overgrown county fair," but there is no division of sentiment in the board of managers on the proposition that the fair needs a lot of money from the state treasury.

It is doubtless true that politics was being played by both the partisans and critics of Secretary Ballinger. The one point that stands out most prominently is the fact that the critics saw their opportunity and used it. And at that the American people are not accusing the Democrats and the lone Insurgent of slandering innocence or traducing virtue.

The people of Red Lake Falls and southern Red Lake county will not forget Senator Hanson's attitude in the county seat controversy during the last session of the legislature. He was the open and avowed enemy of Red Lake Falls, and did everything possible to take away the county seat. The primary is next Tuesday. Here is a chance for the Republican voters to remember the enemy of southern Red Lake county.

The English method of asking questions of political speakers is growing in favor here, and the honest and up-to-date speaker must be prepared for it, says the Fergus Falls Weekly. Senator Sageng, who contemplates a speaking tour of the county a little later, exprsses himself as not only willing, but glad, at the close of his speeches to have his auditors put him through any kind of catechism they may wish. We recommend his sort of frankness to all legislative candidates. It will pay them in votes and credit.

John Lind has declined the nomination for governor, and the vacancy will be filled today at a meeting of the Democratic state committee. Mr. Lind's refusal is a great disappointment to a large element of Minnesota voters, as the fomer governor was regarded as pre-eminently qualified to fill the office, and especially fitted to make the fight against corporation control of state politics. It is sincerely hoped by the friends of reform that the Democratic committee can find a man of the hour—a man worthy of the mantle of Lind and Johnson.

The census reports of the population of the Michigan counties and of those cities of that State which have over 25,000 inhabitants each, show how rapidly the middle west is changing from an almost purely rural community it was a few decades ago to what will soon be a predominantly urban section. Incidentally, they explain why many food supplies not materially affected by the tariff or the trusts have so much advanced in price. The population of the nine largest cities of Michigan shows an increase in the decade of 298,952, while the rest of the states show a decrease of 2,346. When the census tells us the population of the state by minor civil divisions, it will doubtless appear that the smaller cities and the manufacturing villages have grown in the decade and that the decrease in the number of inhabitants of the rural districts has been even greater than is above indicated.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Ortonville Herold-Star: An able discussion in several of the state papers reveals the fact that Minnesota is absolutely without a political boss. How sad.

Faribault Journal: The railroads confess that they are awaiting further crop reports and the performances of Theodore Roosevelt before they decide on any plans. Thus do kernels and the colonel hold the destiny of mighty forces.

Motley Mercury: Some of the stand-pat papers of the state are advocating the election of Congressman Tawney to the speaker's chair in the house of representatives next year. We might just as well have Cannon in the chair as Tawney, and perhaps it would be better as Tawney is probably the abler of the two and his record shows that he stands just as much with the interests as does Cannon. Between them we believe that Cannon would be the lessor evil of the two.

Cannon Falls Beacon: Timothy Woodruff, he of the fire alarm attire, had an acute attack of cold feet immediately succeeding the meeting of his committee that preferred one James S. Sherman to Roosevelt as an acknowledged state leader, his letter to the colonel reads like the effusion of a scared school boy begging off from a well deserved lickin'.

Sandstone Courier—Bob Dunn's idea a of one-mill state road tax seems to receive hearty approval from almost every part of the state and will undoubtedly be adopted by the next legislature.

Bemidji Pioneer: Secretary Mackenzie doesn't exactly pose as a purist, but he does believe in making the candidate sign the pledge.

Royalton Banner: The people are content with the present rate of taxation for state purposes; why not let the surplus accumulate and give the legislature of 1911 some chance to redeem the pledges that are being scattered broadcast, promising good legislation. The farmers do not need that one half mill nearly as bad as they do good roads.

St. Cloud Times: Minnesota is a wonderfuly rich state, that is, rich in it's natural resources. For meny years it was thought that the great stretch of country in the northwestern part of the country, unsettled at the present time, was practically worthless for agricultural purposes. Lately, however, an altogether different view is being entertained. However much remains to be done to the land that Commissioner Welch is so enthusiastic over and when the population of northern Minnesota is as great as it is in this part of the state now, the population in Stearns county will have doubled.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

For County Treasurer.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for county treasurer of Red Lake county and respectfully solicit the support and votes of all who believe that I will, if nominated and elected, run the office in an honest, efficient and economical manner.

If elected I hereby pledge that I will run the office to the best of my ability in an impartial and businesslike manner.

A the Republicain Primaries Sept. 20th, 1910.

HARRY E. IVES.

For Congressman

Henry O. Bjorge, candidate for the Republican nomination for member of congress in the Ninth District, was born on a farm near Lake Park, Becker county, Minn. He is a graduate of the Moorhead State Normal and of the Law Department of the State University. At the time of his father's death he took charge of the farm where he now resides. Mr. Borge has served three terms as a member of the Minnesota legislature and is the first native born to represent Becker county in this official capacity. He is also the first candidate for member of congress born in the Ninth Congressional distict.

He stands against Cannon and Cannonism; he stands for the Roosevelt policies and for genuine progressive legislation.

LEWIS A. NELSON

Candidate for Re-election as

SHERIFF

OF RED LAKE COUNTY, MINN.

Your Vote and Support Solicited.

Gustav G. Kindseth.

Mr. Gustav G. Kindseth, candidate for County Treasurer, is not a politician, and if elected will be under no obligations to anyone and will render the humblest citizen the same service as he will the banker or merchant. The fact that a man has held the same position for the same company for twelve years stroight is a good recommendation that he will perform his duties when elected to office. Such a man is Gustav G. Kindseth, candidate for the Republican nomination for County Treasurer at the coming Primary election to be held September 20.

Sheriff Louis A. Nelson.

No man who has held office in Red Lake county has made warmer friends of those who come in contact in an official way than has Sheriff Lewis A. Nelson republican candidate for sheriff of this county. Year by year he has watched the progress of this county with a pride and love consistant with his strong and rugged nature. His service as sheriff has been exceedingly satisfactory and his re-election will be a graceful compliment to a capable official, and at the same time will retain in the service of the county a man who is competent and experienced. He is worthy of your highest consideration socially, commercially and at the polls.—Eleven Towns.

For State Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effectively on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.—ALBERT BERG, Spooner, Minnesota.

For County Treasurer.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Treasurer of Red Lake county and solicit your support and your vote at the primary election to be held September 20, 1910.—G. G. KINDSETH.

For Sheriff.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff of Red Lake county, and respectfully solicit the support of all. If nominated and elected I will at all times do my duty.

—CHARLES J. FELLMAN.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Representative from the 61st legislative district. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to work for a just reapportionment of the state into legislative districts, for a one mill tax for good roads and for other needs of northern Minnesota as enumerated in the resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association.—NOEL DELORME.

For Judge of Probate.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Judge of Probate and solicit your support and vote at the primary election to be held Sept. 20, 1910.—WM. HOLBERG.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st legislative district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all efforts to secure the redistricting of the state, a one mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'NEILL.

For Representative.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the Republican nomination for member of the house of Representatives from the 61st legislative district, comprising the counties of Red Lake, Clearwater and Beltrami. If nominated and elected I will use all honorable means to secure a just reapportionment of the state, a one mill tax for road purposes will receive my support and I will work for the needs of northern Minnesota as enumerated in Resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association.—IVER A. KROHN.

For County Auditor.

I fully intended entering another vocation and had no intention of filing for the office of County Auditor but have been constantly and repeatedly urged to become a candidate for the office by your township and school officials and other men throughout the county with whom I have come into close contact through my relations with them as County Auditor. I have therefore decided to enter the race for County Auditor on the Republican ticket at the primaries to be held September 20.

Having been appointed by your county board May 15, 1909, to fill the unexpired term of the late John B. O'Brien, deceased, I have conducted the affairs of the office to the best of my ability since that time.

I will appreciate the vote and support at the coming primaries of all those who believe I am worthy of filling this responsible position and promise you that if nominated and elected I will conduct the affairs of the office in an honest and impartial manner the same as I have in the past.

Respectfully,
A. A. LATENDRESSE.

FISHING TIME IN THE PASIG

Swimming in Myriads Near Surface They Are Snared and Speared by Filipinos.

Friday morning Filipinos snaring eels and other fish in the Pasig near the captain of the port building by largest eel ever seen on the water front. It was fully ten feet in length. front. It was fully ten feet in length.

Both banks of the Pasig and all the ships and lighters moored in the stream were thronged with hundreds of Filipinos with snares and spears trying to catch the fish that in myriads were swimming near the surface of the stream.

Natives when asked in regard to the phenomenon were almost unanimous in their statement to the effect that at this time of the year the bottom of the river gets hot and that the fish have to leave the depths of the stream and flash back and forth on or near the surface.

Another theory that seemed to have a great many adherents was to the effect that at this time every year there was a change in the character of the water. This change acting on the fish as a stimulant.

This theory was advanced by an old pilot who has witnessed the phenomenon for many years.—Manila Times.

Opportunity of Suffragist.

Baroness Aletta Korff tells in one of the magazines how the women of Finland came to vote. The fact is that women had to show that they could meet an emergency before the vote came to them. They have not had many opportunities to take the initiative in the world's history and they have not always responded when the opportunity came, but when a crisis, such as that of 1904, when the strike and the revolutionary outbreak in Russia took place at the same time, occurred, they proved they could make peace by doing it. Not until England and the United States find the women helping them to bear some great trouble will they give them the right to vote.

Where Size Counts.

Edna thoughtfully considered a cow that was calmly grazing in a meadow across the way. "Mamma, how old is that cow?" she finally inquired. "She is four years old," answered Edna's mother. Edna considered the answer and from time to time appeared to be comparing herself with the cow. "Well," was her parting comment on the question, "I'm five and that cow is big enough to be fifty."

Scandal.

Mrs. Simmonds glanced at the scare headline: "Bank Robbed! Police at Sea!" and laid down the sheet.

"Naow, look at that, Ez!" she ejaculated, repeating the headline aloud. "Here's a big city bank broke into by burglars, and th' city police force all off fishin' somewhere! What a scandal!"—Judge.

"NO FRILLS"

Just Sensible Food Cured Him.

Sometimes a good, healthy commercial traveler suffers from poorly selected food and is lucky if he learns that Grape-Nuts food will put him right.

A Cincinnati traveler says: "About a year ago my stomach got in a bad way. I had a headache most of the time and suffered misery. For several months I ran down until I lost about 40 pounds in weight and finally had to give up a good position and go home. Any food that I might use seemed to nauseate me.

"My wife, hardly knowing what to do, one day brought home a package of Grape-Nuts food and coaxed me to try it. I told her it was no use but finally to humor her I tried a little, and they just struck my taste. It was the first food I had eaten in nearly a year that did not cause any suffering.

"Well, to make a long story short, I began to improve and stuck to Grape-Nuts. I went up from 135 pounds in December to 194 pounds the following October.

"My brain is clear, blood all right and appetite too much for any man's pocketbook. In fact, I am thoroughly made over, and owe it all to Grape-Nuts. I talk so much about what Grape-Nuts will do that some of the men on the road have nicknamed me 'Grape-Nuts,' but I stand today a healthy, rosy-cheeked man—a pretty good example of what the right kind of food will do.

"You can publish this if you want to. It is a true statement without any frills."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

ROOSEVELT TALKS TO WAGE-EARNERS

Labor Day Address Delivered at Fargo Is Well Received.

JOINT ACTION A NECESSITY

Trades Unions Commended, But Some of Their Acts Criticised—American Federation Planks Approved by Speaker.

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 5.—The union labor forces of Fargo and thousands of other persons had a treat today when Theodore Roosevelt delivered the Labor Day address. He spoke with great seriousness and with frankness, and his speech was well received by the big crowd that heard it. Colonel Roosevelt's address was as follows:

Today—on Labor Day—I speak in one sense especially to those personally and vitally interested in the labor struggle; and yet I speak of this primarily as one aspect of the larger social struggle growing out of the attempts to readjust social conditions and make them more equitable.

The nineteenth century was distinctly one of economic triumphs—triumphs in the domain of production, including transportation and the mechanics of exchange. The marvelous progress made in these respects multiplied man's productive power to an almost inconceivable degree. In the matter of the production of wealth, as much progress was made during the nineteenth century as during all previous periods since history dawned; that is, the changes brought in a single century through machinery and steam have been greater than the sum total of the changes of the preceding thousands of years; and these very changes and this material progress have thrust upon us social and political problems of the first magnitude. The triumph of the physical sciences in the nineteenth century represented progress primarily in the material elements of civilization. The most pressing problems that confront the present century are not concerned with the material production of wealth, but with its distribution. The demands of progress now deal not so much with the material as with the moral and ethical factors of civilization. Our basic problem is to see that the marvelously augmented powers of production bequeathed to us by the nineteenth century shall in the twentieth be made to administer to the needs of the many rather than be exploited for the profit of the few.

The American wage-earner faces this larger social problem in a dual capacity: first, as a citizen of the Republic charged with the full duty of citizenship, and next as a wage-earner—as a wage-worker—who, together with his fellow-workers, is vitally concerned in the question of wages and general conditions of employment, which affect not only his well-being and that of his wife and children, but the opportunities of all workers for a higher development.

Must Depend on Our Own Efforts.

It is true of wage-workers, as of all other citizens, that most of their progress must depend upon their own initiative and their own efforts. Nevertheless, there are three different factors in this progress. There is first, the share which the man's own individual qualities must determine. This is the most important of all, for nothing can supply the place of individual capacity. Yet there are two other factors also of prime importance; namely, what can be done by the wage-workers in co-operation with one another; and what can be done by government—that is, by the instrument through which all the people work collectively. Wages and other most important conditions of employment must remain largely outside of government control; must be left for adjustment by free contract between employers and wage-earners. But to attempt to leave this merely to individual action means the absolute destruction of individualism, for where the individual is so weak that he, perforce, has to accept whatever a strongly organized body chooses to give him, his individual liberty becomes a mere sham and mockery. It is indispensably necessary, in order to preserve to the largest degree our system of individualism, that there should be effective and organized collective action. The wage-earners must act jointly through the process of collective bargaining. In great industrial enterprises. Only thus can they be put upon a plane of economic equality with their corporate employers. Only thus is freedom of contract made a real thing and not a mere legal fiction. There are occasional occupations where this is not necessary; but, speaking broadly, it is necessary throughout the great world of organized industry. I believe this practise of collective bargaining, effective only through such organizations as the trades unions, to have been one of the most potent factors in the past century in promoting the progress of the wage-earners and in securing larger social progress for humanity. I believe in the principle of organized labor and in the practise of collective bargaining, not merely as a desirable thing for the wage-earners, but as something which has been demonstrated to be essential in the long run to their permanent progress.

This does not mean that I unequivocally indorse any or all practises that labor organizations may happen to adopt, or any or all principles that they may choose to enunciate. Labor organizations have the weaknesses and defects common to all other forms of human organizations. Sometimes they act very well, and sometimes they act very badly; and I am for them when they act well, and I am against them when they act badly. I believe that their existence is a necessity; I believe that their aims and purposes are generally good; and I believe that all of them have occasionally made mistakes, and that some of them have been guilty of wrong-doing. Just in so far as they are strong and effective they tempt designing men who seek to control them for their own interests, and stimulate the desires of ambitious leaders who may be clever, crooked men, or who may be honest but visionary and foolish. In other words, in treating of labor unions, as in treating of corporations, or of humanity generally, we will do well to remember Abraham Lincoln's saying that "there is a deal of human nature in mankind." Whether in a man or in an organized body of men, the power to do good means that such power may be twisted into evil; and in proportion as the power grows, so it becomes steadily more important that it should be handled aright. Just in proportion as in its proper function power is important to social progress, so in its improper function it becomes fraught with social disaster.

Wise Course For Original Labor.

Outside critics should appreciate the necessity of organized labor, and understand and sympathize with what is good in it, [illegible] organizations directed against it and ruthlessly eliminate from the practises of its organisation those things which justify such criticism and attack. This is the path, not only of right, but of wisdom and safety. Public opinion in the United States is daily becoming more alert and more intelligent and more forceful; and no organisation whether trades union or corporation, whether industrial or non-industrial, can endure or permanently amount to a social force if it does not harmonize with a wise and enlightened public opinion. Hitherto we Americans have been over-occupied with material things, and have neglected to watch the play of the social forces about us. But now we are awakening from that indifference; and every form of organization representing an important economic, political, or social force must undergo a closer scrutiny than ever before.

I think that the next quarter of a century will be important politically in many ways; and in none more so than in the labor movement. Not only are the benefits of labor organizations more clearly understood than ever before, but any shortcoming or vice displayed in connection therewith is also more clearly understood and more quickly resented. The public is growing more and more to understand that, in a contest between employer and employee—a corporation and a trades union—not only the interests of the contestants, but the interests of the third party—the public—must be considered. Anything like levity in provoking a strike, on the one hand or on the other, is certain more and more to be resented by the public. Strikes are sometimes necessary and proper; sometimes they represent the only way in which, after all other methods have been exhausted, it is possible for the laboring man to stand for his rights; but it must be clearly understood that a strike is a matter of last resort. Our social organization is too complex for us to fail quickly to condemn those who, with levity or in a spirit of wanton brutality, bring about far-reaching and disastrous interference with its normal processes. The public sympathizes cordially with any movement for a good standard of living and for moderate hours of employment. (I personally, for instance, cordially believe in an eight-hour day, and in one day in seven for complete rest.) Where men and women are worked under harsh and intolerable conditions and can secure no relief without a strike, or, indeed, where the strike is clearly undertaken for things which are vitally necessary—and then only as a last resort—the public sympathy will favor the wage-workers; but it will not favor them unless such conditions as these are fulfilled. Therefore it is becoming more than ever important that the labor movement should combine steady, far-seeing leadership with discipline and control in its ranks. Dishonest leadership is a curse anywhere in American life, and nowhere is it a greater curse than in the labor movement. If there is one lesson which I would rather teach to my fellow-Americans than any other; it is to hound down the dishonest man—no matter what his condition—and to brush aside with impatient contempt the creature who only denounces dishonesty when it is found in some special social stratum. There are dishonest capitalists, dishonest labor leaders, dishonest lawyers, and dishonest business men; dishonest men of great wealth and dishonest poor men; and the man who is a genuine reformer will decline to single out any one type for exclusive denunciation, but will fearlessly attack the dishonest man as such, whenever and wherever he is to be found.

Worthy Leaders Available.

For many years I have been more or less closely associated with representative leaders of labor unions. Some of these men are among my close friends, whom I respect and admire as heartily as I do any men in America. There are some of them to whom I go as freely for assistance and guidance, for aid and help, in making up my mind how to deal with our social problems, as I go to the leaders of any business or profession. I cannot pay too high a tribute to the worth and integrity of these men—to their sincerity and good judgment as leaders. But no movement—no leadership—however earnest and honest, can endure unless the rank and file live up to their duties, and search for such leadership, and support it when they find it. If the best men in a labor union leave its management and control to men of a poorer type, the effect will be just as disastrous as when good citizens in a city follow the same course as regards city government. The stay-at-home man in a union is just as much responsible for the sins of omission and commission of his organization as the stay-at-home man in a city is for the civic conditions under which he suffers and about which he complains.

All that can properly be done should be done by all of us to help upward the standard of living and to improve the ability of the average man to reach that standard. There are still in the United States great masses of skilled and unorganized labor, whose conditions of work and living are harsh and pitiable. It is a shocking indictment of our industrial condition to be told in a matter-of-course way in a government report that thousands of workers in this country are compelled to toil everyday in the week, without one day rest, for a wage of $45 a month. Such a condition is bad for them, and, in the end, bad for all of us. Our commercial development should be heartily encouraged; but it must not be allowed to commercialize our morals.

It is not merely the duty of the wage-earner, but it is also the duty of the general public, to see that he has safe and healthy conditions under which to carry on his work. No worker should be compelled, as a condition of earning his daily bread, to risk his life and limb, or be deprived of his health, or have to work under dangerous and bad surroundings. Society owes the worker this because it owes as much to itself. He should not be compelled to make this a matter of contract; he ought not to be left to fight alone for decent conditions in this respect. His protection in the place where he works should be guaranteed by the law of the land. In other words, he should be protected during his working hours against greed and carelessness on the part of unscrupulous and thoughtless employers, just as outside of those working hours both he and his employer are protected in their lives and property against the murderer and thief.

Far Behind Other Nations.

This opens a vitally important field of legislation to the National government and to the state alike. It is humiliating to think how far we of this country are behind most of the other countries in such matters. Practically all civilized countries have, for more than a decade, prohibited by the strictest regulations the poisonous match industry; yet we had not done anything at all until very recently to protect the laborers against this horrible danger. The National government made an investigation a year ago into this industry, which showed a condition of things unspeakably shocking and revolting. Legislation to prevent these abuses was introduced in congress, which was not passed. Since then the companies in fault have ostentatiously announced that they have done away with the objectionable conditions. I hope so; but whether they have or not, a law should be passed in stringent form to prevent any possible backsliding.

So it is in the matter of injuries to employees. In what is called "employer's liability" legislation other industrial countries have accepted the principle that the industry must bear the monetary burden of its human sacrifices, and that the employee who is injured shall have a fixed and definite sum. The United States still proceeds on an outworn and curiously improper principle, in accordance with which it has too often been held by the courts that the frightful burden of the accident shall be borne in its entirety by the very person least able to bear it. Fortunately, in a number of states—in Wisconsin and in New York, for instance—these defects in our industrial life are either being remedied or else are being made a subject of intelligent study with a view to their remedy. In New York a bill embodying moderate compensation for accidents has already been passed. Other states will undoubtedly follow in the same path. The Federal government has, so far as its own employees are concerned, been the first to recognize and put into shape this principle. However, this pioneer law was not made comprehensive enough; it does not cover all the employees of the Federal government that ought to come within its provisions, and the amount paid for permanent disability or death is entirely inadequate. Nevertheless, it was a great step in advance to have this principle of workingmen's compensation accepted and embodied in the Federal statutes, and the recent action of congress in providing for a commission to study and report upon the subject gives promise that the same principle will soon be applied to private firms that come within the jurisdiction of the Federal government.

Federation Planks Approved.

Women and children should, beyond all question, be protected; and in their cases there can be no question that the states should act. They should be particular objects of our solicitude; and they should be guarded in an effective fashion against the demands of a too greedy commercialism. On my recent trip in the neighborhood of Scranton and Wilkesbarre every one I spoke to agreed as to the immense improvement that had been wrought by the effective enforcement of the laws prohibiting children under the age of fourteen years from working, and prohibiting women from working more than ten hours a day. Personally, I think ten hours too long; but, be this as it may, ten hours a day was a great advance.

Among the planks in the platform of the American Federation of Labor there are some to which I very strongly subscribe. They are:

1. Free schools; free text-books; and compulsory education.
2. A work-day of not more than eight hours.
3. Release from employment one day in seven.
4. The abolition of the sweat-shop system.
5. Sanitary inspection of factory, workshop, mine, and home.
6. Liability of employers for injury to body or loss of life.

(I regard the demand in this form as inadequate. What we need is an automatically fixed compensation for all injuries received by the employee in the course of his duty, this being infinitely better for the employee and more just to the employer. The only sufferers will be lawyers of that undesirable class which exists chiefly by carrying on lawsuits of this nature.)

7. The passage and enforcement of rigid anti-child labor laws which will cover every portion of this country.
8. Suitable and plentiful playgrounds for children in all the cities.

Inasmuch as prevention is always best, especial attention should be paid to the prevention of industrial accidents by passing laws requiring the use of safety devices. At present the loss of life and limb among the industrial workers of the United States is simply appalling, and every year equals in magnitude the killed and wounded in a fair-sized war. Most of these casualties are preventable; and our legislative policy should be shaped accordingly. It would be a good idea to establish in every city a museum of safety devices, from which the workers could get drawings of them and information as to how they could be obtained and used.

The matter of compensation for injuries to employees is, perhaps, more immediately vital than any other. The report of the commission which has begun to look into this matter on behalf of the New York legislature is well worth reading. The bill presented by the Federation of Labor in Wisconsin on this subject seems excellent. In all dangerous trades the employer should be forced to share the burden of the accident, so that the shock may be borne by the community as a whole. This would be a measure of justice in itself, and would do away with a fruitful source of antagonism between employer and employed.

Our ideal should be a rate of wages sufficiently high to enable workmen to live in a manner conformable to American ideals and standards, to educate their children, and to provide for sickness and old age; the abolition of child labor; safety device legislation to prevent industrial accidents; and automatic compensation for losses caused by these industrial accidents.

Have Faith in Yourself.

There is a tremendous power in the habit of expectancy, the conviction that we shall realize our ambition, that our dreams shall come true. There is no uplifting habit like that attitude of expecting that our heart yearnings will be matched with realities; that things are going to turn out well and not ill; that we are going to succeed; that no matter what may or may not happen, we are going to be happy, says Success.

There is nothing else so helpful as the carrying of this optimistic, expectant attitude—the attitude which always looks for and expects the best, the highest, the happiest—and never allowing oneself to get into the pessimistic, discouraged mood.

Believe with all your heart that you will do what you were made to do. Never for an instant harbor a doubt of this. Drive it out of your mind if it seeks entrance. Entertain only the friendly thoughts or ideals of the thing you are bound to achieve. Reject all thought enemies, all discouraging moods—everything which would even suggest failure or unhappiness.

Wasted Effort.

It is said that a California poet was badly handled by his wife because he neglected to support the family.

When they asked for bread he gave them a sonnet, and when they clamored for pie he came across with a madrigal.

Nevertheless, it doesn't seem quite right for his wife to reach over and snatch tufts from his cranium cover and batter his shins with hench-made shoes and crack his slats with a broom handle. That sort of treatment doesn't bring results. A poet with a black eye and a twisted neck and a dented kneepan is no more useful than a poet in perfect order.

What the lady should do would be to have her poet hubby pick up some side trends that would promise financial results—as they did in Indiana, where you will find the baker writes poetry and so do the hairdresser and the motorman and the bartender.

But there is no use attempting to club money out of a poet.

Troublesome Times.

Yeast—I see as a space saver for small houses a Kansas man has invented folding stairs.

Crimsonbeak—But, say, suppose when a fellow has come home late at night and quietly taken his shoes off, he finds his wife has taken the stairs upstairs?

She Knew Better.

He—I would like to know why you refuse to marry me.

Put Hay in a Church.

In Old Weston, Huntingdonshire, England, a church is dedicated to St. Swithin. On Sunday nearest the saint's day the church is strewn with new mown hay, following a tradition that an old lady gave a poor man a field for charity providing he would furnish hay for the floor of the church to lessen the annoyance caused by the squeaking of new boots worn by villagers on feast Sunday.

Italian Proverb.

He that cannot is always willing.

Blissful Bickering.

"John, I understand that you have been saying mean things about me to your acquaintances."

"Why, dearest! Everybody knows that isn't so! Why, I tell everybody that you have made me what I am."

"That's what I mean."

Natural Propensity.

"Billy Bangs is such a nice, breezy sort of fellow."

"Yes; I suppose that is why he finds it so easy to raise the wind."

THE NEW ROMANCE.

Kiss me, but do not muss my hair,
 Nor be so much in haste
Your arm—my frock, if touched, will tear—
 To put about my waist.
Love me, but wisely; tears and sighs
 I loathe, and fear to see
A tortured brow and jealous eyes
 Bent angrily on me.
Tell me you love me, if you must,
 Remembering once 'tis said
That iteration breeds disgust
 And fervor is ill-bred.
And I'll give you a love discreet,
 For passion uncontroll'd
With pallor, wrinkles and crow's feet
 Turns pretty women old!
—Life.

Discouraging.

The learned savant came to the struggling student.

"My boy," he advised, laying a kindly hand on the young man's shoulder, "burn midnight oil if you would rise in this world. I burned midnight oil and now I am drawing $10,000 a year."

The struggling student sighed.

"Seems like I can't strike the pace," he responded, lugubriously. "I burn midnight oil every night and don't draw anything but mosquitoes."

REAL WORK.

Politician—He didn't care for work, so he married a woman with money.

Policeman—Living easy now, I guess?

Politician—No; she's so stingy with it that he has to work harder than ever.

Summer Night Comedy.

They sat under a sheltering palm watching the roof garden musical comedy.

"George," whispered the poetical maid, "will—will you love me till the stars grow old?"

"They are already old, my dear," responded George, as he watched some of the stars on the little stage at the other end of the garden.

Just So.

There had been a family row.

"Well," remarked the alleged head of the house, "a man learns a few things when he gets married. Yes, sir, a man lives and learns."

"That may be," retorted the feminine half of the sketch, "but the school of experience doesn't have coeds."

Willing to Investigate.

"My new refrigerator has a temperature constantly in the neighborhood of the freezing point," said Colonel Stillwell.

The visitor, who was warm and thirsty, looked up with great interest as he inquired:

"Have you—er—have you any proofs?"

Oh, Where?

Most men are pleased who wear new duds,
 As often has been noted,
But where's the man who buys the suds,
 Because his tongue is coated?

WISE MAYOR.

The Politician—You said before you were elected that you would share your last dollar with me.

Newly Elected Mayor—I know, but it's going to be a long time before I get down to my last dollar.

The Sole Defect.

"You say that man has no bad habits?"

"Only one; his habit of boasting that he has none."

The Bitterness of Damocles.

Damocles saw the sword suspended by a hair.

"Shucks," he cried; "my buttons have hung that way for months."

Thus it may be inferred that he was married.

An Old Settler.

Riggs—Did your wife's father settle anything on you when you got married?

Briggs—You bet he did. He settled himself on us and we can't get rid of him.

Engaged.

"Will you marry me?"

"I am already married!"

"So am I."

"Well, the first time we are both divorced at the same time we will get married."

MOTHER'S ADVICE.

"I am not satisfied to be dependent on my father for every farthing I need. I wish to be independent," said the ambitious girl to her mother.

"Should you go to earning your own living you would have to be the obedient servant of any employer you might have, always at his beck and call, always ready to do the bidding of your superiors, and having not an hour you could call your own," replied her mother.

"That would be horrid!" objected the ambitious girl. "I want to be independent of pa; but I'll call no man master, and I shall want my own way in everything."

"Oh, that's easy," said her mother. "Get married."

Wanted a Dinner.

The seedy individual cautiously advanced across the lawn to the spot where the prominent citizen was holding down a rustic chair.

"Pardon me, sir," began the s. i., "but the unemployed workingmen have appointed me a committee of one to request you to address us at the town hall tomorrow night."

"Well, I guess I can," replied the p. c., who never overlooked an opportunity to pose as a public speaker. "By the way, what sort of an address would you people like?"

"I think, sir," answered the committee, "the boys would appreciate an after-dinner speech more than anything else."

Wanted More.

The president of the Keepsafe Trust company, who long had been trying to persuade the billionaire to become a depositor, was explaining to the latter the facilities of protection which his company afforded. "Now, here," he said convincingly, pausing in front of two immense doors, "is our famous vault. It's made of armor plate steel six feet two inches thick, is fireproof, waterproof and burglar proof."

The billionaire sniffed with disdain. "The dickens!" he snorted. "I can find hundreds of vaults like this. Haven't you anything better? I want a vault that is cashier proof."

Good Rest.

Yeast—I understand your brother is getting a much-needed rest?

Crimsonbeak—Yes; his wife left for the country four days ago!—Yonkers Statesman.

"Ah John," said the wife to her recreant spouse, "when you remain away from me I miss you."

"But—hic—when I'm here?"

"Then I don't miss you. (Bang!) Take that!"

The rolling pin landed unerringly.

For the Disappointed Inventor.

The man whose machine

Both Were on Time, Too.

"What member of the class can mention one memorable date in Roman history?" the teacher asked.

"Antony's with Cleopatra," ventured one of the boys.—Everybody's.

Speaking of Women.

Him—Generally speaking, a woman is—

Her—Is what?

Him—Generally speaking.

An Angel.

She knows the secret of her worth—
 Of that there's no denying—
So, though she has no wings herself,
 She keeps the money flying.

Cynical.

"The heroine of this novel said to the hero in the fourteenth chapter: 'I hate you! I hate you! I hate you!'"

"They'll be married soon."

Just Could Not Be Right.

HOW A DOCTOR CURED SCALP DISEASE

"When I was ten or twelve years old I had a scalp disease, something like scald head, though it wasn't that. I suffered for several months, and most of my hair came out. Finally they had a doctor to see me and he recommended the Cuticura Remedies. They cured me in a few weeks. I have used the Cuticura Remedies, also, for a breaking out on my hands and was benefited a great deal. I haven't had any more trouble with the scalp disease. Miss Jessie F. Buchanan, R. F. Source of Revelation.

Twenty-seven new, crisp $1 bills, says Harper's Weekly, weigh as much as a $20 gold piece. Wouldn't have thought it, and have no means of proving the assertion, but if so it is probably owing in some way to the recent activity of the inspectors of weights and measures.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

COMING MAN OF BUSINESS

Long-Headed Youngster Who Bids Fair to Graduate Into Rockefeller Class.

So many panes of glass in old Mr Viner's greenhouse had been broken that he had at last offered a reward of 10 shillings to anyone who should give information as to the identity of the latest offender. The bait soon drew. A youngster called on Mr. Viner and informed him that a lad named Archie Thompson was the guilty party. He received his reward, went away rejoicing and the old gentleman forthwith wrote to the local schoolmaster, demanding the production of the said Archie Thompson, to make good the damage he had done to his windows.

Next day the informer called again. "The schoolmaster sent me," he said briskly. "I've seen a glazier and he'll put in your glass for three shillings. Here it is, and—"

"Not so fast, my lad," said Mr. Viner. "Have you come on behalf of Archie Thompson?"

"Well, yes, sir, in a way," said the boy. "Fact is," he continued, confidentially, "I'm him!"—London Tit-Bits.

A Shipping Error.

The young duchess of Westminster, wife of the richest peer in England, recently gave birth to her third child, a daughter. Thus there is no heir to the immense Grosvenor fortune, Earl Grosvenor, the duchess' second child, having died at the age of four.

Apropos of all this, a rather cruel story is being told in Newport about Lady Ursula Grosvenor, the eight-year-old daughter of the young duchess.

A friend, the story goes, called at Eaton Hall, and as she sat in the drawing room, little Lady Ursula entered.

"Oh, good afternoon," she said, gravely. "Mamma can't see any one today. She's upstairs with the new baby. They sent her, you know, a girl when she'd ordered a boy, and she's so upset that she's quite ill."

Globular Lightning.

Yesterday the inhabitants of Lewisham were provided with a specimen of that curious phenomenon known as "globular lightning." It is what is commonly called the "fire ball," and as it persists for several seconds it is obviously of a totally different character from any other form of lightning. It is much less brilliant than ordinary lightning, and its brightness appears to be that of iron at the "red hot" stage.

It is not, as some accounts might lead one to infer, a solid missile, but it is always spherical and appears to fall from a thunder cloud by its own gravity, sometimes rebounding after striking the ground.—London Globe.

When the Fish Exploded.

Somebody discovered that fish are fond of gasoline, and this led to the idea of soaking worms in gasoline in order to make them more alluring when used for bait.

Two of those gasoline-tempted fish exploded in the frying pan, and broke the kitchen window, and blew the cook's face full of mashed potato, and hurled the teakettle into the flour barrel, and painted the kitchen ceiling with stewed tomatoes.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. Unseemly noises disturbed her during the night. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff-button in a hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff-button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson arrived. Gertrude revealed she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. Gertrude was suspected. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff-button. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey left in response to a telegram. Gertrude said she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him a loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong wrecked his own bank and could clear Bailey. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, was found at the lodge. The lodgekeeper said Louise and Arnold had a long talk the night of the murder. Louise was prostrated. Louise told Halsey, that while she still loved him she was to marry another, and that he would despise her when he learned the whole story. It developed that Dr. Walker and Louise were to be married. A prowler was heard in the house. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Louise said she had heard a knock at the door and answered it. Something brushed past her on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. After "seeing a ghost," Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead. A slip was found in his pocket bearing the name "Lucien Wallace, 14 Elm street, Richfield."

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

"Certain."

"In what part?"

"In the east wing."

"Can you tell me when these intrusions occurred, and what the purpose seemed to be? Was it robbery?"

"No," I said decidedly. "As to time, once on Friday night a week ago, again the following night, when Arnold Armstrong was murdered, and again last Friday night."

The doctor looked serious. He seemed to be debating some question in his mind, and to reach a decision.

"Miss Innes," he said, "I am in a peculiar position; I understand your attitude, of course; but—do you think you are wise? Ever since you have have come here there have been hostile demonstrations against you and your family. I'm not a croaker, but—take a warning. Leave before anything occurs that will cause you a lifelong regret."

"I am willing to take the responsibility," I said coldly.

I think he gave me up then as a poor proposition. He asked to be shown where Arnold Armstrong's body had been found, and I took him there. He scrutinized the whole place carefully, examining the stairs and the lock. When he had taken a formal farewell I was confident of one thing. Dr. Walker would do anything he could to get me away from Sunnyside.

CHAPTER XXI.

Fourteen Elm Street.

It was Monday evening when we found the body of poor Thomas. Monday night had been uneventful; things were quiet at the house and the peculiar circumstances of the old man's death had been carefully kept from the servants. Rosie took charge of the dining room and pantry, in the absence of a butler, and, except for the warning of the Casanova doctor, everything breathed of peace.

Affairs at the Traders' bank were progressing slowly. The failure had hit small stock-holders very hard, the minister of the little Methodist chapel in Casanova among them. He had received as a legacy from an uncle a few shares of stock in the Traders' bank, and now his joy was turned to bitterness; he had to sacrifice everything he had in the world, and his feeling against Paul Armstrong, dead, as he was, must have been bitter in the extreme. He was asked to officiate at the simple services when the dead banker's body was interred in Casanova churchyard, but the good man providentially took cold, and a substitute was called in.

A few days after the services he called to see me, a kind-faced little man, in a very bad frock-coat and laundered tie. I think he was uncertain as to my connection with the Armstrong family, and dubious whether I considered Mr. Armstrong's taking away a matter for condolence or congratulation. He was not long in doubt.

I liked the little man. He had known Thomas well, and had promised to officiate at the services in the rickety African Zion church. He told me more of himself than he knew, and before he left I astonished him—and myself, I admit—by promising a new carpet for his church. He was much affected, and I gathered that he had yearned over his ragged chapel as a mother over a half-clothed child.

"You are laying up treasures, Miss Innes," he said brokenly, "where neither moth nor rust corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal."

I sent him home in the car, with a bunch of hothouse roses for his wife, and he was quite overwhelmed. As for me, I had a generous glow that was cheap at the price of a church carpet. I received less gratification—and less gratitude—when I presented the new silver communion set to St. Barnabas.

I had a great many things to think about in those days. I made a list of questions and possible answers, but I seemed only to be working around in a circle. I always ended where I began. The list was something like this:

Who had entered the house the night before the murder?

Thomas claimed it was Mr. Bailey, whom he had seen on the foot-path, and who owned the pearl cuff-link.

Why did Arnold Armstrong come back after he had left the house the night he was killed?

No answer. Was it on the mission Louise had mentioned?

Who admitted him?

Gertrude said she had locked the east entry. There was no key on the dead man or in the door. He must have been admitted from within.

Who had been locked in the clothes chute?

Some one unfamiliar with the house, evidently. Only two people missing from the household, Rosie and Gertrude. Rosie had been at the lodge. Therefore—but was it Gertrude? Might it not have been the mysterious intruder again?

Who had accosted Rosie on the drive?

Again—perhaps the nightly visitor. It seemed more likely some one who suspected a secret at the lodge. Was Louise under surveillance?

Who had passed Louise on the circular staircase?

Could it have been Thomas? The key to the east entry made this a possibility. But why was he there, if it were indeed he?

Who had made the hole in the trunk-room wall?

It was not vandalism. It had been done quietly, and with deliberate purpose. If I had only known how to read the purpose of that gaping aperture what I might have saved in anxiety and mental strain!

There was no answer, as yet, to this, or to the next questions.

Why did both she and Dr. Walker warn us away from the house?

Who was Lucien Wallace?

What did Thomas see in the shadows the night he died?

What was the meaning of the subtle change in Gertrude?

Was Jack Bailey an accomplice or a victim in the looting of the Traders' bank?

What all-powerful reason made Louise determine to marry Dr. Walker?

He Scrutinized the Whole Place Carefully.

The examiners were still working on the books of the Traders' bank, and it was probable that several weeks would elapse before everything was cleared up. The firm of expert accountants who had examined the books some two months before testified that every bond, every piece of valuable paper, was there at that time. It had been shortly after their examination that the president, who had been in bad health, had gone to California. Mr. Bailey was still ill at the Knickerbocker, and in this, as in other ways, Gertrude's conduct puzzled me. She seemed indifferent, refused to discuss matters pertaining to the bank, and never, to my knowledge, either wrote to him or went to see him. Gradually I came to the conclusion that Gertrude, with the rest of the world, believed her lover guilty, and—although I believed it myself, for that matter—I was irritated by her indifference. Girls in my day did not meekly accept the public's verdict as to the man they loved.

But presently something occurred that made me think that under Gertrude's surface calm there was a seething flood of emotions.

Tuesday morning the detective made a careful search of the grounds,

I Could See the Mortons' Big Country House.

but he found nothing. In the afternoon he disappeared, and it was late that night when he came home. He said he would have to go back to the city the following day, and arranged with Halsey and Alex to guard the house.

Liddy came to me on Wednesday morning with her black silk apron held up like a bag and her eyes big with virtuous wrath. It was the day of Thomas' funeral in the village, and Alex and I were in the conservatory cutting flowers for the old man's casket. Liddy is never so happy as when she is making herself wretched, and now her mouth drooped while her eyes were triumphant.

"I always said there were plenty of things going on here, right under our noses, that we couldn't see," she said, holding out her apron.

"I don't see with my nose," I remarked. "What have you got there?"

Liddy pushed aside a half dozen geranium pots, and in the space thus cleared she dumped the contents of her apron—a handful of tiny bits of paper. Alex had stepped back, but I saw him watching her curiously.

"Wait a moment, Liddy," I said. "You have been going through the library paper-basket again!"

Liddy was arranging her bits of paper with the skill of long practice and paid no attention.

"Did it ever occur to you," I went on, putting my hand over the scraps, "that when people tear up their correspondence it is for the express purpose of keeping it from being read?"

"If they wasn't ashamed of it they wouldn't take so much trouble, Miss Rachel," Liddy said oracularly. "More than that, with things happening every day, I consider it my duty. If you don't read and act on this, I shall give it to that Jamieson, and I'll venture he'll not go back to the city to-day."

That decided me. If the scraps had anything to do with the mystery ordinary conventions had no value. So Liddy arranged the scraps, like working out one of the puzzle-pictures children play with, and she did it with much the same eagerness. When it was finished she stepped aside while I read it.

"Wednesday night, nine o'clock. Bridge," I read aloud. Then, aware of Alex's stare, I turned on Liddy.

"Some one is to play bridge to-night at nine o'clock," I said. "Is that your business, or mine?"

Liddy was aggrieved. She was about to reply when I scooped up the pieces and left the conservatory.

"Now then," I said, when we got outside, "will you tell me why you choose to take Alex into your confidence? He's no fool. Do you suppose he thinks any one in this house is going to play bridge to-night at nine o'clock, by appointment! I suppose you have shown it in the kitchen, and instead of my being able to slip down to the bridge to-night quietly, and see who is there, the whole household will be going in a procession."

"Nobody knows it," Liddy said humbly. "I found it in the basket in Miss Gertrude's dressing room. Look at the back of the sheet." I turned over some of the scraps, and, sure enough, it was a blank deposit slip from the Traders' bank. So Gertrude was going to meet Jack Bailey that night by the bridge! And I had thought he was ill! It hardly seemed like the action of an innocent man—this avoidance of daylight, and of his fiancee's people. I decided to make certain, however, by going to the bridge that night.

After luncheon Mr. Jamieson suggested that I go with him to Richfield, and I consented.

"I am inclined to place more faith in Dr. Stewart's story," he said, "since I found that scrap in old Thomas' pocket. It bears out the statement that the woman with the child, and the woman who quarreled with Armstrong, are the same. It looks as if Thomas had stumbled on to some affair which was more or less discreditable to the dead man, and, with a certain loyalty to the family, had kept it to himself. Then, you see, your story about the woman at the card-room window begins to mean something. It is the nearest approach to anything tangible that we have had yet."

Warner took us to Richfield in the car. It was about 25 miles by railroad, but by taking a series of atrociously rough short cuts we got there very quickly. It was a pretty little town, on the river, and back on the hill I could see the Morton big country house, where Halsey and Gertrude had been staying until the night of the murder.

Elm street was almost the only street, and number 14 was easily found. It was a small white house, dilapidated without having gained anything picturesque, with a low window and a porch only a foot or so above the bit of a lawn. There was a baby-carriage in the path, and from a swing at the side came the sound of conflict. Three small children were disputing vociferously, and a faded young woman with a kindly face was trying to hush the clamor. When she saw us she untied her gingham apron and came around to the porch.

"Good afternoon," I said. Jamieson lifted his hat, without speaking. "I came to inquire about a child named Lucien Wallace."

"I am glad you have come," she said. "In spite of the other children, I think the little fellow is lonely. We thought perhaps his mother would be here to-day."

Mr. Jamieson stepped forward.

"You are Mrs. Tate?" I wondered how the detective knew.

"Yes, sir."

"Mrs. Tate, we want to make some inquiries. Perhaps in the house—"

"Come right in," she said hospitably. And soon we were in the little shabby parlor, exactly like a thousand of its prototypes. Mrs. Tate sat uneasily, her hands folded in her lap.

"How long has Lucien been here?" Mr. Jamieson asked.

"Since a week ago last Friday. His mother paid one week's board in advance, the other has not been paid."

"Was he ill when he came?"

"No, sir, not what you'd call sick. He was getting better of typhoid, she said, and he's picking up fine."

"Will you tell me his mother's name and address?"

"That's the trouble," the young woman said, knitting her brows. "She gave her name as Mrs. Wallace, and said she had no address. She was looking for a boarding house in town. She said she worked in a department store, and couldn't take care of the child properly, and he needed fresh air and milk. I had three children of my own, and one more didn't make much difference in the work, but—I wish she would pay this week's board."

"Did she say what store it was?"

"No, sir, but all the boy's clothes came from King's. He has far too fine clothes for the country."

There was a chorus of shouts and shrill yells from the front door, followed by the loud stamping of children's feet and a throaty "whoa, whoa!" Into the room came a tandem team of two chubby youngsters, a boy and a girl, harnessed with a clothes-line, and driven by a laughing boy of about seven, in tan overalls and brass buttons. The small driver caught my attention at once; he was a beautiful child, and, although he showed traces of recent severe illness, his skin had now the clear transparency of health.

"Whoa, Flinders," he shouted. "You're going to smash the trap."

Mr. Jamieson coaxed him over by holding out a lead pencil, striped blue and yellow.

"Now, then," he said, when the boy had taken the lead pencil and was testing its usefulness on the detective's cuff, "now then, I'll bet you don't know what your name is!"

"I do," said the boy. "Lucien Wallace."

"Great! And what's your mother's name?"

"Mother, of course. What's your mother's name?"

And he pointed to me! I am going to stop wearing black; it doubles a woman's age.

"And where did you live before you came here?" The detective was polite enough not to smile.

Shares Boston's Bean Fame

New York and Boston Products Differ Mostly as to Color of Cooked Vegetable.

There are beans and beans. Boston baked beans, of course, have come to be revered as one of the distinctive institutions of our country, their fame being international. It is an old saying that "you have to go away to find out what has happened at home," and it is entirely probable that few New Yorkers are aware of the fact that there are New York beans. A traveler discovered the bean representatives of the two cities on a bill of fare in a Philadelphia restaurant the other day. He was curious enough to ask the waitress what was the difference between the two.

She was plainly surprised at the question. "Why, Boston beans are brown," she explained, "and New York beans are white."

She could not explain, however, why white beans should have the New York label attached. But she volunteered the information that there were almost as many calls for New York beans as Boston, such requests coming mostly from persons who were from out of town and possibly had an idea that New York beans had a little more "class," a little more metropolitan flavor, as it were, than the far-famed Boston product.

French Women as Writers.

Three thousand blue stockings in France, exclaims a statistician, who is alarmed at his discovery. This is only a rude way of saying that that number of French women write. Fifteen hundred of them are novelists. 300 write school books, and 300 are poetesses. The remainder are miscellaneous authors. Among them are 360 journalists, of whom, however, only 20 write on other topics than fashions. Fifteen hundred women belong to the French Society of Authors and 60 to that of Dramatic Authors. The statistician's discovery does not seem a very alarming one. Three hundred poetesses, it is true, is rather a high figure, but only 1,500 lady novelists for a population of over 40 millions seems quite moderate.

PROBLEMS MANY YEARS OLD

Children of Today Puzzle Over Them Just as They Did a Thousand Years Ago.

When King Alfred the Great was reigning over England, a thousand years ago, school children pondered over problems in arithmetic much as our boys and girls do now.

"The swallow once invited the snail to dinner. He lived just one league (three English miles) from the spot, and the snail traveled at the rate of only one inch a day. How long would it be before he dined?"

"An old man met a child. 'Good-day, my son,' he said. 'May you live as long as you have lived, and as much more, and thrice as much as all this; and if God gives you one year in addition to the others, you will be a century old!' What was that boy's age?"—The Comrade.

A Liking for "Hamlet."

"Do you like Hamlet?" asked the hostess of her unlettered, if gushing, guest.

"Indeed I do," was the reply. "I am excessively fond of it, but I always prefer a savory to a sweet one."

There was a momentary confusion, and then the hostess realized that the admiration of the guest was of a culinary, not literary, character.

"I gave her ham with an omelette for breakfast next morning," said the hostess, when telling the story.—Scraps.

Even the Children.

Ex-Governor Pennypacker, condemning in his witty way the American divorce evil, told, at a Philadelphia luncheon, an appropriate story.

"Even our children," he said, "are becoming infected. A Kensington school teacher, examining a little girl in grammar, said:

"'What is the future of "I love?"'

"'A divorce,' the child answered promptly."

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Need Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brookfield, Mo.—"Two years ago I was unable to do any kind of work and only weighed 118 pounds. My trouble dates back to the time that woman may expect nature to bring on them the Change of Life. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me feel much better, and I have continued its use. I am very grateful to you for the good health I am now enjoying."—Mrs. Sarah Lousignont, 414 S. Livingston Street, Brookfield, Mo.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

WESTERN CANADA'S 1910 CROPS

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Wheat Yield in Many Districts Will Be From 25 to 35 Bushels Per Acre

Land sales and homestead entries increasing. No cessation in numbers going from United States. Wonderful opportunities remain for those who intend making Canada their home. New districts being opened up for settlement. Many farmers will net, this year, $10 to $15 per acre from their wheat crop. All the advantages of old settled countries are there. Good schools, churches, splendid markets, excellent railway facilities. See the grain exhibit at the different State and some of the County fairs.

Letters similar to the following are received every day, testifying to satisfactory conditions; other districts are as favorably spoken of:

THEY SENT FOR THEIR SON.
Maidstone, Sask., Canada, Aug. 5th, 1910.
"My parents came here from Cedar Falls, Iowa, four years ago, and were so well pleased with this country they sent to Coeur d'Alene for me. I have taken up a homestead near them, and am perfectly satisfied to stop here." Leonard Douglas.

WANTS SETTLER'S RATE FOR HIS STOCK.
Stettler, Alberta, July 31st, 1910.
"Well I got up here from Forest City, Iowa, last Spring in good shape with the stock and everything. Now, I have got two boys back in Iowa yet, and I am going back there now soon to get them and another car up here this fall. What I would like to know is, if there is any chance to get a cheap rate back again, and when we return to Canada I will call at your office for our certificates."
Yours truly, H. A. Wik.

WILL MAKE HIS HOME IN CANADA.
Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 1st, 1910.
"I am going to Canada a week from today and intend to make my home there. My husband has been there six weeks and is well pleased with the country; so he wants me to come as soon as possible. He filed on a claim near Landis, Sask., and by his description of it it must be a pretty place. My brother-in-law, Mr. Frank J. Zimmer, lives there and it was through him that we decided to locate in Canada."
Yours truly,
Mrs. Richard Henry Ebinger.

Taylors Falls, Minn., Aug. 7, 1910.
"I shall go to Camrose this Fall with my cattle and household goods. I got a poor crop here this year and my brother-in-law, Axel Nordstrom in Camrose, wants me to come there. He formerly lived in Wilton, North Dakota. I am going to buy or take homestead when I get there, but I do not want to travel two times there, for I take my brother-in-law's word about the country, and want to get your low rate."
Yours truly
Peter A. Nelson.

WANTS TO RETURN TO CANADA.
Vesta, Minn., July 24th, 1910
"I went to Canada nine years ago and took up a quarter section of railroad land and a homestead, but my boys have never taken up any land yet. I still hold the railroad land. I had to come back to the states on account of my health. Please let me know at once if I can get the cheap rates to Ponoka, Alberta."
Yours truly,
Geo. Paskawitz,
Vesta, Minn.

ELECTION RESULTS IN RED LAKE COUNTY

Richardson, Fellman, Latendresse, Kindseth, are Republican Nominees.

Kindseth and Ives Made Close Run But Other Majorities Are Larger.

The result of the primary election in Red Lake county is that Ira C. Richardson has secured the Republican nomination for judge of probate, Charles J. Fellman is the nominee for sheriff, A. A. Latendresse for county auditor, G. G. Kindseth for treasurer.

The race between Ives and Kindseth for the nomination for treasurer was close. The returns so far received indicate that Kindseth has the nomination by a majority of about one hundred. The majorities of the other successful candidates are larger.

In the first commissioner district Gust Naplin defeated C. A. Lindquist for the Republican nomination by fourteen votes.

Tabulated returns, so far as they have been received at the hour of going to press, may be found on this page.

Other Returns.

O'Neill is nominated for representative by a large majority.

The big election sensation in Minnesota is the defeat of Congressman Tawney by Sidney M. Anderson, a young attorney almost unknown until he got into the race against the big congressman.

Stevens is the Republican senatorial nominee in Polk county by a majority of about 150 votes. County option almost got him.

BISHOP CORBETT HERE

Confirmation of Large Class at St. Joseph's Church This Afternoon.

The Right Rev. Bishop Timothy Corbett came over from Crookston this morning to officiate at the confirmation of a large class at St. Joseph's church today. There were more than three hundred young people in the class.

The ceremonies commenced at 2 o'clock and were concluded in time to allow the bishop to return to Crookston on the 5 o'clock train this afternoon. A large number of people gathered at the church today to greet the new bishop.

Power--Collins.

Miss Sadie M. Power, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Power of Wylie, and Mr. David Collins of Warroad were married Wednesday, Sept. 21. The wedding occurred in this city at St. Mary's church at 10 o'clock, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Fr. Conrad. It was a quiet affair, only a few relatives and friends being present for the happy occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Collins will reside at Warroad where Mr. Collins is engaged in business.

JUST A WORD OR TWO

The Thief River Falls papers have proven so conclusively that small counties can be run cheaper than large ones that it is suggested that as a county division argument they might start an agitation for cutting off a slice of their territory and making St. Hilaire a county seat in the election two years hence and then they might agree to build a Soo railroad across the reservation and set a part of that territory off and have a new county, so that everybody can have small counties and low taxes.

The Gazette is accused of dealing in generalities in its anti-county division arguments. They say that we don't give facts. It might be said by way of retaliation that the Thief River agitators deal in promises.

They promise lower taxes. Do they know that taxes would be lower? Perhaps they don't want to tell what they know.

They promise that the city will give a building for court house purpose. Do they know that the city cannot give its property away and that a single tax payer could stop such proceedings. Who is going to give the county a good deed to the property? Of course that does not matter for it it is only a temporary arrangement and a new court house would be built in the course of a few years.

They say that the Gazette claims that the small counties of the state have heavy taxes. The Gazette has not made that claim. On the contrary it has been said that it is true that under certain circumstances small counties can be run more economically than large ones. The Gazette has said that if all of Red Lake county's people and wealth were crowded into half its territory, that would make a very prosperous county. But we can't agree that to cut the county in two and set up a separate county government means low taxes.

They make comparison with southern Minnesota counties, but the Gazette maintains that there is no fair comparison. It is easy enough to get figures but the figures used are not applicable to the situation. Even if we had the people and the wealth these counties would have the advantage over us.

Those are old counties with fine highways that require little expenditure to keep in repair. They have good public buildings that are paid for. They have little occasion to raise money for other purposes than the expenses of county government.

Red Lake county recently divorced from Polk and the proposed new county would be at the starting of the work that these old counties have completed—building good highways, roads that cost money, graveled, graded and drained as are the highways of southern Minnesota counties and county buildings to be erected and paid for.

Small expense for maintenance of county government; small salaries and no clerk hire; small court expenses because there will be less mileage for jurymen—these are the arguments used to show so conclusively that it isn't going to take much money to run the proposed new county.

Well, is that all?

It is true that salraies won't be quite so high, but those salares will have to be paid by fewer tax payers. There is one item of expense that will alone practically offset this reduction in salaries. The cost of maintaining a county jail at Thief River Falls, not counting the cost of constructing the jail building, will be just about as expensive for the people of the smaller territory as that item of expense now is for the whole territory. It is a fact that cannot be disputed, for there is a reason for the condition, that nearly all of the occupants of the county jail came from Thief River Falls. That's not knocking the town. It's a good, thriving town, a railroad town, a lumber manufacturing town. Such conditions cannot help producing a floating population and in consequence many arrests for petty offenses. It is a condition which indicates that the jail in the new county would do just about as big a business and would be about as expensive a luxury as Red Lake county's present retaining station—and that expense would have to be borne by the limited new county.

Court expenses would be a little lighter. There wouldn't be quite so much mileage to pay, but there would be just as many court officers, just as many jurors and all of that expense would have to be paid by the small county.

Don't you think that the Thief River papers are trying to make that reduction in salaries and mileage expense count for too much?

Isn't it as plain as the nose on your face, Mr. Farmer, that the expenses of county government, not to count the other expenses in the proposed new county, would be almost as much as for the whole of Red Lake county?

But that is not all.

The new county will be a heavy borrower. If the territory is set off the new county will have to pay reduced Red Lake its share of the debts. There is no dispute about that. The Thief River papers don't like to talk about it. But it is a debt that cannot be avoided. It must be assumed at once. Then on top of that the new county will have to purchase books, records and files at an expense of several thousand dollars and transcribe the records to the new county at an enormous expense. This expense ADDED TO the share of debts that must be paid will make the new county's debt, as soon as that county comes into existence, almost as great as Red Lake county's present indebtedness. And you won't have a thing to show for it except a smaller county with less wealth and fewer people to pay the taxes.

The big debt means a big interest fund—thousands of dollars to be paid in interest each year. It takes tax money to pay interest—and there won't be so many to pay it.

The small new county coming into existence with a big debt tacked onto it wont have the best credit in the world. Its bonds won't sell at a premium. No doubt they will bear a stiff rate of interest. That will have its effect on the taxes. Perhaps the county orders won't pass at par. This is quite probable and that would mean a little more interest to be paid.

If you don't raise money by taxation to pay off some of that big debt that must be assumed, there will be more interest after awhile, when in the course of a few years county buildings are erected.

Now this is the situation:—If they do not tax you not only to pay the interest but to slice off a good sized piece of principal each year you will have a debt when the time arrives to build a court house, jail and other buildings that will be at least as large as Red Lake county's present indebtedness. Here are the items:

The new county's share of Red Lake county's present indebtedness. The new county can't be created without assuming this indebtedness.

The cost of transcribing the records. That is a debt that will have to be assumed at once.

The building of county buildings in the course of a few years.

That is expense that you can't get away from, isn't it?

Of course salaries won't be quite so big and there won't be quite so much milage expense and you wont have to pay 10 cents for a draft when you pay your taxes—but don't you think that the Thief River papers are talking about little things and omitting the big things? That is their game, of course.

Are you sure, Mr. Farmer, of "Pennington county," that you want to secede?

Don't you think that the Gazette's suggestion that you "get onto the job and do some long thinking right away quick" is worth considering after all?

THE GAZETTE'S BIG VOTING CONTEST

Many Valuable Prizes Given to Those Who Will Make a Little Effort.

The Prizes Yours for a Little Work and They are Worth Working For.

As announced elsewhere in this issue, the Gazette is starting a big voting contest, the purpose of which, of course, is to advertise the paper and add names to the subscription list.

The Gazette now has a large and growing list of subscribers and the contest is not put on because it is necessary to pull off a stunt like this to build up the paper's circulation. It is simply a little advertising scheme to liven things up a little during the fall and add some names to the subscription list, and to accomplish that result the Gazette will give prizes worth several hundred dollars. There'll be a fine piano and several other valuable prizes and all that you have to do to get into the race is to clip the coupons from the paper and send or mail them to this office. Votes will be given on subscriptions later, but all you need to do to get a good start now is to clip the coupons that are in the paper and vote them.

MEETINGS HELD HERE

Meeting of Adams Presbytery and Sunday School Institute This Week.

Two important meetings were held at the Presbyterian church this week, on Tuesday the Sunday School Institute and on Wednesday the fall meeting of Adams Presytery.

The institute was opened Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock by the chairman, Rev. T. J. Barackman of Blackduck. After devotional services conducted by Dr. Verkyle of Wisconsin, Rev. L. T. Hughes welcomed the guests and Rev. Barackman responded. During the morning and afternoon sessions there were instructive papers and discussions on the problems of Sunday School work. In the evening Dr. Verkyle delivered a forceful address.

The work of the meeting of Adams Presbytery was completed yesterday, though when the meeting opened it was expected that sessions would be held today. Last evening there was a public meeting at which the retiring moderator of the presbytery, Rev. J. C. Mapson of Tenstrike, gave a sermon and Rev. T. J. Barackman of Blackduck gave an address.

The various churches of the presbytery were represented as follows: Bethel, Mrs. Geddes, Mr. Hanna; Stephen, Rev. Noyes; St. Vincent, Rev. Sweet; Orleans, Rev. Fernies; Crookston, Mrs. M. F. Berdseye, Mrs. C. E. Potts; Blackduck, Rev. T. J. Barackson; Warroad, Rev. Sidebotham, Mr. Dousland; Tenstrike, Rev. J. C. Mapson; Red Lake Falls, Rev. and Mrs. L. T. Hughes, Mrs. Geo. F. Hennings, Miss Zaiser.

Rev. Sidebothem of Warroad is the newly elected moderator.

Orille Lemieux, the young daughter of Dennis Lemieux, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at a Crookston hospital about ten days ago, was able to return to her home here this week. The little patient is getting along very satisfactorily and in the course of a few days will have completely recovered.

JAMES GRAY.

Democratic nominee for governor of Minnesota. Mr. Gray served one term as mayor of Minneapolis.

James Gray is forty-eight years old. He was born in Scotland in 1862 and came to America with his parents when four years old, the Grays settling in Iowa, then in Wisconsin. In 1880 Mr. Gray came to Minnesota. He graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1885 and at once entered newspaper work.

Mr. Gray worked on the Minneapolis Tribune and the old Minneapolis Times and it was while city editor of the latter paper in 1898 that he was nominated for mayor of Minneapolis by the Democrats and elected.

Leaving office Mr. Gray resumed newspaper work, first on the Minneapolis Tribune, then on the Minneapolis Journal. He resigned from the Journal on accepting the Democratic nomination for governor.

A hunting party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Healy, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Buse and Miss Rose Harren went to Thief Lake and spent two or three days in pursuit of game birds. They had a jolly good time and got some birds.

Grandpa Healy, who has been at Osakis all summer, returned this week and will spend the winter here at the Healy home.

JAMES GRAY FOR GOVERNOR

A Man of Independence and Ability.—Vigorous Campaign Until Election.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Sept. 20—When the Democrats found they could not get John Lind they did the next best thing and nominated James A. Gray of Minneapolis. Indeed I am not at all sure that they did not do the first best thing. An increasing number of people these times are objecting to the fashion both parties have got into in this state of selecting a man for office whom they think will get votes because of his nationality. While no one questions either John Lind's strength apart from that, or the hold he has on the respects of all classes of people, it would be idle to deny that the one thing more than another which was thought to make him available this time was the fact that he is a Swede and would get votes that otherwise would go to Eberhart because he also is a Swede.

A Campaign Against Corporation Ownership of Politics.

There were people nevertheless who didn't like this. Mr. Lind himself saw the point and emphasized in his speech at the meeting of the Democratic State Central committee. Indeed the party that can not win on its merits without appealing to nationality prejudice does not deserve to win at all. If the Deemocrats win with Mr. Gray—and they ought to both because Mr. Grey is the best man, National, Political, Personal and Other Matters in Brief Form for All Classes of Readers.

Washington.

Frank M. Couden, cashier in the office of the surveyor of customs at Cincinnati, whose name was prominently mentioned in the Warriner embezzlement scandal in the Big Four railroad, was discharged from the government service.

If Governor Hughes is to be made chief justice of the supreme court of the United States he will be promoted from an associate justiceship. Reports that the nomination of the governor as an associate justice would be withdrawn and his name sent to the senate as chief justice have been put to rest by arrangements that the New York executive has been making to take up his duties on the bench the second Monday in October.

Twenty national bank examiners, about one-fifth of the force employed by the government, were transferred to new fields by an order from Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency. The object of the changes, it was said at the treasury department, is to throw the examiners into fresh fields where personal acquaintance or possibility of influence is lacking.

Prince Tsai Tsu, head of the Chinese naval establishment, will be given a rousing reception at San Francisco upon his arrival there on the steamer Manchuria on September 16. The navy department ordered Rear Admiral T. S. Phelps and Lieutenant Commander I. V. Gilles to meet the Chinese prince and his suite and to extend to them the usual courtesies that are given foreign potentates.

Foreign.

A bull fight under novel conditions took place in Geneva. As the police would not allow the wounding or killing of the animals, the toreadors used glue to stick their darts, and the chief toreador used a wooden dagger.

A Berlin householder brought an action against a tenant for the disturbance caused by the latter permitting his cook to whistle and sing while at work. The magistrate decided that it is legal for servants to whistle in the kitchen.

During the dinner at Berlin Emperor William toasted King George and afterward detained Lord Roberts for several hours in animated conversation.

At Paris, George Chavez, the French aviator, broke the world's record for height, rising in a monoplane 8,792 feet. The best previous record was made by Leon Morane, whose mark was 8,471 feet, made on September 3 at Deauville. Chavez flight was made at Issy and occupied forty-one minutes.

The ponderous and impressive wheels of English justice will begin to grind Monday in the now internationally famous Crippen case, when Dr. Harvey Hawley Crippen and his pretty young stenographer, Ethel Leneve, will be arraigned, to plead to the accusation of direct implication in the murder of Crippen's wife, who was Belle Elmore, an American music hall singer.

WILKIN'S STATUE

HEROIC FIGURE IN BRONZE UNVEILED AT STATE HOUSE TO HONOR OF MINN. SOLDIER.

COLONEL OF 9TH MINN.

Presentation to State by Judge Lorin Cray and Acceptance Speech by Governor Eberhart.

St. Paul.—The heroic bronze statue of Colonel Alexander Wilkin, the ranking officer of Minnesotans killed during the Civil war, stands in its niche in the state hall of fame at the capitol. The formal ceremonies of dedication, and the impressive raising of the draped flags that bared the likeness to the throng paying homage to the hero, were held in the representative chamber and in the hall near the chamber door, where the statue has been placed.

The impressive unveiling of the statue revealed the image of heroic size of a volunteer who began service in the South as captain of Company A, First Minnesota regiment, and answered to the final roll call as colonel of the Ninth. The tablet at the base briefly states: "Alexander Wilkin, Colonel of Ninth Minn. Vol. Inft., Killed in Battle at Tupelo, Miss., July 14, 1864."

The appropriation for the image was made at the last session of the legislature at the request of the veterans of the Ninth, who conducted the ceremonies dedicating it to the state.

Colonel Wilkin was born in New York, coming to this state, where he joined the Union forces as captain of the First, serving as captain, major and lieutenant colonel of the Second, after service in the Mexican war as captain.

The drawing of the cord that exposed the statue to view was performed by Mrs. George E. Lennon, daughter of J. H. Abbett of the Ninth, and was followed by the sound of "taps" by C. E. Casler of the Sons of Veterans, Camp No. 1. Previous to the formal presentation of the statue an appropriate program was held in the house chamber before an audience of old soldiers of the Ninth and their friends that packed the lower floor and front sides of the gallery to the last seat. The invocation was given by the Rev. Leland P. Smith, following which a vocal selection was given by the Harry E. George quartet; a biographical sketch was read by C. F. McDonald, while a poem, "The Gallant Wilkin," by H. L. Gordon, was read by Miss Zadia McDonald. L. F. Hubbard followed with an address, when the presentation of the statue to the state by Judge Lorin followed with a speech of acceptance.

The commission which has had charge of the arrangement is as follows: C. F. McDonald, Lorin Cray, William B. Dean, K. Wakefield and J. H. Abbett.

SPITE HALTS WORK.

Angry Workman Disables Engine, Stopping Track Laying.

Bemidji.—The work of laying rails on the Soo grade into Bemidji from the east was temporarily stopped, because of the spite work of one man, who so disabled the track-laying engine that the machine could not again be operated until repairs were made. The rails are less than a mile from the Mississippi river bridge in the center of the city.

The work of laying the steel has progressed rapidly. When the rails had been laid to a short distance from the M. & I. crossing in East Bemidji the crew was sent back a short distance to lay sidetrack rails. This action is supposed to have caused ire on the part of a workman, who disabled the engine.

The placing of the span over the Mississippi river at this place will be rushed, and the laying of the steel will proceed towards Plummer.

A crew stringing telegraph wires has reached the camp of the tracklayers.

Shriners to Build at Duluth.

Duluth.—Aad Temple, Mystic Shriners, will build a home costing approximately $100,000 and a committee from the temple is now considering the purchase of a site, three or four locations being under consideration. There are almost 1,000 Shriners in Duluth and they feel that they should branch out and establish their own temple, relieving the crowded condition of the Masonic Temple, which now houses all of the Masonic orders in the city.

Finds Skeletons in Cave.

Duluth. — Charles W. Turner, of St. Paul, of the Booth Fisheries Co., arrived from Isle Royal and reports the discovery of the bones of two men in a cave on Siskiwit bay. The skull of one man was fractured. The discovery was made by two Duluth girls, one of whom is a trained nurse, says the fractured skull evidently points to murder. Two fishermen mysteriously disappeared between Washington and Siskiwit Harbor nine years ago. The local officials have begun an investigation.

Confesses to Murder.

Cloquet.—The body of Joseph Koski was found in the St. Louis river, and it was supposed he was accidentally drowned while fishing. A bruise on the head of Koski aroused suspicion, and Napoleon Caza, his companion, was arrested. Caza made a written confession that he struck Koski with an oar end then threw him into the river. Caza claims Koski drew a knife on him during a quarrel. The case will come before the grand jury next month.

FIND MORE RICH ORE.

International Harvester Company Said to Be Latest Lucky One.

Brainerd.—There has been filed the plat of the new town of Ironton, covering the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 11-46-29, lying adjacent to the Mattson forty in section 10, which has been taken over by the Rogers, Brown Ore company end on which a concrete shaft is to be sunk by the New York Foundation company.

It is reported that the International Harvester company, holding an option for a lease on the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 11-46-29, having three drills at work locating the extent of the ore body, has encountered within the last few days a body of rich Bessemer ore, exceeding in quality anything yet found on the Cuyuna, while on the Thomas Feigh land in section 10-46-29, held under lease by the C. M. Hill Lumber company, drilling exploration for more than a year have failed to disclose the limits of the ore. It is claimed by parties from Duluth that this property is soon to pass to one of the large iron and steel interests.

The Soo railway is extending its lines toward these ore deposits, and soon will have passenger and freight depots at Ironton and Crosby, while the surveys will be extended southwesterly toward the Mississippi to reach the important developments in that direction. The Soo line has reach Deerwood where a passenger depot is about to be built, and it is reported the road will be extended from there along the south range to Brainerd to obtain its share of ore transportation in competition with the Northern Pacific railway.

HUNTERS TAKE FIELD.

Many Twin City and Duluth Nimrods Expected in Crookston.

Crookston.—Regardless of every other crop the crop of prairie chickens in this section this year is without doubt the largest in many years. The spring was early, and the birds are all extraordinarily large, with the exception of second hatches, of which there are many. The grain was so short this year that the cover in the stubble fields will be poor, and the hunting will be in the grass and wherever cover is afforded.

Many of the hunters have left the city for their favorite preserves and every available livery rig in the city has been hired for the opening days. Within a couple of miles of the city there are scores of coveys.

Many hunters have arrived from St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, taking the branch line trains out to Stephen, Warren, Middle River, Fosston and other points which they particularly favor, and they probably will have the finest sport in years. Bird dogs are at a premium because of the good hunting prospects, and are bringing big prices where they can be secured at all.

Game Warden Munch and other wardens of this section now have their scouts so well organized that law violators are rare, as, in addition to being costly, it is fast coming to be looked upon as disgraceful to join the sooners and take advantage of fair sportsmen.

ANNAPOLIS SEEKS RECRUITS.

Eleven Candidates to the Naval Academy in Minnesota:

Washington, D. C. — Senators and representatives will be called upon by the navy department to nominate about 500 candidates for the naval academy before next spring. There are about 450 vacancies existing or in prospect at the academy. According to reports which have reached the navy department, out of the total of 583 candidates who have taken the examination for next year's class, only 199 have passed. This percentage of those who qualified is unusually small and a frantic appeal was sent out by Rear Admiral R. F. Nicholson, chief of the bureau of navigation, to the senators and members of the house, asking them to name competent young men who are ambitious to shine in history as naval heroes.

By his circular letter Admiral Nicholson informed the Minnesota senators that they will have two vacancies to fill by graduation and the Minnesota members of the house that six vacancies already exist and three more will be created by graduation.

FIVE SAWMILLS SHUT DOWN.

Low Water at Cloquet Makes 1,000 Men Temporarily Idle.

Duluth.—The five sawmills at Cloquet are shut down for the second time this season, on account of the low stage of water in the St. Louis river, and 1,000 men are temporarily idle.

The mills will resume operation again as soon as rains improve the conditions for driving logs. Millions of feet of logs are high and dry on the banks of the river.

SENT BULLET INTO HEART.

Floodwood, Minn., Resident Found Dead in His Bed.

Duluth.—Frank S. Terrill of Floodwood was found dead in his bed. He drilled his heart with a 44 Colt revolver. Mr. Terrill was 43 years old, and the only reason that can be assumed for his action is that he has suffered much from dyspepsia. He was unmarried and his mother and two sisters reside in Minneapolis.

CLOQUET ANGLER DROWNED.

Companion Says Man Stayed to Fish a While Longer.

Duluth.—The body of Joseph Koops of Cloquet was found in the St. Louis river near the Northern Lumber company's mills. He went fishing on Saturday with another man. The latter returned and explained the absence of Koops by saying that he had remained to fish a while longer. Koops is survived by a family.

WORK OF EXPERT

PATHOLOGIST OF LONDON UNIVERSITY TESTIFIED IN CRIPPEN CASE.

CRIPPEN KEEPING COOL

States That Body Was Severed by Party Having Skill in Work—Could Not Determine Sex of Victim from Remains.

London, Sept. 14.—Testifying, at the resumption today of the Crippen murder trial, Prof. Augustus J. Pepper, pathologist of the university of London, said his examination had convinced him that the human parts found in the cellar of the Hilldrop Crescent home were severed by a hand skilled in surgery and directed by a mind that possessed real knowledge of anatomy.

The evidence of the medical experts has been awaited with eagerness and the famous little courtroom in Bow street was crowded. The prisoners in the dock presented contrasting appearances.

Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, who is charged as the principal in the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore, a American actress, was seemingly as cool and collected as ever. He did not miss a word of the testimony and eagerly whispered to his solicitor, Arthur Newton, whenever he thought he had detected a point in his favor. On the other hand, Ethel Clara Leneve, accused as an accessory after fact, was wan and pale and was plainly in mental and physical distress. She was attended in the court room by a wardress.

Professor Pepper was the first witness called by the prosecution. At considerable length he described an examination which he made of the parts and set forth his conclusions. The witness said that he had identified pieces of flesh as belonging to various parts of the body except the head, hands, forearms, feet and legs below the knees. He could only say that the members found were undoubtedly from a human body. No bones were discovered, nor was there any trace of the genital organs.

Under cross-examination Professor Pepper admitted that he had been unable to establish the sex to the victim.

Counting Returns Slowly.

New York, Sept. 14.—The leaders in the republican party in scanning the returns of the New York primaries held yesterday, found the situation between the "old guard" and the Roosevelt adherents was unchanged today.

Neither side appeared to have gained any advantage in the primaries, the Roosevelt forces carrying every district in New York county where there was practically no opposition. In Kings county State Chairman Woodruff won nineteen out of twenty-three districts. The "old guard" now asserts it will go to Saratoga with 109 out of 142 delegates from Kings county while Llyod C. Griscom, chief lieutenant of Roosevelt, figures they have 233 out of 264 delegates from the greater city of the state convention. There were no changes brought about by the democratic primaries.

Indian Agent Under Bonds.

Cass Lake, Minn., Sept. 14.—James Davis of Duluth, government agent in the Indian country, became intoxicated Saturday afternoon after the continuance of his other case for assault and battery, and threatened Attorney Argall, for the state. He was arrested at Bemidji last night and brought here by a deputy sheriff. Today he pleaded guilty in Justice Ives' court and was ordered to furnish a $300 peace bond, which he has not been able to furnish yet and is still in charge of a deputy sheriff.

The people are glad that after months of suspense the status of Indian agents is being established in the state courts.

Too Many Luxuries.

Washington, Sept. 14.— Statements that western bankers were loaning money too freely for luxuries, particularly automobiles, has led to the gathering of some statistics in Texas. The bankers there estimate the value of all automobiles in the state at $45,000,000, which is more than half the combined capital of all the state banks.

They also estimate the annual depreciation for which there is no remedy, at $15,000,000, or four times the annual fire losses of the state.

One Dead in Mine Explosion.

Linton, Ind., Sept. 14.—One dead, one fatally injured and five are seriously hurt as the result of a gas explosion caused by a miner's defective lamp in the Vandalia mine No. 10, nine miles from here, today.

There were 300 men at work but they had been changed to another part of the mine this morning and this fact alone probably prevented a fearful disaster.

Makes No Comment.

New York, Sept. 13.—Theodore Roosevelt was up bright and early today from Oyster Bay to pay his first visit to his editorial offices since his return from his western trip, was no more inclined than last night to comment for publication on the result of the Maine election. When asked to express himself on the subject the colonel said: "Nothing to say."

Superintendent Is Sentenced.

New York, Sept. 14.—Ernest W. Gerhracht, former superintendent of the Williamsburg refinery of the American Sugar Refining Co., who, with Charles R. Heike, former secretary and treasurer of the company was convicted last spring of conspiracy to defraud the government by underweighing sugar, was today sentenced to two years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta and fined $5,000 by Judge Martin in the United States court.

After imposing sentence, Judge Martin granted a stay on appeal and fixed the bail at $25,000.

Stokes Wins in New Jersey.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 14.—The returns of yesterday's primaries in New Jersey indicate that former Gov. Edward C. Stokes won over former Gov. Franklyn Murphy in the contest for the republican endorsement for United States senator. Friends of Woodrow, president of Princeton university, claim that he will have 1,000 to 1,400 delegates in tomorrow's democratic state convention, and that he will be the party's choice for governor. Vivian M. Lewis ran ahead in nearly every district and undoubtedly will be the republican candidate for governor.

SENATOR FLINT IS ABROAD

BALLINGER COMMITTEE UNABLE TO MAKE A REPORT.

Republicans Fail to Attend and There Is No Quorum—Not Known When Report Will Be Made.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—A meeting of republican members of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, which was set for today by Chairman Knute Nelson, was delayed by the failure of Nelson to arrive at the appointed hour, 10 o'clock. It was said that the train on which he was expected to arrive, was late, but that he would be here today and call the meeting to order.

As was expected, the democratic members and Madison of Kansas, insurgent republican, who on Friday made public their findings which condemned the official acts of Secretary Ballinger, failed to attend. All the republican members with the exception of Senators Nelson and Flint were here. Senator Flint is not expected to return from a trip abroad for some time. His absence will result in no quorum being maintained.

However, it was reported that Senator Nelson has a letter from Senator Flint, authorizing Senator Nelson to cast Flint's vote with the majority of the republicans. If this is done the action on the question as to whether the republican findings in the controversy shall be made public now, may be expected. The republican members were non-committal regarding this phase of the dispute.

After keeping his colleagues waiting several hours, Senator Nelson arrived and called the republicans to order.

OPEN MORE LAND.

Commissioner Is Visiting South Dakota Reservations.

Washington, Sept. 13.—Robt. G. Valentine, commissioner of Indian affairs, left last night for Chicago and thence will proceed to Yankton to visit the various Indian reservations in South Dakota. This visit of Commissioner Valentine to the South Dakota Indian reservation this year has a deeper significance than usually attaches to the annual tour of the commissioner of Indian affairs to the habitat of the Indian.

Just at present a commission is engaged in appraising Indian lands upon the Rosebud and Pine-Ridge reservations, looking to the opening of the remaining unallotted lands in these reservations to white settlement. There are several hundreds of thousands of such broad acres in each of these reservations, which will soon pass into the possession of white settlers. To ascertain how this work is progressing is the chief object of Commissioner Valentine's visit.

He will also look into various other matters of interest to the Indians upon the Crow Creek, Cheyenne, Yankton, Standing Rock and Lower Brule reservations before returning to Washington.

Elects Democratic Governor.

Portland, Me., Sept. 13.—The democrats of Maine had difficulty today in contemplating the magnitude of their victory yesterday in the struggle with the republicans.

With two score of little obscure forest towns and island plantations to hear from, additional revised returns made early give Col. Fred W. Plaisted, democrat, 72,711 votes for governor and Bert M. Fernald of Portland, republican, 64,090. Plaisted's total plurality is estimated to be 8,500.

Revised returns show the election of Asher C. Hinds, republican, in the first district by 200; of Daniel J. McGillicudy, democrat, in the second by 3,000; of Samuel W. Gould, democrat, in the third, by 2,200; and of Frank S. Guernsey, republican, in the fourth by 300.

While the election of Colonel Plaisted and two democratic congressmen seemed a great feat, interest today is centered in the make-up of the legislature, which has decidedly changed complexion. With 139 senatorial and representative districts heard from out of a total of 182, the democrats already have 88 in the joint convention with 92 to control.

Aged Couple Drink Laudnum.

Munice, Ind., Sept. 13.—Jesse Carpenter, a violin maker, and his wife committed suicide by drinking laudnum last night, because, according to a note they left, their poverty was too painful to bear. Their young son found them in bed, just before they died.

Carpenter was 65 years old and his wife 51. In their bedroom was found a note which read: "Ma and I are both tired of this mortal life. No one will give us a helping hand and if I must die of starvation let it come. Farewell, friend and foe."

Shot in Target Practice.

Wishek, N. D., Sept. 13.—During a target practice, last Saturday evening, Wishek Pratt, 11-year-old son of Postmaster Pratt, was accidentally shot in the stomach and while the injury was not thought to be serious at the time the victim died from the effects on Sunday morning.

Countess Robbed of Jewels.

Winnipeg, Sept. 14.—The Countess of Antrim was robbed of her jewels, valued at several thousand dollars, here last night. This is one of many sneak robberies which have occurred on trains and in the railway hotels of western Canada lately.

Killed by Quart of Whisky.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 13.—To win a bet with a fellow-boarder, John Lutzesch drank a quart of whisky on Wednesday night. He died almost immediately thereafter.

Lutzesch dropped dead in the rear yard of his boarding house, 351 Seventh street. The body was not found until Thursday morning.

After having gulped down the liquor, Lutzesch arose and stumbled out into the backyard. His friends did not notice his long absence and broke up the party at night without being aware that anything had happened to their companion.

May Not Build Big Ditch.

Grafton, N. D., Sept. 13.—Another big drainage project in the Red River valley is threatened with legal obstructions, action having been commenced to stop the construction of the so-called by-county drain in Walsh and Pembina counties. This drain will cost approximately $40,000. The action was started by citizens of Pembina county who contend that there were certain irregularities in connection with the proceedings of the board that nullified their action in leting the contract. The matter comes before Judge Kneeshaw for a hearing.

J. J. HILL IS IRATE

EMPIRE BUILDER GIVES OUT SCATHING INTERVIEW ON BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

CONSERVE COMMONSENSE

Ridicules Fear of a Business Panic and Likens Certain Element of Business Men to a Flock of Sheep.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 12.—James J. Hill, the "empire builder," has come out strongly for confidence, and as strongly in condemnation of those who are afraid to invest capital in business enterprises in the country at the present time, saying there are no real reasons for such fear.

In an interview given out today he speaks with characteristic phrase and vigor on business conditions, the "business paralysis" as he calls it, and, in high dudgeon at them, describes the behavior of men who have turned pessimists without justification, likening it to the foolish behavior of a flock of sheep.

"The big National Conservation congress which has just closed its very interesting sessions here," said Mr. Hill, talked about conserving water and conserving land, about conserving coal and conserving iron; but nobody said a word about conserving common sense. A senseless lack of confidence makes men afraid to engage in new enterprises. And why a lack of confidence? I'll tell you. Some man, somewhere, has grown timid over something or other and has cried 'boo' to his neighbor. His neighbor probably jumped, and the next fellow took fright without knowing why he was frightened. And so on.

"It's just like a flock of sheep. It one starts to run, every sheep in that flock will follow, even if they die for it.

"A word or two to these people would have been good and proper. There's an article in the September North American Review dealing with conservation of common sense that well illustrates the business conditions of this country right now and gives as a panacea for the business paralysis the suggestion that our business men use a little common sense—just plain ordinary sound common sense. Good advice: I wish business men everywhere would take it.

EXAMINERS MEET.

National Convention Is Opened at Washington.

Washington, Sept. 12.—The National Association of Supervisors of State banks began a three days' convention in Washington today. The examiners gathered at the treasury building and were addressed by Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency. Murray proposed that state supervisors work in co-operation with national examiners. He declared he had in his office a list of men, who, as officers of national banks, had proved incompetent and had been removed from office, and said that if any of them should make application to organize state banks their names would be furnished to the state banking authorities. In turn he proposed that the state supervisors furnish to the national system the names of men who had been driven out of state banks.

During the last eighteen months the comptroller said he had refused 108 applications to form national banks because the men behind them had been found incompetent or dishonest; that there was not enough business to make the proposed institutions profitable or that the applicants were speculators or men without standing in their communities.

To Discourage Ocean Burial.

Philadelphia, Sept. 12.—A movement has been started here to have steamship companies discontinue the practice of burying at sea bodies of persons who die on shipboard.

Last week Rev. Wm. McLoughlin of this city died at sea and notwithstanding that a wireless message had been sent to the captain of the liner requesting that the body be landed the clergyman's body was consigned to the waves.

Yesterday, the Holy Name society of the Roman Catholic church of Our Lady of Mercy adopted resolutions protesting against the custom. The society authorized several clergymen to correspond with the steamship companies with view to ascertaining the opinions of their officers on the subject.

It is understood that the leading steamship companies have already taken this subject under consideration.

Steamer on Fire Twelve Days.

Havre, Sept. 12.—The French freight and passenger California arrived from New York with fire, which had been fought for twelve days, still burning in her hold.

The crew were nearly exhausted and called on the city fire department to finish the job. The latter proceeded to flood the craft and hope to save part of the cargo.

Three Die in Ohio.

Toledo, O., Sept. 12.—Three persons were killed and as many hurt in a Hocking Valley passenger train wreck near LaMoyne, O., today. A broken rail caused the wreck.

Expect Indictment of Packers.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—The indictment of individual packers is expected late this afternoon when the federal grand jury, it is believed, will report to Judge Landis in the United States district court.

The indictments are said to have been drawn with elaborate care charging violation of the Sherman antitrust law.

District Attorney Sims, Special Assistant District Attorney Wilkerson and Assistant United States Attorney Pagin and Kenyon, held a conference with reference to the impeading indictments.

Pirates Rob Passengers.

Harbin, Manchuria, Sept. 12—A band of brigands disguised as passengers held up a Russian steamer south of this point today and after a fight overcame the crew and robbed the passengers.

In attempting to defend their vessel the owners, two Russians, were killed and many of the Chinese crew and Chinese passengers were wounded.

When the pirates were in control of the situation they bound the passengers, the crew, a Russian sailor and two Russian women and took the valuables of the captives at their leisure.

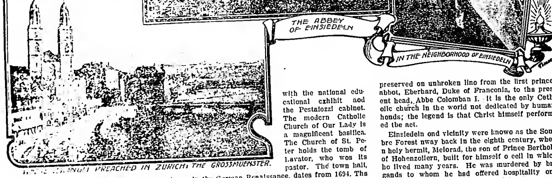
EINSIEDELN AND THE ALPS

THE ABBEY OF EINSIEDELN



IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF EINSIEDELN

[illegible] ZWINGLI PREACHED IN ZURICH: THE GROSSMUENSTER.

ONE thousand Zurich women have declared for universal suffrage. It is a recent movement there, though other Swiss cities have been interested for some time in the much mooted question. Altogether the little country has 17,000 advocates for giving women the ballot. Recently the women of Zurich canton petitioned the state for the right to act as jurors on a case in which a woman was the defendant. Their request was refused. Later, with characteristic Swiss bravery, they sent in another petition to the legislature asking the right to sit in judgment on special courts, such as are held in France for adjusting differences between master and maid, and other [illegible] where differences arise between a woman employer and a woman employee. While this, too, was denied, Parliament admitted the sex's eligibility to [illegible] office.

"We are not talking much about it," said the vice president of the Zurich Woman's Suffrage society, Fraulein Honegger, "lest publicity frighten the state into retarding the concession. It is not much of a gain, but," she added with true [illegible] optimism, "it is a step forward. It was hard made that de[illegible] to think of [illegible] was to be laugh[illegible] our petition would [illegible] past the porter's desk. But a city that was the first in Europe to open its university to women will not finally deny us our citizens' rights."

Switzerland has no women's clubs. But while the suffragists are engaged along one line, another body of women is working for philanthropy. A group of young women representing the foremost Zurich families has organized this year a practical training school where members study the needs of poor children and thereby help to better their unfortunate lot.

"We are endeavoring to interest our young girls of leisure and education in this work," said one of the promoters, Fraulein Fertz, herself a beautiful, earnest, and cultured young woman. The medical inspector of schools is assisted by this guild. Children of the poor receive two full meals gratis in Swiss schools, and if the mothers of these children be employed at outside work until a late hour the guild takes charge of the little ones.

Through the influence of this guild a law was passed last year by which a guardian is appointed for illegitimate children and this guardian can compel the father of a deserted child to contribute to its support. If the mother be under age also she, too, becomes a ward of this guardian. A similar organization to the Zurich guild exists in German cities, and, by a similar state law, the absconder of moral obligations is traced easily and extradited. To women is due the large number of temperance restaurants existing in Switzerland. Frau Professor Orellie of Zurich is the originator of this movement.

Socialism is spreading in Switzerland; though how a country governed by the referendum system can be possibly more democratic passeth understanding. Made up of three races, German, French and Italian, socialists of these kindred nations have entered Switzerland and scattered broadcast seeds of discontent in the brave, beautiful little republic.

Zurich has led in every movement of its history. It was the storm center of the Protestant Reformation period in Switzerland. Zwingli's home is here. In the Grossmuenster, whose tall towers have dominated the town for eight centuries, he preached the Protestant crusade and was the church's last Catholic pastor and its first Protestant one. High up in one of the towers is a quaint, seated figure of Charlemagne, the legendary founder of Grossmuenster chapter. Back of the cathedral are the cloisters which now form part of a girls' seminary.

In an old chapel across the road is an interesting collection of articles relating to the Reformation, including letters written by Calvin, Luther and Zwingli, each remarkably distinct. There is also one by Lady Jane Grey; her penmanship is legible as print and she wrote the letter in Latin. Back of this little chapel, called the Water church, is a splendid bronze statue of Zwingli.

Zurich is the capital of the canton of Zurich and is situated at the north end of Lake Zurich. It is the largest city in Switzerland. The old, traditional town, with its narrow, steep streets and its high, dark houses, lies on both banks of the Limmat. The rest of the city has spacious thoroughfares and splendid buildings. The lake quays in the Kleine Stadt are very attractive. Near their northern end is the fine Tonhalle, a popular modern concert building and pleasure palace. In the vicinity of their southern end is the beautiful Belvoir park. Near the Tonhalle, the stately Bahnhofstrasse—main street of the city—leads from the lake north to the railway station. The bridges are striking. Adjacent to the fine Munster bridge is the Wasserkirche, on the right bank, containing the city library with 130,000 volumes and over 5,000 manuscripts. It preserves more valuable objects, including the Codex Vaticanus. The Grossmuenster is Romanesque with Grecian features. Further north is the Ruden, with the national educational exhibit and the Pestalozzi cabinet. The modern Catholic Church of Our Lady is a magnificent basilica. The Church of St. Peter holds the tomb of Lavator, who was its pastor. The town hall, in the German Renaissance, dates from 1694. The university and the famous federal polytechnic with their numerous institutions, laboratories and clinics are in the northern part of Grosse Stadt.

Switzerland is the most mountainous country of Europe, three-fourths of its area being covered with mountains. The grandeur of the scenery has been pictured and described innumerable times. With the exception of certain portions of America, there is nothing in the world to equal it in beauty. The central and southern parts are occupied by the Swiss Alps, which spread over nearly three-fifths of the entire area. The Jura Mountains cover the northwestern portions of the country.

Far up in the mountains is the beautiful little town of Einsiedeln. I was fortunate enough to be present during a week-end musical fete, in which singing societies from the country and from neighboring Bavarian towns were present in numbers exceeding 2,000. Switzerland, having only the summer time for holidaying, has organized a movable saengerfest by which each town and city gets its share of gay song and jolly visitors. All the cantons were represented at Einsiedeln and every house was decorated with Swiss colors, scarlet and white.

Early in the afternoon the open air concert began. It was held in the vast, sloping square in front of the Benedictine abbey. The assembling of the singers was picturesque. Each canton carried a banner, individual societies carried great horns filled with flowers and the women singers wore white gowns and crimson sashes. As the quiet, well-behaved little place has but one policeman, the fire brigade turned out to give a semblance of civic authority, also to serve as a guard of honor. And while the marchers were massing around the conductor's box a cannon was kept firing a vigorous welcome. The bright Swiss decorations on the quaint, gabled houses, the gay Sunday dress of the women, the encircling mountains—the nearby ones dark green, the distant peaks snow-tipped, edelweiss-decked—made a splendid, old world picture.

And the definite note was the ancient abbey of Einsiedeln, which called the town into being, and which is one of the celebrated shrines of Europe. The abbey church, known as Notre Dame des Ermites, is a grand basilica, the edifice flanked on either side with monastery buildings. Since the year 934 the abbey of Einsiedeln has preserved an unbroken line from the first prince-abbot, Eberhard, Duke of Franconia, to the present head, Abbe Colomban I. It is the only Catholic church in the world not dedicated by human hands; the legend is that Christ himself performed the act.

Einsiedeln and vicinity were known as the Sombre Forest away back in the eighth century, when a holy hermit, Meinrad, the son of Prince Berthold of Hohenzollern, built for himself a cell in which he lived many years. He was murdered by brigands to whom he had offered hospitality and who had hoped to find concealed treasures; all they got was a chalice and some books. Ravens, whose evil characteristics had been disarmed by the gentle hermit and had become his companions, pursued the assassins to Zurich, screaming and picking at the villains' heads. The strange actions of the irate birds attracted the townspeople's attention and they questioned the murderers, who, terrified, acknowledged their crime. In the Einsiedeln Abbey coat-of-arms are two ravens.

When the noble edifice was erected over the hermit's cell the walls of the cell were enclosed in black marble and made into a chapel. It stands in the nave of the church and, while plain in style, the richness of the material and the simplicity of design make it impressive. On the altar stands the renowned statue of the Black Madonna, bronze and many hundreds of years old. The chapel is known as the Holy Chapel, because of the remarkable legend regarding its dedication.

This is the story. On September 14, 948, Saint Conrad, bishop of Constance, came at the invitation of Abbot Eberhard to consecrate the new church. He was attended by the Emperor Othon, the Empress Adelaide and a large retinue of clergy and courtiers. As they knelt preparatory to beginning the ceremony suddenly the chapel became illuminated with a celestial brilliancy and before the altar stood the Savior performing the office of dedication, assisted by the four evangelists.

At the right and left of the divine celebrant angels swung censers which emitted a thousand sweet perfumes, the apostle, Saint Peter, and the Pope, Saint Gregory the Great, held the vestments of the heavenly pontiff, and Saint Stephen and Saint Lawrence, who were the first deacons of the church to be martyred, acted as deacon and sub-deacon. An angelic choir, conducted by the archangel Saint Michael, sang glorious music and before the altar knelt the beautiful virgin mother of the Son of God. A still earlier legend has it that when Conrad began the office of dedication he was stopped by a voice that cried out three times distinctly: "Cease! brother, this chapel has been consecrated by God himself."

The journey from Zurich to Einsiedeln is charming. First comes a sail on a lake which is the loveliest piece of water in Switzerland, then a railroad ride through pine woods, among mountains, over gorges and past valleys that now are covered with fragrant, new-mown hay.

Housekeeping in Hankow

Among our many wanderings our housekeeping in Hankow was an experience I never had before—nor after, writes Florence Gilbert in the New Idea Woman's Magazine. We have five or six servants. That sounds fine, but before passing judgment you should have experience with them! The peace of mind of the mistress depends largely on her "number one boy," the head servant, who, if efficient, is likely to have come from Ningpo. He is a tall, impressive personage who wears a blue cotton coat fastening on the side and reaching to his ankles, without which he must never appear in his employer's presence. To do this is only second as a mark of disrespect to having the cue in any other position than hanging decorously down the back.

The house coolie at work may sometimes twist his cue around his head, but the boy never. Through the boy the orders are usually issued to the rest of the household staff, translated from the pidgin English of the mistress. There are the "No. 2 boy," the house coolie, who is the only one with enough work to do to keep him moderately busy; the cook and the second cook, who is learning his trade at the expense of his employer's digestion. The cook's chief business is going to market and presenting his account for his purchases.

It is a strange collection often in that market basket, which a wise housekeeper always sees. Goat flesh, perhaps, politely called mutton; or beef that has been exposed to a fly-filled shop; a live chicken or two, game of various sorts—pheasant, teal, snipe and perhaps a fish, more appetizing than one would expect who has seen and smelled the Yang-tse water.

The vegetables are all of the sort that need cooking, for no intelligent person will run the risks involved in eating raw Chinese vegetables and fruits.

In addition to the supplies which can be purchased in the Chinese market every day one's diet may include fresh butter from Australia and all sorts of canned goods shipped from the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany. These are sold in shops in the concessions kept by Europeans, Japanese, Parsees—those keen merchants from India—or even Chinese. While expensive, they are not quite such prohibitive luxuries as to inspire the remark of the English missionary's little girl in central India, who said: "Mother, I suppose the king has tinned things to eat every day."

Uncle Called Odd and Even

Trough Dug in the Ground and a Contest in the Throwing of Stones.

Two boys may play this game with pebbles, peach stones, plum stones, nuts or acorns. Make a tiny trough in the ground about four inches wide and six inches deep, but as long as desired. Then the players in turn stand about six feet away from the trough. As each person takes his turn he picks up a handful of stones or whatever is being used for the game.

Each player uses from his own pile of 20 stones at the start of the game. The one to throw into the trough must not let the other player see how many stones he intends to use each time. The player not throwing must guess whether or not the one throwing will toss an odd or even number of stones into the trough.

If the guesser says "odd" just as the player starts to throw and an odd number goes into the trough the guesser takes all the stones which go in. If the guesser is wrong he gives to the thrower as many stones from his pile as went into the trough.

Before starting off the players agree on the number of throws each is to have. At the end of the game the person having the most stones or pebbles wins the game. The little children of Arabia like to play odd and even for they spend much of their time out in the sunshine and fresh air.

If ten players wish to take part in the game the long trough is marked off into five parts so two people may play at each section. At the end of the contest the two holding the most peach stones play each other to see who wins the final game. The peach stones are always put back at the end of each game.

CURE BY INJECTION

Much Hope Offered by Physicians in Use of Radium.

European Scientists, After Making Experiments, Write Article on Subject for London Lancet—Lupus Vulgaris of Neck.

New York.—Several European physicians and surgeons have been experimenting with injections of solutions of radium as a curative measure. Dr. L. Wicham and Dr. M. Degrais have written an article on the subject for the London Lancet. The Medical Record says of it:

"They allude to a paper presented at the Lisbon congress by several French authors, the conclusions of which are as follows:

"'When introduced into the animal body the emanation diffuses itself through the structure, and may in this manner reach deep-seated parts. It has a predilection for the glands which form an internal secretion and especially for the suprarenal capsules. It is eliminated by the lungs and the skin, and to a small extent by the kidneys.'

"The authors then pass on to relate their own experiences with this mode of therapy. In a case of lupus vulgaris of the neck, a curative change was produced by injections of (1) water rendered radioactive in the proportion of one milligram of pure sulphate of radium per liter, or (2) water impregnated with radium in the proportion of one milligram of pure bromide of radium per liter. In this case 40 injections of each kind and of from one to two cubic centimeters were given in the course of two months.

"They have also presented a case of lupus erythematosus, treating for comparison the lesions on the left side by the application of the radium apparatus and those on the right side by injections. On the left side there was a sharp reaction with destruction of the lupus and a subsequent process of repair. Later there seemed to be a strong cicatrix, but still later there was a recurrence of the lesion at the margin of the tissues of repair. On the right side there was no visible inflammatory reaction, but there was first a diminution and then a disappearance of the erythema of the lupus, the part assuming a whitish cicatricial aspect.

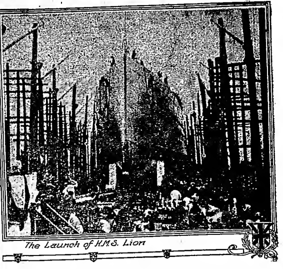
"At the time the recurrence was found on the left side the recovery on the right side was maintained, and there had been no reappearance of lupus since that time. In these two cases the doses of radium were extremely small, but they contained the emanation, an element which is not present in the rays emitted by the radium apparatus.

"The injection of certain insoluble salts of radium suspended in an emulsion into structures of small absorbent power prolongs the contact of the salt with the diseased tissues and intensifies the action of the radiations and of the emanation. This plan was followed in treating a large cancerous nodule, being made in a mixture of paraffin and vaselin. The object was to inject this preparation beneath the nodule, so as to prepare a stratum underlying the whole of the diseased part. Thus the nodule was exposed to a cross fire, as it were, diminished in size and rapidly disappeared. There was no ulceration and there has been no recurrence.

"It must be understood that soluble radium when injected is in a free state in the animal body and carries with it gaseous emanations which give rise to the phenomenon of radio-activity. The salt in radium apparatus does not supply emanation for therapeutic purposes, for this gas does not pass through any solid body, being in this respect unlike the extremely penetrating radium rays.

"The authors believe that these experiments offer much hope for the future."

GIANT BRITISH WARSHIP



The Launch of H.M.S. Lion

LONDON, ENG.—The latest powerful addition to the British navy was sent down the ways a few days ago. In displacement and armament the vessel is the first of its class in the world.

How a Story Originated.

Tangier.—A report in circulation here that American interests had purchased the greater part of the valuable Anghora country, in southwestern Africa, turns out to have been erroneous. It originated from a small and unimportant purchase of land by a Moor named Hasan Ben Ali, who is a naturalized American citizen.

POETRY IN BILLS

University of Chicago Teacher Makes Unique Statement.

Professor Wilczynski Announces Advance of Rhythmical Revolution in "Poetry and Mathematics."

Chicago.—Poetry is booming. The grocer's bill may now be called a lyric, the butcher's communication an elegy, and the housewife who checks the charges a literary artist of the subtlest mold. Professor Ernest J. Wilczynski of the University of Chicago mathematics department says so.

Professor Wilczynski, who teaches integral calculus, projective differential geometry and other advanced subjects at the university, announced the advance of the rhythmical revolution in a lecture on "Poetry and Mathematics" the other day at Ryerson Physical Laboratory. Poets and mathematicians, he declared, are expert in each other's arts, and by no means so different as uninformed persons may imagine.

The university authority defined the world as one huge mathematical problem, and his remarks were full of comfort for those who may have felt a lack of the poetical faculty. Bookkeepers as well as tradesmen and kindergarten pupils may squeeze themselves into the poet's hall of fame by a liberal interpretation of the new theory.

"The poetic and mathematical aspects of the human mind have much more in common than is usually realized," said Professor Wilczynski. "There is no such thing as one faculty of the mind that is without contact with other faculties, and it is true in the case of the mathematics and poetry, of course.

"A poem and a mathematical composition are both the expressions of ideas. Goethe said that he disliked mathematicians because they always translated everything into their own language. But he would not have objected had he known that their language was the most beautiful, perfect and adequate of all.

"Each art has a peculiar language, and its conventional symbols. Beethoven and Wagner spent many years distributing small black dots over five parallel lines, but the dots were only the symbols, not the music. In the same way the mathematical equation is only the symbol, but the form is the important thing. This is true of both poetry and mathematics.

"Like poetry, mathematics may express its thought in different ways and may be of beauty because of its formal element. The peculiar element of poetry may be said to be rhythm and that of mathematics to be solution. Aristotle called attention to the necessity for unity of action in the drama, and the same necessity holds for mathematics.

"Aristotle's famous saying that the probable-impossible is preferable to the improbable-possible is true in mathematics also. We insist upon causality in mathematics as we do in poetry.

"The minds of poets and mathematicians work in the same way, both possess imagination, both hold the idea important and insist that the essential ideas must be true. The perfect mathematician, then, may be regarded as the perfect poet, and the arts are very similar."

LONG, HARD WINTER AHEAD

New York.—"We are going to have an early winter this year and a long and severe one," said Head Keeper Snyder of the Central Park menagerie the other day. "All signs point that way, and I have been studying these things for a quarter of a century.

"Blackbirds, chipping sparrows, bluebirds and other summer visitors have been flocking for over a week. I saw a flock of several thousand blackbirds flying southward over the city last week. Migration to the south is unusually early this season.

"The chipmunks are very busy laying up a supply of beech nuts and other provender for a long winter. Woodchucks up the state are going into their burrows for the winter with a big layer of fat on their ribs. Usually they stay out until September. You had better get your fur overcoat out of the tar barrel for an early cold snap, for frost will be here early."

Mosquitoes Kill Cattle.

Lake Charles, La.—Southwest Louisiana is in the grip of the mosquito plague. Thousands of cattle have been killed by the insects. They hover in hordes over the fields and marsh lands. At night they fly into towns, making living conditions almost unbearable.

It is impossible in some of the towns along the Southern Pacific railroad to go out of doors at night. Persons eat dinner with their ankles swathed in protecting clothes; then they get beneath bars and netting, for it is impossible to keep the mosquitoes out of residences.

West Raising Sacred Sheep

Former Yale Professor Expects to Make Fortune Out of Experiment on Pacific Coast.

Tacoma, Wash.—On Hesper island, in Puget sound, George Sifford, a former Yale professor, is tenderly caring for as choice a bunch of lambs as ever delighted the heart of a gentleman farmer. They are karakuls, or the sacred sheep of Asia and biblical times, and were secured by Sifford after great effort and considerable money. It is said they are the first ever raised in America; they are worth more than 100 times as much as the common sheep of the flocks.

The Karakul is the sheep which produces wool used for the finest coats in Europe. Its wool is almost priceless, and there are comparatively few garments made from the real Karakul. The pure bred sheep are to be found only in the herds of the wealthy noblemen of Bokhara, as the majority of the breed are mixed with Afghan and other species.

Sifford, while acting as a missionary to central Asia, brought thirty of the sacred sheep to this country. He secured his first pure-bred sacred sheep because of a favor he did for a Bokhara nobleman. Convinced that such a sheep would soon be a source of great wealth if once adapted to America, he searched around to find others. He was rewarded in his efforts and finally through the aid of a wealthy uncle reached America with the specimens.

To find a climate similar to that of Bokhara was the most serious question before Sifford. On the way down Puget sound from Victoria, B. C., he passed Hesper island, covered with evergreen trees and luxuriant shrubbery. Reaching Seattle, he returned to the island to investigate and found almost the identical grasses and shrubs that grow in Bokhara, but of different names. Here he took the sacred sheep, and they flourished. Now there are fifteen lambs, and the next summer or two there will be a good-sized flock of the most valuable sheep in the world.

The sheep are free from any of the diseases afflicting the common kinds, and the quality of wool produced since reaching American shores indicates an improvement.

EAGER TO GET WEEKLY BATH

English Millionaire Proud of Gorgeous Lavatory in His Elegant Mansion.

London.—"Apropos of personal elegance and cleanliness," so "M. A. P." has related in the evident effort to relieve the holiday pressure, "one is reminded of the story of a certain self-made millionaire who built for himself a gorgeous mansion not far from Hyde Park corner, the wonders of which were talked of far and wide and so excited curiosity that a certain member of royalty expressed his desire to see the inside.

"Very flattered and gratified, the proud owner showed the guest all that there was to be seen—leaving the wonderful bathroom until the end. Everything here was as near perfection as possible. Rare marble had been used for the floor, the walls were lined with panels of precious stones and a wonderful flight of stairs with a crystal balustrade led down to the bath itself. The royal visitor showed his admiration generously.

"Yes," said the host, "the man who designed it knew what he was about, didn't he. Do you wonder, your royal highness, that I look forward to Saturday nights?"

The Yawn Cure.

There is nothing that will rest you so quickly as to sit on a straight-back chair and, lifting the feet from the floor, push them out in front of you as far as possible, stretch the arms, put the head back, open the mouth wide, and make yourself yawn.—Family Doctor.

Not Knocking Her.

Mrs. Goodsole (at the party)—What a lovely girl! And still in her teens, isn't she?

Miss Tartun—Yes; her velveteens.

Worse Yet.

Maudie: That horrid old cat told Claudie that I was 40 years old!

Mamie: The mean thing. But she might have done worse, Maudie:

How? Mamie: Well, she might have told some lies about you.

A Sign.

When a man is referred to as being "a diamond in the rough," it is generally a sign that he wouldn't be tolerated in decent society if he didn't have a lot of money.—Chicago Record Herald.

One Thing Certain.

A cat's eyes are said to be largest at midnight. We never made an examination, but we are positive that its voice is about 17 times larger at that hour than at any other period during the 24.

Suiting Personality.

Agent—Did you find a suitable house for the customer who seemed so chesty?

Assistant—I did my best, sir. I recommended him one with a swell front.

Tonic or Stimulant?

There is an immense difference between a tonic and a stimulant. Up one day, way back the next; that's a stimulant. Steady progress day by day toward perfect health; that's a tonic. Will the standpatters in Minnesota get scared some?

Who would have surmised that Maine would send a Democrat to the United States senate. Shades of Morrill, Blaine, Reed, Dingley!

Ralph Wheelock insists upon making a campaign just as if there was danger of defeat. Ralph's seriousness sometimes amounts to unconscious humor.

The returns from the primary indicate that insurgency in Minnesota has asserted itself in no uncertain terms and is a political factor to be reckoned with.

Governor Eberhart will make the keynote speech of his campaign at Mankato on October 4th. It is notable in this connection that Governor Johnson did not make a political speech at St. Peter during any of his campaigns.

James Gray, the Democratic nominee for governor, will make his "keynote" speech at Fergus Falls on the evening of September 27. After that date he will be on the stump continuously until election day. John Lind will also be on the stump during the last month of the campaign, and both of these Democratic crusaders will cover the Red River valley.

Airship plans were offered to the government of the Untied States so far back as 1845. it has just been discovered in some documents of that year. Flying machines were then invented to meet a greatly felt want, viz., to carry the mails abroad and to remote the distances in this country, but the would-have-been-aviators of that day only 65 years ago though—were deemed to be so crazy that their propositions were not taken seriously, but they themselves were regarded seriously enough as infernal lunatics.

The Minneapolis Daily News, having been asked by a subscriber for its opinion of Senator Nelson's course in the Ballinger investigation, its editor responded.

"In the opinion of the editor, Senator Nelson did not officiate creditably to himself nor to his state as chairman of the investigating committee. Though the committee was not a court it would have been more in keeping with his position if Senator Nelson had held an unbiased, open minded attitude. As it was, he showed bias in favor of Ballinger, even going so far as to put to witnesses lists of questions which it has since been discovered were written by Ballinger himself. His holding of the committee session in Minneapolis to prevent an adverse report was typical of his course throughout."

James Gray, the Democratic nominee for governor, was born in Falkirk, Scotland, February 18, 1862, and came to America with his parents in 1866. His early education was received in the public schools of Iowa and Wisconsin. He removed to Minnesota in 1880, and graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1885. He then entered newspaper work and was reporter on the Tribune and city editor of the old Minneapolis Times. From 1895 to 1899 he was secretary and director of the Times Newspaper company. In 1898 he was elected mayor of Minneapolis and served two years. After his term of mayor he became connected with the Minneapolis Tribune, leaving that publication for the Minneapolis Journal in 1906. Since then he has been an editoial writer on that paper.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Rush City Post: You can't bust a trust as long as the tariff laws are made to foster it.

Barnesville Record-Review: Reports from St. Paul were to the effect that Secretary Ballinger may soon be fired. Ballinger had better be careful, for this is the canning season in Minnesota.

St. Peter Herald: If the Republican standpatters made good their threat to work for the election of Democrats, It will be the first time on record that that wing of the party has taken any part in shaping legislation beneficial to the country.

Biwabik Times: If the next congress is Democratic the fact can be charged to Joseph Cannon. Cannon is today the most unpopular political character in the United States and grows more so every time he makes a statement in which he attempts to make the people believe that he is on the square.

Winona Independent: It is estimated that there are 92,000,000 of us. Subtract the few who are identified with the special interests and you have the number of Americans that are against Taft, Aldrich, et. al.

Princeton Union: In all 100 suits have been instituted in the federal court at Fergus Falls by the government to set aside transfers of tracts of land on the White Earth reservation. The government asks that the titles to these lands be again vested in the Indian allottees and the sales declared null and void. Have the defendants in these deals been playing the same little game as did the fellows down in Indian Territory?

Austin Transcript: In Kansas it is irregular to be a standpatter, and the insurgent alone is a party loyalist. It is getting to be something that way in Minnesota.

Pointed Paragraphs.

because he is not the errand boy for any interest, and because he is best qualified to give the state a straight forward, independenet, self respecting administration—it will be a victory, not for any nationality, but for what he represents in this campaign—which under the circumstances can only be a campaign against the domination of predatory corporations and the liquor interests in Minnesota politics.

A Democratic Candidate.

And Mr. Gray is an able man. He is self made. He has proved his capacity in his profession in which he has reached the top. He has proven it as an executive officer. He has had the training which fits him to be governor. He is a man of high character. No corporation ever ordered him around. I don't think anyone is going to say anything better what Jim Gray is than Larry Hudgson has done in the St. Paul Dispatch and therefore I will make no apology for quoting him.

A Self Made Man.

"Jim" says Larry Ho., writing of "Cabbages and Kings," is one of the self made men who doesn't need to make excuses for the job. He's got his goods in the front window, and he doesn't have to mark them down.

'Born in Scotland, raised on oatmeal, he come to this country before his antecedents became fatal.

'Many a man in Minneapolis can remember the time when Jim Gray was a logger in the river, standing in water all day long, willing to shiver for an education. Nobody ever come along and stuck a silver spoon in Jim's lips. He had to grub for what he got. There was a long time in his life when he didn't know for sure that Minnsota was the bread and butter state. No man ever knew Jim Gray without loving him I have particular reason for loving him, for he took me up almost out of the streets and gave me a big hunk of encouragement and wrapped me around in his big burly affection at a time when life looked a bit like a polar expedition. Jim Gray has always been doing kindly things and feeling pretty mad when folks found it out. Like all good Scotchmen, he covers up his gentility and his soft-heartedness. But he doesn't fool people very long.

'It is a good thing when such a man is nominated for high office. It takes a campaign largely out of politics, and lifts it up into the atmosphere of genial and kindly citizenship which preserves it from bitterness and injustice on both sides. The Democrats are to be congratulated for naming Jim Gray. He is a credit to them, and they won't be ashamed of him, whatever happens. The Republicans are to be congratulated on his nomination for it gives them an opposition honest, dignified and worthy. And the people are to be congratulated, because such a nomination is a tribute to that sentiment among men which demands the highest, the worthiest, the cleanest in men who ask the franchise of the people. It reminds men that politics is not a scramble, and that a candidacy has more significance than the mere question of its success at the polls. So we can all be glad over Jim Gray's nomination. He's a real one, and he is one of the rare men who can be just as big if defeated as if elected."

Where Ignorance is Bliss.

The Republicans who have been taking things easy right along relying on John Lind's not running and on the Democrats not being able to find a candidate who would appeal by reason of his character and capacity to the people of the state who think the time has arrived when they should have something to say about selecting a man for govcror, professes now to make light of Mr. Gray's candidacy. They are predicting already 40,000 or 50,000 majority for Eberhart. There is a good deal of that sort of talk going on elsewhere. That's the way the Republicans have been talking in Maine on one side of the continent and in Washington on the other and at various places in between the reactionary branch of the Republican party to which our exemplary governor belongs have an occasion to revise their figres. Where the Democrats didn't get them the Progressive republicans snowed them under. Public sentiment moves in waves. Impatience of the domination of the machine has reached Minnesota. No one knows what may happen. In Wisconsin the LaFollette people thought they were beaten until the votes were counted.

Working In the Dark.

The fact is Repulicans at headquarters are as much at sea in regard to the situation as they were months ago. There is no Republican organization in this state. The thing has been smashed into bits so far as it ever was a state organization. The state central committee, it is true, manages to keep in touch with a few old-timers scattered here and there throughout the state who still labor under the delusion that they do the people's thinking for them, and they of course bring in word that they have everything in line and that things are looking fine. They reported the same way four years ago; two years ago, according to them all Republicans were turning back to the G. O. P. condidate; two years hence they will be coming in singing the same optimistic note.

Working on Faith.

This is the sort of thing Ralph Wheelock pins his faith to. Ed. Smith knows better, of course; but constitutionally Ed. is tired and has a habit of never doing today what he can put off till tomorrow. The governor really fancies he is the idol of the people and his self esteem is unshakable. They are all working on faith. They may be right. People may be falling over themselves to support the administration. That's not the way it comes to me, however. They don't know Jim Gray, it is true. If the Democratic campaign is so managed that between this and Novemrber they will find out that he is really a man to be trusted and that no one has a string tied to him, the election isn't going to be the procession with the Democratic candidate for governor bringing up the rear guard of it which some people imagine. There is going to be a real campaign with nothing settled until the votes are counted.

Helping Tawney Out.

They are having the liveliest kind

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

The only baking powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

of a campaign in the First District. Of course Tawney has behind him the Federal machine in addition to his own. It's natural that the postmasters should be hustling and that the cuckoo press should be singing it's little song. But there wasn't any particular reason why the Republican state central committee should take a hand. Nevertheless that appears to be what is happening and executive pressure is being brought to bear where it will do the most good. The Tawney's machine is the only effective working organization down there and the interested people up here in St. Paul couldn't very well do anything else than co-operate when it was squarely put up to them. And all this appears to be necessary to get the best of a candidate of whom nobody up to a few days ago ever heard of. It indicates as well as anything else the uncertainty of the situation.

Throwing a Scare into Stevens.

In this district there is a particularly lively campaign. Hugh Halbert has been out in the country talking. Now Hugh isn't much of a talker. But he's got a story to tell that the worst kind of talking can hardly spoil and the people in the country are listening to it. And they aren't making any secret of their notion that Mr. Stevens has been more interested in other things than in representing them. At all events they have the congressman on the anxious seat and he is beginning to let them know how really good a man he was when he was down in Washington and what surprising things he has accomplished.

Why he Worries.

In St. Paul no attempt has ever been made to force the spirit of the primary law. Demorats have acquired the habit of voting Republican tickets when the notion seized them and Democrats have voted Republican tickets when they had an object to gain. In this way party leaders working together have been able to put up for other parties any condidates upon whom they could agree. What's troubling Stevens now is to know whether the Democrats are going to take a hand in nominating a Republican candidate for congress. If they keep their hands off he thinks he can beat Hugh Halbert. If they don't he don't just know where he is at. That's why he is hustling to beat the band. It may be only a false alarm. Then again it may not.

The Dakota Business College.

The Dakota Business College whose ad. occurrs elsewhere in this edition of the Gazette is just entering upon its eighteenth year. From a small beginning of five pupils Professor Watkins has built up one of the largest and most successful commercial schools in the entire country. The school erected another large building last year and now has 30,000 square feet of floor space, enrolls about 700 pupils annually and sends over 800 graduates to positions each year. Every bank in Fargo and over two-thirds of those throughout the state employ D. B. C. pupils.

Professor Watkins is a strong believer in newspaper advertising and attributes his success very largely to the liberal use of printer's ink.

THE NEW ERA SYSTEM PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS

SPECIALISTS

Coming to Red Lake Fall, Thursday, October 14, from 10:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m., at the Grand View Hotel.

These physicians and surgeons, licensed by the state for the cure of deformities and all nervous and chronic diseases of men, women and children, offer to all those who call, this trip, consultation, examination and advice free, making no charge whatever, except the actual cost of medicine. All that is asked in return for these valuable services is that every person treated will state the results to their friends, and thus prove to the sick and afflicted in every city and locality that at last treatments have been discovered that are absolutely sure and certain in their effect.

These doctors are considered Americas' leading stomach and nerve specialists, and are excellent in the treatment of all chronic diseases and so great and wonderful have been their cures that in many cases it is hard, indeed, to find the dividing line between human skill and miracle.

Diseases of the stomach, intestines, liver, blood, skin, nerves, heart, spleen, kidneys, or bladder, sciatica, diabetes, bedwetting, leg ulcer, epilepsy, weak lungs, and those afflicted with long standing, deep seated diseases that have baffled the skill of the family physician should not fail to call.

No more operations for appendicitis, gall stones, goiter, tumor, or cancer. They were the first in America to earn the name "Bloodless Surgeons" by doing away with the knife, with blood and all pain in the successful treatment and cure of these dangerous diseases.

Deafness often cured in sixty days.

No matter what your ailment may be, no matter what others have told you, no matter what experience you may have had with others, physicians, sanitariums, or patent medicines, if you want to get well again, it will be to your advantage to see them. Go have it forever settled in your mind.

If your case is curable, they will treat you, if incurable they will give you such advice that may prolong your life. Do not put off this duty, you owe yourself and your friends or relatives who may be suffering because of your sickness, as a visit will cost you nothing and may save your life.

Remember this free offer is for this trip only.

Married ladies must come with their husbands and minors with their fathers.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIA

Malaria is a species of blood poverty known as anaemia. It is a condition in which the circulation is so weak and impure that it is unable to supply the system with sufficient nourishment and strength to preserve ordinary health.

The medical profession is divided in opinion as to the manner in which malarial poison gets into the blood. Some take the position that it is an atmospheric poison, the specific germs of which are breathed into the lungs and thus transmitted to the circulation. Others advance the opinion that persons become inoculated with the poison through the bites of mosquitos. All however agree that MALARIA is a blood affection, and any treatment to successfully overcome it must not only purify this vital fluid, but at the same time add the necessary qualities of richness and strength to the circulation.

The malarial poison destroys large numbers of the rich, red corpuscles of the circulation, and the peculiar paleness of anaemic persons is due to this fact. In the first stages of Malaria there is a bilious condition of the system, constant bodily weakness, poor appetite, and a "no account," tired feeling.

S. S. S. searches out and destroys every particle of malarial infection and builds the blood up to a healthy, nourishing condition. Then the system receives its required nutriment, the bright red corpuscles begin to multiply in the circulation, sallow complexions grow ruddy and flushed with health, the liver and digestion are righted, the appetite improved, and the system vitalized and refreshed in every way. S.S.S. is a safe and pleasant remedy as well as an efficient one. If you have Malaria we will be glad to have you write us describing the case. We will send free our book on the blood and at the same time our physicians will give you some medical advice that will be of great service to you in curing yourself with S. S. S. No charge for the book or advice.

A PHYSICAL WRECK.

During 1900 I was running a farm on the Mississippi River, and became so impregnated with malaria that for a year afterwards I was a physical wreck. I took a number of medicines recommended as blood purifiers, chill cures and malaria eradicators, but nothing did me any good until I began to use S.S.S., which I did about a year ago. The result was that after taking several bottles of the large size I was as well and strong as I ever was, and have never had a chill since. I expect to take S.S.S. every year as a preventive, and would advise everybody else to follow my example.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Shorthand Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All Fargo banks and 685 others employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers, stenographers or cashiers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement.

Our $50.00 Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk or bookkeeper. The new $65.00 course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court, Third Judicial District and the Cass County Court are all D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

The D. B. C. has built a magnificent new building (30,000 square feet) is seated with roll-top desks, has 60 typewriters, adding machines, billers, money changers, etc. Pupils deal with each other and with magnificently equipped offices, using aluminum money. The work is fascinating and practical. The Northwest has "no other school like the D. B. C." For catalogue and full information about any department, address

Of the Board of County Commissioners, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Red Lake Falls, Minnesota,
September 9th, 1910.

On the call of the County Auditor, pursuant to chapter 230 of the General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1905 and acts amendatory thereof, the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, met in special session at the office of the County Auditor in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, at 10:00 o'clock a. m., September 9th, 1910 for the purpose of hearing and considering the report of the engineer and viewers on the ditches petitioned for by William G. Hunt and others and on the ditch petitioned for by Ole Broin and others, designated as County Ditches Nos. 17 and 18 respectively.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at 10:00 o'clock A. M.

Members present, Lindquist, Demann, Aubol, Johnson and Pigeon.

Members absent: None.

The matter of the petition of William G. Hunt and others for county ditch No. 17 came duly before the board. The said petition was read and the arguments of all persons for or against the construction of the said proposed ditch were heard. On motion duly carried the report of the viewers as referred back to them for correction of assessments against certain tracts of land. Otto Zaiser and G. K. Haavi, two of the viewers were present at the hearing and proceeded to make the corrections as agreed upon, after which on motion made by Commissioner Johnson, duly seconded by Commissioner Pigeon and caried unanimously the report of the engineer and the report of the viewers as amended was accepted and that said ditch be in all things established as provided by law according to the engineer's report and the report of the viewers as amended on file in the office of the County Auditor of Red Lake County, Minnesota, whereupon the following order establishing County ditch No. 17 was made:—

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake, ss.

In the Matter of the Petition of Olo Broin and Others, for a Public Ditch in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, designated and numbered as County Ditch No. 18.

The above entitled matter came on duly to be heard by and before the County Board of the County of Red Lake State of Minnesota, at a special meeting of said Board duly called for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition for said ditch in the above entitled matter on the 9th day of September A. D. 1910 at 10:00 o'clock A. M. of said day and it appearing by proper evidence that due notice had been given of the pendency of said petition and of said time of hearing thereon, and that C. H. Martz the Civil Engineer appointed by this board to survey the route of said ditch, has completed his work and filed his report thereon in the office of the County Auditor of said County and that the viewers appointed by said board to view and report upon said work have duly completed their labors and made and filed their report in due form of law in the office of the said County Auditor, the said County Board did, at the time above specified proceed to hear said petition and said viewers' report thereon; and said board having duly considered said petition and heard all the parties interested for or against the constuction of said ditch and all the matters pertaining thereto, find as follows, to-wit:

FIRST: That the Civil Engineer has completed his work and made and filed his report thereon in all repects according to law.

SECOND: That the Viewers appointed herein have duly completed their labors and have made and filed their report thereon according to law.

THIRD: That the estimated benefits to be derived from the construction of said work are greater than its total cost, including damages awarded.

FOURTH: That the damages and benefits arising from the construction of said ditch have been duly awarded and assessed, and that said work will be of public utility and promote the public health and that said reports of said Engineer and Viewers are complete and correct.

FIFTH: That notice of this hearing of said petition and of said Viewers' report and said Engineer's report has been duly given, published and posted and mailed as by law required, and that proofs of said service of said notice have been duly made and filed in the office of the County Auditor of said county, and that all other proceedings in the matter have been made and taken in accordance with the provisions of law.

Now, Therefore, As conclusions of the forgoing findings, we, the County Board of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, at said special session of said board, held at the time above specified, being satisfied that the proposed ditch will be of public utility and condocive to public health and public benefit and convenience, do hereby locate and establish the said ditch according to the report and specifications of said Civil Engineer made and filed herein; and do hereby establish and confirm the report of the Viewers made and filed herein.

It is Further Ordered, That the damages awarded to the persons and corporations named in the Viewer's report herein, in excess of benefits, be paid out of the county treasury of said county on warrants to be drawn and attested by the County Auditor of said county and signed by the chairman of this board, and delivered to the persons entitled thereto as provided by law.

Given under our hands this 9th day of September, A. D. 1910.

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her

Knoxville, Iowa.—"I suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more and was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and am glad to say that your medicines and kind letters of directions have done more for me than anything else and I had the best physicians here. I can do my work and rest well at night. I believe there is nothing like the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R. F. D., No. 8, Knoxville, Iowa.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial. Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

A STUNNER.

Secke—Mrs. Swellington is a stunning woman, isn't she?

Weeks—I should think so. She bit me with her automobile the other day, and it was two hours before I woke up.

Vermont Thrift.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, editor of the Boston Transcript, is a great admirer of the thrift of the Vermonters, but thinks sometimes they carry it too far.

O'Brien was up in Vermont last summer and went to dinner with a friend who had some political aspirations. As they came in the door he heard the lady of the house say to the hired girl: "I see Mr. Jones has somebody with him for dinner. Take these two big potatoes down to the cellar and bring up three small ones."

Does Engineering Work.

Mlle. Baudurin is superintendent of an engineering firm in Russia. She was graduated from the Women's Technological institute in St. Petersburg, and has had practical experience in engineering. She built a steel warehouse for an army co-operative society, has been assistant engineer in building a bridge across the Neva and has done other important work.

Remarkable Young Lady.

From a feuilleton: "Her voice was low and soft; but once again, as Janet Fenn withdrew from the room and closed the door after her, the fiendish gleam came into her adorless eyes."

If we hear any more of Janet we will let you know.—Punch.

PRESSED HARD.
Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in a Southern state says: "My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum. I was so pleased with it that, after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal; the whole family liked it so well that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but in a more marked degree in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. The servants desert. Gertrude and Halsey arrive with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped. Gertrude was suspected because of an injured foot. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey were called away by a telegram. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Recovering consciousness, she said something had brushed by her on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. After "seeing a ghost," Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a slip in his pocket bearing the name of "Lucien Wallace." Dr. Walker asked Miss Innes to vacate in favor of Mrs. Armstrong. She refused. A note from Bailey to Gertrude arranging a meeting at night was found.

"Grossmutter," he said. And I saw Mr. Jamieson's eyebrows go up.

"German," he commented. "Well, young man, you don't seem to know much about yourself."

"I've tried it all the week," Mrs. Tate broke in. "The boy knows a word or two of German, but he doesn't know where he lived, or anything about himself."

Mr. Jamieson wrote something on a card and gave it to her.

"Mrs. Tate," he said, "I want you to do something. Here is some money for the telephone call. The instant the boy's mother appears here, call up that number and ask for the person whose name is there. You can run across to the drug store on an errand and do it quietly. Just say, 'The lady has come.'"

"'The lady has come,'" repeated Mrs. Tate. "Very well, sir, and I hope it will be soon. The milk bill alone is almost double what it was."

"How much is the child's board?" I asked.

"Three dollars a week, including his washing."

"Very well," I said. "Now, Mrs. Tate, I am going to pay last week's board and a week in advance. If the mother comes she is to know nothing of this visit—absolutely not a word, and, in return for your silence, you may use this money for—something for your own children."

Her tired, faded face lighted up, and I saw her glance at the little Tates' small feet. Shoes, I divined—the feet of the genteel poor being almost as expensive as their stomachs.

As we went back Mr. Jamieson made only one remark; I think he was laboring under the weight of a great disappointment.

"Is King's a children's outfitting place?" he asked.

"Not especially. It is a general department store."

He was silent after that, but he went to the telephone as soon as we got home, and called up King & Co. in the city.

After a time he got the general manager, and they talked for some time. When Mr. Jamieson hung up the receiver he turned to me.

"The plot thickens," he said with his ready smile. "There are four women named Wallace at King's, none of them married, and none over 20. I think I shall go up to the city to-night. I want to go to the Children's hospital. But before I go, Miss Innes, I wish you would be more frank with me than you have been yet. I want you to show me the revolver you picked up in the tulip bed."

So he had known all along!

"It was a revolver, Mr. Jamieson," I admitted, cornered at last, "but I cannot show it to you. It is not in my possession."

CHAPTER XXII.

A Ladder Out of Place.

At dinner Mr. Jamieson suggested sending a man out in his place for a couple of days, but Halsey was certain there would be nothing more, and felt that he and Alex could manage the situation. The detective went back to town early in the evening, and by nine o'clock Halsey, who had been playing golf—as a man does anything to take his mind away from trouble—was sleeping soundly on the big leather davenport in the living room.

I sat and knitted, pretending not to notice when Gertrude got up and wandered out into the starlight. As soon as I was satisfied that she had gone, however, I went out cautiously. I had no intention of eavesdropping, but I wanted to be certain that it was Jack Bailey she was meeting. Too many things had occurred in which Gertrude was, or appeared to be, involved, to allow anything to be left in question.

I went slowly across the lawn, skirted the hedge to a break not far from the lodge, and found myself on the open road. Perhaps 100 feet to the left the path led across the valley to the Country club, and only a little way off was the foot-bridge over Casanova creek. But just as I was about to turn down the path I heard steps coming toward me, and I shrank into the bushes. It was Gertrude, going back quickly toward the house.

I was surprised. I waited until she had had time to get almost to the house before I started. And then I stepped back again into the shadows. The reason why Gertrude had not kept her tryst was evident. Leaning on the parapet of the bridge in the moonlight, and smoking a pipe, was Alex, the gardener. I could have throttled Liddy for her carelessness in reading the torn note where he could hear. And I could cheerfully have choked Alex to death for his audacity.

But there was no help for it; I turned and followed Gertrude slowly back to the house.

The frequent invasions of the house had effectually prevented any relaxation after dusk. We had redoubled our vigilance as to bolts and window-locks, but, as Mr. Jamieson had suggested, we allowed the door at the east entry to remain as before, locked by the Yale lock only. To provide only one possible entrance for the invader, and to keep a constant guard in the dark at the foot of the circular staircase, seemed to be the only method.

In the absence of the detective, Alex and Halsey arranged to change off, Halsey to be on duty from ten to two, and Alex from two until six. Each man was armed, and, as an additional precaution, the one off duty slept in a room near the head of the circular staircase and kept his door open, to be ready for emergency.

Mary Anne Had Gone White.

These arrangements were carefully kept from the servants, who were only commencing to sleep at night, and who retired, one and all, with barred doors and lamps that burned full until morning.

The house was quiet again Wednesday night. It was almost a week since Louise had encountered some one on the stairs, and it was four days since the discovery of the hole in the trunk-room wall. Arnold Armstrong and his father rested side by side in the Casanova churchyard, and at the Zion African church, on the hill, a new mound marked the last resting-place of poor Thomas.

Louise was with her mother in town, and, beyond a polite note of thanks to me, we had heard nothing from her. Dr. Walker had taken up his practice again, and we saw him now and then flying along the road, always at top speed. The murder of Arnold Armstrong was still unavenged, and I remained firm in the position I had taken—to stay at Sunnyside until the thing was at least partly cleared.

And yet, for all its quiet, it was on Wednesday night that perhaps the boldest attempt was made to enter the house. On Thursday afternoon the laundress sent word she would like to speak to me, and I saw her in my private sitting room, a small room beyond the dressing room.

Mary Anne was embarrassed. She had rolled down her sleeves and tried a white apron around her waist, and she stood making folds in it with fingers that were red and shiny from her soap-suds.

"Well, Mary," I said encouragingly, "what's the matter? Don't dare to tell me the soap is out."

"No, ma'am, Miss Innes." She had a nervous habit of looking first at my one eye and then at the other, her own optics shifting ceaselessly, right eye, left eye, right eye, until I found myself doing the same thing. "No, ma'am. I was askin' did you want the ladder left up the clothes chute?"

"The what?" I screeched, and was sorry the next minute. Seeing her suspicions were verified, Mary Anne had gone white, and stood with her eyes shifting more wildly than ever.

"There's a ladder up the clothes chute, Miss Innes," she said. "It's up that tight I can't move it, and I didn't like to ask for help until I spoke to you."

It was useless to dissemble; Mary Anne knew now as well as I did that the ladder had no business to be there. I did the best I could, however. I put her on the defensive at once.

"Then you didn't lock the laundry last night?"

"I locked it tight, and put the key in the kitchen on its nail."

"Very well, then you forgot a window."

Mary Anne hesitated.

"Yes'm," she said at last. "I thought I locked them all, but there was one open this morning."

I went out of the room and down the hall, followed by Mary Anne. The door into the clothes chute was securely bolted, and when I opened it I saw the evidence of the woman's story. A pruning ladder had been brought from where it had lain against the stable and now stood upright in the clothes shaft, its end resting against the wall between the first and second floors.

I turned to Mary.

"This is due to your carelessness," I said. "If we had all been murdered in our beds it would have been your fault." She shivered. "Now, not a word of this through the house, and send Alex to me."

The effect on Alex was to make him apoplectic with rage, and with it all I fancied there was an element of satisfaction. As I look back, so many things are plain to me that I wonder I could not see at the time. It is all known now, and yet the whole thing was so remarkable that perhaps my stupidity was excusable.

Alex leaned down the chute and examined the ladder carefully.

"It is caught," he said with a grim smile. "The fools, to have left a warning like that! The only trouble is, Miss Innes, they won't be apt to come back for a while."

"I shouldn't regard that in the light of a calamity," I replied.

Until late that evening Halsey and Alex worked at the chute. They forced down the ladder at last, and put a new bolt on the door. As for myself, I sat and wondered if I had a deadly enemy, intent on my destruction.

I was growing more and more nervous. Liddy had given up all pretense at bravery, and slept regularly in my dressing room on the couch, with a prayer-book and a game knife from the kitchen under her pillow, thus preparing for both the natural and the supernatural. That was the way things stood that Thursday night, when I myself took a hand in the struggle.

CHAPTER XXIII.

While the Stables Burned.

About nine o'clock that night Liddy came into the living room and reported that one of the housemaids declared she had seen two men slip around the corner of the stable. Gertrude had been sitting staring in front of her, jumping at every sound. Now she turned on Liddy pettishly.

"I declare, Liddy," she said, "you are a bundle of nerves. What if Eliza did see some men around the stable? It may have been Warner and Alex."

"Warner is in the kitchen, miss,"

Liddy said with dignity. "And if you had come through what I have, you would be a bundle of nerves, too. Miss Rachel, I'd be thankful if you'd give me my month's wages to-morrow. I'll be going to my sister's."

"Very well," I said, to her evident amazement. "I will make out the check. Warner can take you down to the noon train."

Liddy's face was really funny.

"You'll have a nice time at your sister's," I went on. "Five children, hasn't she?"

"That's it," Liddy said, suddenly bursting into tears. "Send me away, after all these years, and your new shawl only half done, and nobody knowin' how to fix the water for your bath."

"It's time I learned to prepare my own bath." I was knitting complacently. But Gertrude got up and put her arms around Liddy's shaking shoulders.

"You are two big babies," she said soothingly. "Neither one of you could get along for an hour without the other. So stop quarreling and be good. Liddy, go right up and lay out aunty's night things. She is going to bed early."

After Liddy had gone I began to think about the men at the stable, and I grew more and more anxious. Halsey was aimlessly knocking the billiard balls around in the billiard room, and I called to him.

"Halsey," I said when he sauntered in, "is there a policeman in Casanova?"

"Constable," he said laconically, "veteran of the war, one arm; in office to conciliate the G. A. R. element. Why?"

"Because I am uneasy tonight." And I told him what Liddy had said. "Is there any one you can think of who could be relied on to watch the outside of the house to-night?"

"We might get Sam Bohannan from the club," he said thoughtfully. "It wouldn't be a bad scheme. He's a smart darky, and with his mouth shut and his shirt-front covered, you couldn't see him a yard off in the dark."

Halsey conferred with Alex, and the result, in an hour, was Sam. His instructions were simple. There had been numerous attempts to break into the house; it was the intention, not to drive intruders away, but to capture them. If Sam saw anything suspicious outside, he was to tap at the east entry, where Alex and Halsey were to alternate in keeping watch through the night.

As before, Halsey watched the east entry from ten until two. He had an eye to comfort, and he kept vigil in a heavy oak chair, very large and deep. We went upstairs rather early, and through the open door Gertrude and I kept up a running fire of conversation. Liddy was brushing my hair, and Gertrude was doing her own, with a long free sweep of her strong, round arms.

"Did you know Mrs. Armstrong and Louise are in the village?" she called.

"No," I replied, startled. "How did you hear it?"

"I met the oldest Stewart girl today, the doctor's daughter, and she told me they had not gone back to town after the funeral. They went directly to that little yellow house next to Dr. Walker's, and are apparently settled there. They took the house furnished for the summer."

"Why, it's a bandbox," I said. "I can't imagine Fanny Armstrong in such a place."

"It's true, nevertheless. Ella Stewart says Mrs. Armstrong has aged terribly, and looks as if she is hardly able to walk."

I lay and thought over some of these things until midnight. The electric lights went out then, fading slowly until there was only a red-hot loop to be seen in the bulbs, and then even that died away and we were embarked on the darkness of another night.

Condemns Sunshine Fad.

A well-known medical man condemns emphatically the form of vanity that leads people on their holidays to do their utmost to get sunburned. "Workers in city offices," he says, "who go into the country or to the seashore for only one or two weeks will deliberately sit about hatless in the blazing sun, so that they may come back looking brown and healthy. As often as not this practice will send them home far less fit for work then they were when they started, for even if one escapes sunstroke the effects of the sun's rays upon the uncovered head are very bad. They will cause dizziness, headache, nausea and loss of appetite and will often upset the digestive system for many days. There are ways of avoiding the more serious effects of the sun, but personally I would advise the city dweller who must have a brown face to stain it with walnut juice and wear a broad-brimmed hat like a sane and sensible individual."

Marvels of Modern Surgery.

Knife operations on the stomach have given a death rate of from one to 20 per cent., against 20 to 40 per cent. ten years ago. Cutting open the upper abdomen, splitting the stomach open and turning it wrong side out, searching for cancers and ulcers, has become a not uncommon operation, often followed by great cures and benefits, and is largely an American specialty.—New York Press.

Ingenious Burglar Alarm.

The simple burglar alarm that has been under test by the police authorities in Dresden and Berlin seems to have resisted all attempts to pass without giving warning. It consists of a curtain or portiere, wired with fine conductors connected at certain places with metal knobs, and when this is drawn across the door or window, or around the safe, the slightest disturbance throws the knobs out of contact and breaks the electric circuit. The alarm may be signalled by a series of bells, lights, or other electric appliances, either on the premises or at the police station. Cutting the material or interfering with it in the slightest degree, has instant effect, and the wiliest burglar is unable to enter the premises having this apparently trifling protection without giving notice.

Making Him Go.

"I don't think I shall go to the poker party to-night."

"That's one of the truest thinks you have done for quite awhile."

"Jinx owes me $5 which he was to pay me at the party to-night, and which I had decided to give to you to go shopping with, but I am really too tired to go out; guess I'll let it go this time."

"That is just like you! If it was anything you wanted to do you would go in a minute, but when it is something for your wife you are too tired! You will go to that poker party to-night or you will hear from me!"

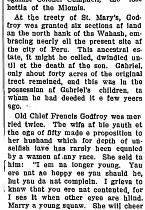
MIAMIS CHIEF DEAD

Broken-Hearted Because of Loss of His Wealth.

Gabriel Godfroy Gave Fortune in Fight for His People—First Wife a Granddaughter of Stolen "White Rose."

Peru, Ind.—Gabriel Godfroy, last chief of the Miamis, died the other day of a broken heart, because he had lost all his wealth, $50,000, through politics. He was urged by his friends to run for road supervisor, and he won the office, though he afterward declared that he did not want it. Godfroy and his people were persuaded to vote. Chief Godfroy bitterly repented of this later, for, when his people exercised that function, they were called upon to pay taxes, from which they had been previously exempt, and this started litigation which continued for years and wiped out the holdings of the chief, who was the banker for his people.

Chief Godfroy, "the Last of the Miamis," he might be called, was seventy-six years old, and was born in Blackford county, just adjoining the county in which he lived all his life and in which he died. His father was Chief Francis Godfroy, of French descent, who as a warrior was, next to Little Turtle, the greatest chief of the Miamis. He ranked close to Tecumseh, the Napoleon of the red race. Little Turtle formed a powerful federation of the Weas, the Shockneys, the Penkekaws and the Pottawatamies, which defeated General Harmer October 19, 1790 and General St. Clair November 4, 1791. At the battle of Tippecanoe, Chief Francis Godfroy gave the signal for the attack of the combined Indian forces and was joint commander with Deaf Men in the drawn battle of Mississinewa against Colonel Campbell, the last battle of the Miamis.



At the treaty of St. Mary's, Godfroy was granted six sections of land on the north bank of the Wabash, embracing nearly all the present site of the city of Peru. This ancestral estate, it might be called, dwindled until at the death of the son, Gabriel, only about forty acres of the original tract remained, and this was in the possession of Gabriel's children, to whom he had deeded it a few years ago.

Old Chief Francis Godfroy was married twice. The wife of his youth at the age of fifty made a proposition to her husband which for depth of unselfish love has rarely been equaled by a woman of any race. She said to him: "I am no longer young. You are not as happy as you should be, but you do not complain. I grieve to know that you are not contented, for I see it when other eyes are blind. Marry a young squaw. She will cheer and brighten your life. I'll not complain or sulk. I'll be your slave and a servant to her and her children." He declined, but his wife pleaded with him until he finally granted her wish.

When his father died, in a house which is part of the present home of the Godfroy family, and was buried just across the road, Gabriel became chief. He was married three times. His first wife was a granddaughter of Frances Slocum, who was stolen by the Indians when she was six years old.

Frances Slocum was stolen in 1776 from her home near Wilkesbarre, Pa., by the Delaware Indians. She was passed to the Miamis and became known as the "White Rose of the Miamis." Her brothers never gave up the search for her. Finally, in 1837, she was located in Miami county as a member of the Indian tribe, and her brothers journeyed from Pennsylvania to take her home. When the object of their visit was explained, she said she had lived so long among the Indians, and they had treated her so well, that she would not desert them. Her brothers went home brokenhearted. Godfroy's third wife is still living.

Twenty years ago Chief Godfroy had a fine farm of about a hundred acres and was worth about $50,000. He was called on scores of times to pay fines against Indians. For seven years he paid the expense and stood the worry of a legal battle which the county commissioners brought to compel him and others of his tribe to pay taxes on their lands. They claimed the lands to be exempt because of the treaties by which they were deeded to them by the government. When his fortune had disappeared the suit was compromised, and his people should be exempt for ten years.

When this decision was announced, Chief Godfroy advanced to the bench and, in a voice trembling with emotion, told his story of wrongs. The aged chief told how the poor Indians had again been crushed and humiliated by the cruel "pale face;" how they had lost their lands and their rights. When he had finished he strode from the courtroom with all the dignity becoming a great chief, but from that moment until he died he seemed oppressed with grief. He died without any property. The "Last of the Miamis" has gone to the "Happy Hunting Grounds."

Red Cross Christmas Seals.

Arrangements for the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals for 1910 have been announced by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the American Red Cross. "A Million for Tuberculosis" will be the slogan of the 1910 campaign. Two features of the sale this year are unique and will bring considerable capital to the tuberculosis fighters. The American National Red Cross is to issue the stamps as in former years, but this organization will work in close co-operation with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which body will share in the proceeds of the sales. The charge to local associations for the use of the national stamps has been reduced also from 20 per cent. to 12½ per cent., which will mean at least $50,000 more for tuberculosis work in all parts of the United States. The stamps are to be designated as "Red Cross Seals" this year and are to be placed on the back of letters instead of on the front.

The Enemies.

Apropos of the enmity, now happily buried, that used to exist between Minneapolis and St. Paul, Senator Clapp said at a dinner in the former city:

"I remember an address on careless building that I once heard in Minneapolis.

"'Why,' said the speaker in the course of this address, 'one inhabitant of St. Paul is killed by accident in the streets every 48 hours.'

"A bitter voice from the rear of the hall interrupted:

"'Well, it ain't enough,' it said."

Speaking of Fires.

Roy Bone, a brother of United States District Attorney Harry Bone, several years ago was a reporter on the Wichita Beacon. In going to a fire one of the members of the fire department was thrown from a hose cart and killed. Bone wrote a head, with this as the first deck: "Gone to His Last Fire."

The piece got into the paper and Bone was promptly "fired."—Kansas City Journal.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

MONEY MADE IN TWO WAYS.

"That palmist will tell you when you are going to die."

"And then run and tell the undertaker, I suppose, and get a commission on the business."

Shrewd Scheme Stopped Run.

Many years ago, in consequence of a commercial panic, there was a severe run on a bank in South Wales, and the small farmers jostled each other in crowds to draw out their money. Things were rapidly going from bad to worse, when the bank manager, in a fit of desperation, suddenly bethought him of an expedient. By his directions a clerk, having heated some sovereigns in a frying-pan, paid them over the counter to an anxious applicant. "Why, they're quite hot!" said the latter as he took them up. "Of course," was the reply; "what else could you expect? They are only just out of the mold. We are coining them by hundreds as fast as we can." "Coining them!" thought the simple agriculturists; "then there is no fear of the money running short!" With this their confidence revived, the panic abated, and the bank was enabled to weather the storm.

Not Impregnable.

Horace Avory, K. C., just appointed a judge, is one of the mordant wits of the British bar. One day, cross-examining a recalcitrant witness, he asked:

"What are you?"

"A retired gentleman," proudly asserted the ex-cheesemonger.

"Well," snarled Avery, "when you achieved the position of gentleman, why did you retire from it?"

Misdirected Energy.

"How did the street car company come to fire that old conductor? I thought he had a pull?"

"He did; but he didn't use it on the cash register."—Christian Advocate.

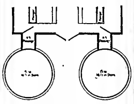
SILOS OF REINFORCED HOLLOW CLAY BLOCKS

Have Proven Extremely Satisfactory and Present Pleasing Appearance of Solidity, Durability and Permanency.

The use of hollow clay building blocks properly reinforced for silo construction have proven extremely satisfactory in every particular, and after extensive and thorough investigation and the building and testing of numerous silos, the agricultural engineering department of the Iowa experiment station heartily recommend their use.

The fundamental principle involved in preservation of silage is the retention of moisture within the silage and the exclusion of air. For this reason, the silo wall must be non-porous. Moisture must be prevented from passing out and air from passing in.



Silos and Dairy Barn.

Hard burned hollow clay building blocks will not absorb a large amount of water. Moisture is not readily transferred through a wall of such material. It is recommended that only blocks which have a low absorption be used for silo construction. Blocks of this kind are more durable, and a silo built of them will preserve silage better.

After due consideration to all other points of merit to be found in silos, the most desirable silo is the one that is the most durable and will give the longest term of service. The durability of a silo depends, first upon its strength, and second, the durability of the material used in its construction.

To be durable, any material must resist the action of the weather, the constant wetting and drying, freezing and thawing in the winter season, and any disintegrating action which may be due to the silage itself. Some material will disintegrate with age, and other materials suffer from rapid decay when subject to the warm, moist conditions which exist in the silo.

The walls of the Iowa silo are constructed of hollow, vitrified clay building blocks which, as far as weather resistance is concerned, are as durable as any building material which can be obtained.

Form for Making Foundation.

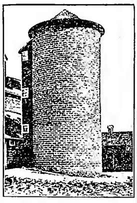
The roof of the Iowa silo, like the walls, is made of durable material. A cheaper roof may be used if desired, but it is strongly advised that the concrete roof be used where possible.

One common mistake met with in silo construction is that the door frame is made of material which will soon decay or rust and have to be replaced. The door frame of the Iowa silo is made of reinforced concrete which, when properly constructed, should be as durable as the walls themselves.

The materials used in the Iowa silo will resist decaying disintegration, the action of frost, and any implied or real action of the acidity of the silage. Even the steel which is placed in the mortar joints and concrete door frame as reinforcement, is thoroughly protected from rust. So carefully has the matter of durability been considered in the design of the Iowa silo that it would be difficult to estimate its life. When carefully built it ought to last for several generations.

The doors of the Iowa silo are designed to be made of wood. They will decay and must be replaced after several years. The convenience and low cost of the wooden doors, which may be easily replaced, justifies their use.

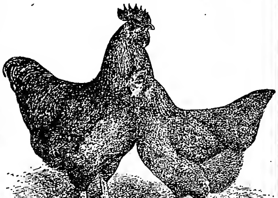
The Iowa silo when properly constructed is practically free from any expense for repair and maintenance. The only possible expense may be the occasional washing of the inside of the walls at intervals of not less than five years, with a cement wash and the replacement of the doors after they have become rotten from use.



Iowa Silo.

An ideal silo must have rigid walls. It must be strong enough to resist the bursting pressure of the silage. This acts outward in all directions as the silage settles. The friction of the silage against the wall, and the weight of the wall produce a crushing action which is great near the bottom of the silo. A silo when empty should be heavy enough to stand against heavy winds. The inside of a silo wall should be reasonably smooth to permit the silage to settle freely. If the wall is not smooth or if there are shoulders or offsets on the inside surface air pockets will be formed and a considerable loss of silage will result.

SUSSEX BREEDS OF POULTRY



The Kent, Surrey and Sussex breeds of fowls in England occupy much the same relation to the industry of that country that the Rhode Island Reds did with us several years ago before the breed was perfected. In many respects they seem all closely allied to the Dorking, which at one time must have been the parent stock from which they have differentiated. There seems to be a disposition among British fanciers to improve the Sussex breed of fowls, of which there are four varieties. The Red and Brown, Light and Speckled or Splashed. Of these the first seems to be growing in favor. In type, color of plumage and economic values it is not unlike our Rhode Island Reds. They are rated as good all-purpose birds, the hens laying a goodly number of medium-sized eggs; the chicks are hardy and easy to grow. Color qualifications for exhibition purposes are much the same as in the American Standard for Rhode Island Reds. The illustration is not without suggestiveness in form to our two popular American breeds.

Eggs in Cold Storage.

A daily paper states that 45,000,000 eggs have been shipped into Newark, N. J., since April 1, and placed in cold storage by the warehousemen, to remain there until the high prices of last winter are duplicated. The eggs come from the western states. They were purchased at an average of 24 cents per dozen, says Kansas Farmer. Two cents per dozen is added to cover insurance, storage costs, etc., which brings the total cost to 26 cents a dozen. If the eggs can be retailed in New York next winter at 45 cents a dozen, which price they brought last winter, there will be a profit of 19 cents a dozen, or a total of something over $700,000. When it is considered that this quantity is from but one of the large cities of the country the total amount of eggs in cold storage must be tremendous.

Canadian Dairy Products.

According to testimony recently given before a committee of the Canadian parliament, the annual value of the milk and milk products of the Dominion are as follows: Butter and cheese, factory made, $36,000,000; dairy butter, $22,000,000; condensed milk, $1,000,000; milk for home consumption, $35,000,000. Total, $94,000,000. Since 1903 there has been a large decrease in the exportation of dairy products, amounting to nearly $2,000,000 in cheese and over $6,000,000 in butter, due mostly to the rapid increase of population and a greater home consumption, the latter being estimated at $9,000,000 annually.

Sheep on the Farm.

Every farm should keep a flock of sheep, for every farm has a place for sheep which nothing else can fill. The flock may be a small one. That depends on conditions; but the flock should be amply sufficient to supply the family with mutton.

A Good Fleece.

Fleece should possess the properties of evenness and uniformity; this refers to covering density and quality. A good fleece should be as nearly uniform in all parts as practicable.

PLACE WHERE ZOLA RESTS

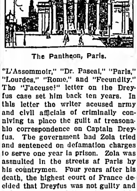
Paris.—Years of effort made Emile Zola a great writer and earned for him the prospective honor of a grave in the Pantheon, the Westminster abbey of France. One little letter took him that privilege. Then a court decision made it possible ten years after the letter was written for his body to rest with France's immortal ones under the legend on the Pantheon's dome: "To Great Men, the Grateful Fatherland."

Zola died in 1902 from accidental suffocation by coal gas escaping from a patent heater. Literary glory came to Zola through his great works, "La Sehaelo," "La Fortune de Rougon," "L'Assommoir," "Dr. Pascal," "Paris," "Lourdes," "Rome," and "Fecundity." The "J'accuse!" letter on the Dreyfus case set him back ten years. In this letter the writer accused army and civil officials of criminally conniving to place the guilt of treasonable correspondence on Captain Dreyfus. The government had Zola tried and sentenced on defamation charges to serve one year in prison. Zola was assaulted in the streets of Paris by his countrymen. Four years after his death, the highest court of France decided that Dreyfus was not guilty and Zolas "J'accuse!" letter, when read in the courtroom by Dreyfus's lawyer, was applauded and cheered. So Zola, dead, has received honors which Zola, living, was refused.



The Pantheon, Paris.

The Pantheon is the terrestrial Valhalla of the French. It is a great cross-shaped basilica, with a dome nearly 300 feet high. It stands on a hill on the Latin quarter side of the Seine on the site of a Christian church built 1,200 years ago. As most living Frenchmen crave the Cross of the Legion of Honor or admission to the French academy, so most Frenchmen long for that greatness which demands a burial in the Pantheon. And Zola has it.

WIRELESS MESSAGES ANCIENT

Natives of Africa Communicate Over a Distance of Seven Miles by a Code of Drum Signals.

Johannesburg, La.—Many strange tribes dwell in the interior of Africa and queer indeed are some of their ways. One tribe, the Batetela, has long used a method of sending communications between its several villages that is unique and well worth consideration. A wooden drum is used and the "wireless" message can be picked up, or heard, seven miles away. It is amazing. The drum used by the Batetela for sending messages in this manner is first cut out from one large solid piece of hard wood. Its shape, as may be seen in the illustration, is quite peculiar and must require considerable skill in the fashioning, when one considers the lack of proper tools among these tribes. Still more difficult is the finishing of the drum's interior, for it has to be hollowed out and all the work is done through the long narrow opening which shows at the top. The shape inside follows that outside and much patience and care are required in attaining that perfection necessary to success in the completed instrument. The least check or split in the wooden walls of this instrument would seriously impair if it did not destroy its usefulness.

Drum Signaling in Africa.

The sticks used in beating this peculiar drum have at their ends a knob of rubber. To send a message the beater will ascend a hill in the evening when the air is still and affords least resistance to the outward speeding sound waves from his drum. The sound created is very rough when near by. Three distinct sounds or notes can be produced from each side of this drum, according to where it is beaten. These are used to form a syllabic alphabet, which permits the natives to transmit messages, no matter how complicated they may be. Not unlike the tones of some bell, then, the Africa drum sends its weird notes ringing through the tropical forests, and members of the tribe in other villages, even as far away as seven miles, can hear and understand the message on a still night.

Snake Scares Women.

Butler, Pa.—A live house snake, three feet long, without stamp or postmark, crawled from a mail sack the other night when Mrs. Winifred Turk, postmistress of Hilliard, opened the sack. Mrs. Turk and Miss Mary Smith, her assistant, fled in terror, and so did the snake.

PROMISED A LIVELY TIME

Mark Twain's Outline of Editorial Policy He Had Made Up His Mind to Adopt.

Mark Twain took the editorial chair on the Buffalo Express in August, 1869, and this is the paragraph in which he made the readers acquainted with his new responsibility: "I only wish to assure parties having a friendly interest in the prosperity of this journal that I am not going to hurt the paper deliberately and intentionally at any time. I am not going to introduce any startling reform or in any way attempt to make trouble. I am simply going to do my plain, unpretending duty—when I cannot get out of it. I shall work diligently and honestly and faithfully at all times and upon all occasions—when privation and want shall compel me to do so. In writing I shall confine myself to the truth, except when it is attended with inconvenience. I shall witheringly rebuke all forms of crime and misconduct, except when committed by the party inhabiting my own vest. I shall not make use of slang or vulgarity upon any occasion or in any circumstances and shall never use profanity except in discussing house rent and taxes. Indeed, upon second thought, I will not even then, for it is inelegant, un-Christian and degrading. I shall not often meddle with politics, because we have a political editor who is already excellent and only needs a term in the penitentiary to be perfect. I shall not write any poetry unless I conceive a spite against the subscribers."

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WELL?

The kidney secretions tell if disease is lurking in the system. Too frequent or scanty urination, discolored urine, lack of control at night, indicate that the kidneys are disordered. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

English in London.

Senator Depew, on the deck of the Lusitania, talked about "English as she is spoken in London."

"It is very difficult to understand that London English," he said. "I know a man who had lodgings all July in Bloomsbury, near the British museum.

"On his return from the museum one afternoon, my friend said to his landlady:

"'Can I have a cup of tea, if you please?'

"'Certainly, sir; at once,' the landlady replied. 'The kettle 'as been bi'lin' for 'oure.'

"'But—er—I prefer freshly boiled water, if you don't mind,' stammered my friend.

"The landlady reddened with anger.

"'Look 'ere,' she said, 'if I 'ad meant wot you mean I'd 'ave said h-oure.'"

TINY BABY'S PITIFUL CASE

"Our baby when two months old was suffering with terrible eczema from head to foot, all over her body. The baby looked just like a skinned rabbit. We were unable to put clothes on her. At first it seemed to be a few mattered pimples. They would break the skin and peel off leaving the underneath skin red as though it were scalds. Then a few more pimples would appear and spread all over the body, leaving the baby all raw without skin from head to foot. On top of her head there appeared a heavy scab a quarter of an inch thick. It was awful to see so small a baby look as she did. Imagine! The doctor was afraid to put his hands to the child. We tried several doctors' remedies but all failed.
